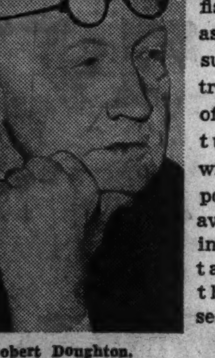
U. S. SALES TAX THREAT ADDS TO BUDGET WORRY

Leaders Demanding Early Balancing.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 24.—[Special.]—Democratic leaders in congress served notice on their colleagues today that unless the federal budget can be balanced in the next fiscal year as the result of retrenchment of expenditures it will be impossible to avoid a stiff increase in taxes at the next session.



Robert Doughton.

The balancing of the budget within the next year is absolutely imperative, they asserted, if the credit of the government is to be maintained untarnished and a runaway inflation averted.

May Extend Income Levies.

The tax program suggested by the leaders, if budget balancing by retrenchment is not realized, is double barreled:

1. A national sales tax to be collected on manufactured products at the source.

2. Extension of the federal income tax to several millions of persons who pay no income taxes under the existing law.

Representatives Robert L. Doughton [D., N. C.], chairman of the house ways and means committee; Lindsay C. Warren [D., N. C.], chairman of the accounts committee of the house, and John J. Cochran [D., Missouri], chairman of the house committee on executive expenditures, declared it their opinion that an extension of the income tax to lower incomes than are now taxed would not produce sufficient revenue and that resort to a sales tax would become necessary. Congressman Doughton is an inveterate opponent of a sales tax, but admits it looms large as the likeliest revenue producer if new taxation must be invoked.

Urges Half Billion Cut.

In the immediate future the budget balancing controversy will revolve around the movement led by Senator James F. Byrnes [D., S. C.] to reduce the federal expenditure on relief from 1½ billion dollars, as recommended by President Roosevelt, to one billion and to slash all appropriations horizontally 10 per cent.

The Democratic party is split wide open on the budget balancing and economy questions, with the conservative wing demanding more radical retrenchment than the President has suggested and taking sharp issue with Mr. Roosevelt on the candor of his budget statements.

The debate in congress is expected to air the relief policies and administration pretty thoroughly. It will be demonstrated that although the federal government has expended 10 billions and local governments about 3 billions on relief in the last four years very little is actually known concerning the extent of unemployment.

Estimate 9 Million Jobless.

The common estimate of the number of jobless persons is about 9 million at present. There are nearly 3 million on federal and about 1½ million on local relief. That would indicate that there are about 4½ million unemployed who are able to live without relief.

Contributions by the several states to the cost of relief range all the way from 6 to 30 per cent of the total for the state. It costs the taxpayers $25 a month to maintain a person on local relief but $80 a month to maintain one on federal relief. The former is direct relief the administration of which accounts for 15 per cent of the cost. In the case of federal work relief, however, the overhead item is 39 per cent. In the British relief system the overhead is 10 per cent.

Although state and local relief rolls were reduced 34 per cent in the first six months of 1936 there never has been a corresponding reduction of federal relief rolls. The normal

Doctor Reverses Denhardt Findings

ALTERS OPINION ABOUT POWDER BURNS ON BODY

Decides Marks Made in Embalming.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

New Castle, Ky., April 24.—[Special.]—At adjournment late this afternoon of the murder trial of Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt, the commonwealth had just begun its proof that Mrs. Verna Garr Taylor, the general's fiancée, was shot and killed at a distance of several feet rather than with a revolver held in her own hands as the defendant has explained the tragedy of Nov. 6, last.

The trial was halted a few minutes before adjournment by a black hail storm that beat a machine gun tattoo against the tall windows and made all other sounds inaudible. Earlier in the gusty spring day, the robins had been singing through the open windows, where the crowd was held by stories from the witness stand, the sight of the big army revolver with which Mrs. Taylor was killed and the clothes that were taken from her body after she was found dead at the end of a day's automobile ride to Louisville with Gen. Denhardt.

No Powder Marks Found.

Dr. H. B. Blayden, autopsy physician, who examined the body of the 140 pound widow on Nov. 13, after the state had ordered exhumation, testified that there was nothing that he could say was powder marks on the body, unless it was a discoloration around the entrance wound of the bullet. In an early report on this case, he had said that he had observed carbon, which would indicate the gun was held close to the body.

Today he said he was mistaken; that he had learned more about the effects of the embalming fluid that had been used. He had sent samples of the skin for microscopical examination in Louisville, he said, and the report will be a feature at the resumption of the trial Monday.

The rest of the commonwealth's case, which is expected to rest Wednesday, will be devoted to expert testimony on blood reactions and tests for powder and reactions on the hands of Mrs. Taylor and those of the general.

Denhardt Explains Blood.

What was described as blood on the overcoat of Denhardt, some twenty or more spots running from the lapel down to the inside skirt of the coat, added a new mystery to the case today. The location of these spots would hardly indicate that they could result if the general had shot his sweetheart, which he has most strongly denied. Little blood came from her wound, it was shown. She died almost instantaneously, after having planted her little heels firmly in the side of the road several times.

The marks of the heels, as if she had been backing up at the time, were described by two witnesses. Denhardt has maintained that the blood marks came from a cut on his face, which dripped on his coat as he drove the car.

The case at the end of its fifth day of trial gives no clear picture of what happened the night of Nov. 6.

The most convincing evidence that the state has put forward is that

SENATE COMMITTEE MAY VOTE AGAINST COURT PACKING PLAN

Washington, D. C., April 24.—[Special.]—The possibility that President Roosevelt's bill for reorganization of the federal courts might reach the senate floor with a recommendation from its judiciary committee that it be defeated, was admitted today by Henry Ashurst, chairman of the committee.

"An unfavorable report would in no sense be a fatal blow," he said. "Everybody knew from the start that the committee was not for this bill."

However, he added, the administration's supporters are relying on what he called "the sober second judgment" of the country to rally support in favor of the plan, and he contended that this support was growing every day. If the matter could be submitted to a plebiscite, Mr. Ashurst said, it would be adopted by all but six states in the Union. He predicted that New York state would approve it by 1,000,000 votes and that Pennsylvania also would favor it. He seemed to number the New England states as those which would oppose the bill.

Work on Farm or Starve, Is Nazi Edict to Jobless

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, April 24.—German unemployed who are physically fit must accept work on farms or get along without further public support. The labor offices have been instructed to divert all possible hands to the farmers, thus fulfilling the recent pledge given by Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, commissar of the four year plan for self-sufficiency, that farmers will get all the aid they need to plant and harvest their crops.

This Indiana Lad Seems to Have Something Here

Petersburg, Ind., April 24.—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lashbrook don't know what to do with the family cat. Mrs. Lashbrook attempted to paddle their 3 year old youngster. The cat clawed her about the legs until she stopped. Mrs. Lashbrook told her husband, who then tried to reprimand the child—and was also attacked by the cat.

New York, April 24.—(AP)—A Park avenue hostess who planned "the most unusual and amusing" cocktail party ever held in New York died of asphyxiation by illuminating gas tonight in the kitchen of her swanky apartment as the guests—invited by chain letters—arrived in the lobby below.

The hostess, Mrs. Helen Mont, 25, actress and bride of a month, failed to answer the bell when the first of her 100 guests arrived, and the apartment superintendent unlocked the door. Guided by the odor of gas, he walked past tables, already set for the cocktail party, to the kitchen.

Body Partly Clad.

There he found Mrs. Mont, unconscious, a gas tube from the stove in her mouth. She was clad only in a slip, silk stockings and shoes. As an emergency squad worked to revive her, and finally pronounced her dead, the party guests waited in the apartment lobby.

Police Detective Frank McFarland, who said he was told Mrs. Mont had a spat over plans for her party with her husband, James Mont, prominent interior decorator, listed her death as suicide.

Mont was in his West 57th street studio, just off Fifth avenue, when his wife's body was found.

Mrs. Mont had called her cocktail party "a mystery cocktail party" and warned her guests "not to talk about sending or receiving this letter."

The Chain Letter Invitation.

Here is an invitation she sent to one friend:

"Dear Grace:

"You are cordially invited to a 'mystery cocktail party' in honor of someone you know. It will be the most unusual and amusing one ever held in New York. Make two copies of this letter immediately and mail them to two friends.

"Be sure that your friends will not recognize your handwriting and that they are the type that will pass the letter on and thus keep the chain going. Please do not mail any letters after April 22. Sign your initials below those of others, and above all, do not talk about sending or receiving this letter.

"This invitation is good only for you and a single friend. Have it with you and present it for admission on Saturday, April 24, 1937, 5 p. m., at 480 Park avenue.

"P. S. In case you should be unable to attend, please do not end the chain."

Widely Known on Radio.

Known on the stage as Helen Kim, Mrs. Mont appeared in "Roar China," a Broadway play of about six years ago—and "The Gilded Princess." She was widely known also as a radio entertainer, having had parts in various chain productions.

The Daily News said Mrs. Mont was a graduate of the University of Southern California. While a student there, the News said, she was the lone witness to the suicide of Robert Pew, writer and poet. Lifting a glass of poison, said the News, Pew drank a toast of death to her, dying at her feet.

CHICAGO MOVES CLOCK AHEAD; STARTS SAVING ITS SUMMER SUNSHINE

Daylight saving time became effective in the Chicago area at 2 o'clock this morning, giving the first of 154 extra hours of summer sunshine today. While 2 a. m. was the official hour for changing from central standard time by setting the clock one hour ahead, most householders, as a matter of convenience, moved up the hands when they retired last night.

Those who neglected to make the change are likely to get to church today at the end of the services—or will miss the golf special. Daylight time will continue until Sept. 26.

All official business in the city is to be conducted on the daylight basis. Suburban trains will operate their schedules on the new time but through trains and airplane routes will continue to run on standard time.

At Cathedral 8000, the telephone company exchange where the time is announced, operators expect an increase in the volume of calls. There are more than 20,000 calls a day to this number, and about 50,000 are anticipated today.

Plot Against Hitler Linked to U. S. Youth

BERLIN, April 24.—(AP)—Helmuth Hirsch, condemned Jewish youth for whom United States consular authorities have interceded, appeared resigned tonight to die for what he considered a "cause"—a reported plan to assassinate a high German, possibly Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler.

Hirsch, who is 21 years old and whose status is that of a United States citizen because his grandfather was a naturalized American, talked in Ploetzensee prison today with United States Consul Raymond H. Geist. He told the American official he had no hope of escaping the death penalty, despite an appeal for clemency to German authorities by his attorney.

The German prosecutor declined to divulge the exact nature of Hirsch's alleged offense, for which he was arrested on Dec. 20, 1936. Informed sources, however, said the death sentence had been pronounced on charges he intended to use explosives in an attempt to assassinate a high government official, presumably Hitler.

Goering's Warning Recalled.

These sources also expressed belief that a recent speech by Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Hitler's right hand man, warning against terroristic activities, pointed to Hirsch.

Goering on March 16 warned those who "believe they can overpower Germany by murder or cowardly assassinations will burn to cinders!"

Hitler has not yet considered Hirsch's clemency plea.

The United States consul entered the case after it was learned Hirsch held American citizenship. He acted on instructions from Washington, D. C., where Secretary of State Cordell Hull said today that everything humanly possible would be done to save Hirsch's life.

Grandfather Naturalized.

The youth's grandfather, Solomon Hirsch, was naturalized in New York April 4, 1873. This gave the youth's father, Siegfried, born in Winterburg, Czechoslovakia, and himself, born at Stuttgart, Germany, Jan. 27, 1916, status as American citizens.

The youth's father, who resided in the United States from 1902 to 1910, went to Alsace and later to Germany, and now is in Prague, Czechoslovakia.

Father Pins Hope on U. S.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, April 24.—(AP)—Siegfried Hirsch, father of the student who is under death sentence in Germany, pinned hopes for his son's life today on American intervention. He said he was certain his son never had schemed at assassination of any German. The elder Hirsch, a gray haired merchant, lives in a villa in a fashionable Prague suburb with his daughter, Kaethe.

CHARGES LIBEL IN BOOK; ORDERS AGENTS TO SUE

Author's Attack on Americans Bared.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 24.—With solicitors for the duke of Windsor, former King Edward VIII. of Great Britain, demanding its withdrawal, "Coronation Commentary," today became London's best seller. Britons flocked to bookstores and bought up all the copies of this new book, which charges Edward with "muddling, fuddling, and meddling." As book sellers sought to renew their supplies the publishers informed them that no more of the current edition would be printed.

Geoffrey Dennis.

The book, which treats Edward kindly in all but one chapter, is marked for its bitter attack on London's "American set." Its comments on Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, the ex-king's fiancée, are more than pungent in spots, and the ex-king is reported here to consider these as slurs at her and the chief cause for his determination to force suppression of the book.

Agent Demands Apology.

A. G. Allen, one of the duke's solicitors, has demanded that the publishers, William Heinemann, Ltd., withdraw the book and publish a suitable apology. The ultimatum will expire Monday morning, the solicitors said, and Allen indicated that an injunction would be sought Monday if the demands were not met.

"We are satisfied the duke has been libeled in this book," a spokesman said.

The publishers did not indicate whether they intended to comply with an apology and to withdraw the book, or to print an altered edition.

"Coronation Commentary" was written by Geoffrey Dennis, a schoolmate of Edward at Oxford. Dennis now is editor and chief of the documents service for the league of nations in Geneva and is slated to represent the secretary-general of the league at education conferences in Australia and New Zealand.

Deals with Personalities.

He dealt with the persons, the rumors, the issues, and the drama of Edward's abdication. Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, Mrs. Simpson, Americans—"Trans-Atlantic wisecrackers"—and American newspapers drew his comment.

"He chose to go," Dennis said of Edward.

"Through the confusion of all the theories, guesses, lies, libels, doubts, sympathies, side issues, that looks to be the main thread, not disputed; amid the fancies, the one unalloyed Fact.

"It is, however interesting, strictly irrelevant that those who would have had the king do as he desired to do may have formed a very large minority of his subjects. That they may even—there are no means of knowing, one way or the other—have been the majority. That they may even also, by a majority of standards, have been right.

Cites Unanimity of Foes.

"This only is relevant: that the people on the other side, those who were against the king's project [marriage to Mrs. Simpson]—the almost unanimity of the responsible people, the decisive people and the rulers in both England and the dominions, with the evident bulk of the middle class and, at the least large numbers of the poorer classes also, the ruled—together constituted a body of opinion so formidable that it could in any circumstances have prevented, as so very easily it did prevent, the realization of the project. Against that mighty opposition it was not possible for him to carry his point.

"I think the opponents had the advantage, too, that they felt more strongly against the project than the king's supporters did in its favor. The latter were merely in favor of the king's right to do as he wanted;

FUROR OVER BOOK

[Acme Photo.]

Mrs. Wallis Simpson, fiancee of former British king, who, in his opinion, is slurred in "Coronation Commentary," a new book which has become a best seller in London.

scarcely ever in favor of his plan for its own sake. Which, on much stronger ground, was what the opponents opposed."

Dennis questioned whether Prime Minister Baldwin found his rôle as an opponent of the king earlier because of "personal or political or puritanical disapproval of the other."

"Preferred Masses to Classes."

He introduced the question of whether, "If the king had been a safer national government king—had not been impatient with the cabinet's policy, lack of policy, for the distressed areas and unemployment and poverty, had not been against the means test and known to be, and generally a nasty little bolshie [or Fascist, when that came handier] who privately preferred the masses to the classes . . . the latter might not have made efforts that would have succeeded somehow to forestall and prevent what befell."

"No one, yet—or perhaps ever—can answer these questions," he said. Commenting that "truth is complicated, truth is elusive," he continued:

"Impute however the worst to 'Baldwin and the bishops.' The worst that on the evidence, not prejudice, seems highly likely is that they did not make the same allowances and efforts as they would have for a king they had liked better, personally and politically; second, that once battle was joined they used every art [the means and moment of publicity, and so forth] swiftly to secure victory for their point of view—the point of view, they believed, of the country's history and Empire's safety—and discreetly to discredit a king who, they believed, was bringing his great office and the state into mortal danger."

"Did Not Frame Him."

"Even so: they did not provoke," Dennis wrote, "the great uprising of opinion which echoed their own 'thumbs down!' and declared Edward's desire undesirable.

"Still less did they 'frame' him into desiring it."

Of Edward and Mrs. Simpson, Dennis offered these paragraphs:

"There are several theories. That Edward's resolution to marry was his own. Or her own."

"That on the contrary he was quite content with the position as it was until others put into his head, insinuated to him [weak, chivalrous, suggestionable] that he ought to marry her. That those others were of the favorite's own set, the fast night club Americans and half and pseudo Americans, who pushed her on, and him on, in the cause of their own ascension.

"A Serious Accusation."

"That those Others—the 'Americans' unconsciously working with them, to be dished as usual in the end by the artfuller English—were agents provocateurs of the aristocrats and reactionaries. 'As mistress—if she is one—we can't do so very much against her, or him; but let us get into his obstinate little head that it is his duty to marry her and then we have him; fixed, finished.'"

"It is a serious accusation."

Dennis spoke of the whispers that "there is more to it than old Baldwin chooses to say. He would never be taking so strong a line unless there were other things . . ."

And the author concluded: "Unfortunately there were."

Author Lists the "Things."

"Things done and said in his infatuation; his lover's prodigality; his shrill King's rage against those who denied her to him," Dennis said of Edward. "In moments of recourse to other sources of courage as well, in hours of erratic, or erotic, obstinacy. Things left undone, in his infatuation. Duty neglected. Papers held up. Papers curiously, neo-Kaiserishly, annotated. The affair of the Egyptian Treaty. No sound understanding of the technique, or limitations or necessary dignity of the office. Irregular hours, irregular habits. Muddling, fuddling, meddling. . . ."

Specific incidents in Edward's work as king were recalled. He referred to the time Edward "deputed Duke and Duchess to open the Infirmary and carry out all his program; then himself drove from Balmoral into the city, not to do his duty but to meet a band of gay Transatlantics at the station."

Dennis wrote that "Contempt of the necessary dignity of his office meant evasion of certain excesses of Court etiquette. Irregular hours meant keeping the Right Honorable Task in Office waiting for five minutes. Meddling meant trying to help the unfortunate.

Says "They Hated Him."

"They hated, him without a doubt. His marriage plans was their pretext perfect.

"Whether or no they invented, Lord how they welcomed her!

"A hunted creature he had always been; an Orphan, face and soul, forever. And now they had gotten him in a corner, trapped.

"Puzzled, dimly, he yet had managed to feel, through childhood, princehood, now brief kinghood, all the things that he had to be, the strange things 'they' [we] wanted and pretended him to be: ruler, symbol, ideal, idol, good sort, priest, good sport, English gentleman, tailor's block, commercial traveler, hero, son and lover, god. . . . He had played each part to the best of his ability and high courage, to the wide limits of his powers of physical and moral endurance.

"Nervous endurance was the rub. To go on, he had to have ever more stimulus, more freedom from godhead [the bores, the bowing], more contrast."

"Had No Friends."

The book said Edward "had no friends. He had no intellectual or spiritual resources. Rest he was incapable of. Violent exercises was, after his thirties, not stimulus enough." And then it continued:

"At last he had found it, an elixir of courage and continuance—an ever new transfusion of vitality—in the company and adoration of a set of fast trans-Atlantic wisecrackers.

"He may have found there, among them, in the end, something better than a drug; deserving another, diviner, name.

"Whichsoever it was, healing medicine or hopeless stimulant, after a while he could not keep going and play the part without a dose, an injection, every day or two; then every few hours."

Doubts King Was Happy.

Dennis quoted the ex-king, perhaps in his own language:

"'Before, 90 per cent of the time I was unhappy, 10 per cent happy. Now I am 10 per cent unhappy, 90 per cent happy.'"

And then he asked whether Edward was really happy.

"Pictures did not show it," he answered. "That last year or two the retarded adolescent face, the tragic eyes, did not reveal it. The loveliness almost gone, the look of a debauched lost boy came over it instead; with an increase, if possible, of the misery. I don't know.

"Anyway, he had found or believed he had found the means [beauty or poison] of strength for his task; the means he must forever have by him if he were to go on performing his great task. So he, the KING-EMPEROR, lord of a fourth of the world, humbly asked for the means to be made his, honorably and perpetually available.

"They said No.

"It was a hard, cruel blow in the face.

Blames It on Wisecracker.

"Unexpected, apparently. The wisecrackers had told him he could bring it off. These were the only people he talked to intimately; aliens who knew even less than they cared of the English and their morality and history, their pride and prejudice.

"With all his social sympathies, and personal sympathy and flair, he was not much more in touch with his people's soberer ideals, or their deep traditional side, than the aliens were. His continual touring had prevented his establishing a steady contact with steady opinion. Apparently he himself thought he would bring it off."

Dennis had much to say of Edward's American friends. But he declared: "Among the country's reasons against the Marriage, the least was the 'American' reason. It was not a reason at all. For an English marriage of the same stripe would have been equally impossible. And an American marriage would have been possible. Only not this one."

Refers to "Invaders."

The author referred to the "Invaders."

"The Invaders, of course, were not beloved," he said. "They were as a rule no credit to the great country they had exploited and deserted nor to the one in which they now were roystering and ruling. Enormous fortunes, doubtfully acquired, had for a generation been heightening the pace and lowering the tone of English society. Their money could apparently buy everything — old houses, old names [there were 'old' families in the peerage three-quarters rich-American, and new families four-quarters], old decencies, the greatest of our newspapers, the chief places in society and the public eye. Their accent was beginning to be an asset, even to the English themselves, in truly 'smart' circles; it was beginning—you listened in, that night?—to be heard in the voice of the young tribal God himself. . . . They were cock-a-hoop, and since Edward's accession getting insolent and out of hand. There was but one more world to conquer. The first woman to sit in the ancient Commons was a divorced American; why not then also——?

Sees Opposition Hardened.

"Being without rank or title was no reason." Dennis then describes how this affected the Britsh people.

"Although not very many were aware of the kind of society this union would have brought to the top, their knowledge was decisive. It hardened the opposition of those among them who would have opposed anyhow; far more important, it decided the feelings of liberal people who, on principle, would have liked the king free to choose, and preferred a democratic marriage. Anything more undemocratic than this foreign band of plutocratic pleasure seekers was not conceivable, nor more harmful to the dignity and national character of the throne. Some of the most contemptible people alive, and that their native country had scornfully spewed forth, were closest around our king. Left wing opinion —loose fish aside—which knew anything of that circle where he had fixed his choice was as unfavorable as the frowsiest 'duches.'"

Dennis said the "moral and sacramental objections to divorce had weight; how much weight it is very difficult to guess," but——

"The chief, nearly the whole, reason was this: For queen of England . . . she was not good enough.

"Came Too Far Below."

"She came too far below, she clashed too crudely, with the nation's idea and ideal, dream and myth, of feminine royalty. Queen Elizabeth, Queen Victoria, Queen Alexandra, Queen Mary, the ladies of York, Gloucester, Kent, whichever standard among these variant high ones of English queenship your own might happen to be, the new aspirant did not fit it. Ideals are ideals. Idols must be idols. She would not do. The comedown from Queen Mary to Queen Wally was too steep."

Dennis turned his attention also to American newspapers.

"England is proud," he wrote, "and minded seeing her Throne provide a music hall turn for low foreign newspapers. The country bitterly resented the other country's brazen delighted cheapening of its high possession—the tabloid press jeering, interfering—and in its anger naturally, if ungratefully, ignored the correct and cordial tone of most Americans and of the good American journals. [On balance, there has in all this affair been more unjustified abuse of America by England than of England by America. The latter, under some provocation, has behaved extremely well and approached the different issues both fairly and intelligently.]"

Charges King Was "Cornered"

The author cited "the newspaper accounts of luxury and frivolity; the photographs; the sudden revelation, realization how an un-English set of noceurs [gay dogs]—we gradually got some of their names and hard faces —had cornered the king."

Not since Henry III., asserted Dennis, had an English sovereign been so wrapped up in foreigners. Not even, he indicated, "George I. with his Hanoverians."

"The throne's prestige was being harmed by all the publicity, vulgarity," the author concluded. "By the delay. Time was being lost, business held up; many a mug manufacturer was losing money. The country's public business was being held up. The foreign situation was troubled; uncertainty had gone on quite long enough."

He pointed out that "a base rumor was set going, to break him finally, that Edward himself was prolonging the crisis holding out for more money. . . ."

England Is "Very Pleased."

The author referred to abdication week as "Rat Week" and said it should not bring odium upon the whole nation.

"England, indeed, is very pleased with herself," he declared. "She feels actually fitter than before. She has expelled from her system a foreign body which never really agreed with her—a piece of matter, come to think of it, damned odd for the house of Windsor ever to have produced and which, now she realizes, she was a bit anxious about all along. Probably anyway in the long run he would have——. It's far better really that it has happened. When all's said and done we ought to be thankful."

Edward, Dennis believes, "takes rank with the Great Lovers; his memory with Antony and Cleopatra, Tristram and Yseult, Palao and Francesca, Romeo and Juliet. The sophisticated have no notion how powerful amongst poor and ignorant, and ordinary, people in every country Edward of England's romantic prestige has already become."

SEATS ALONG ROUTE OF CORONATION MARCH ARE NEARLY SOLD OUT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 24.—Ticket agents claiming to represent distributors of nearly 90 per cent of the seats available along the route over which the coronation procession will move on May 12 held an indigation meeting today. They met to protest against a report that seats were available for as little as $13.

The report, which was shown on investigation to be baseless, was believed to have been circulated by the ticket sellers. They indignantly disclaimed knowledge of it and said that a census of the remaining seats showed that only 30,000 still are available and that the average price is $26.

The colonial office announced that its supply of tickets was exhausted. Even the Irish Free State's quota of 3,000 was said to have been filled despite threats in Ireland to boycott the coronation.

EDWARD AWAITS LAWYER TO PLAN ACTION ON BOOK

Mrs. Simpson Slandered, Is Duke's View.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ST. WOLFGANG, Austria, April 24.—Messages received from London indicated today that A. G. Allen, lawyer for the duke of Windsor, the former King Edward VIII. of England, is coming to Austria to discuss possible legal action which Edward plans to take about a recently published book which the duke considers to be libelous and to contain slurs against his fiancée, Mrs. Wallis Simpson. The book involved, "Coronation Commentary," by Geoffrey Dennis, was published by William Heinemann, Ltd. An apology has been demanded by Edward.

The former king's aids declare that they do not expect Allen to arrive for some time. They added that the book, published about the middle of April, has not been seen in Edward's retreat here.

Messages from London.

Meanwhile Edward received his first guest since he established himself in the eight room Appesbach farm house here about a month ago. The guest was Sir Walford Selby, British minister to Austria, who motored directly to St. Wolfgang on a return trip from London. The visit was the first break in the hemit-like existence which Edward has led here. For four weeks the self-exiled former king has been living only for walks, mountain excursions, and the nightly telephone calls to Mrs. Simpson, who is staying at the Chateau de Cande near Monts, France.

Selby will leave here tomorrow, but not before he has had ample time to discuss messages which he brought from London, and to talk over the duke's plans for the future, which depend greatly on the conversations the two will have.

When Selby arrived there was nobody at home to receive him. Edward and his equerry, accompanied by a guardsman, were in Bad Ischl finding out just how it feels to take the brine and sulphur cure which the kings of England and Austria took in the old days.

No Preparations for Moving.

The owner of the villa which the duke has rented until April 27 informed him he may keep it until the latter part of May. The duke has not decided whether or not he will accept the offer, but no preparations for moving are evident at the villa, where the household carries on with only one thing that can be taken for certain: That Edward always can be counted on to arrive home at 6 p. m., when the daily telephone call to Mrs. Simpson is put through.

Inspector William Storier, who for years escorted Edward on most of his trips as prince of Wales, arrived at St. Wolfgang this afternoon and resumed his duty.

WEDDING IN MONTS HINTED

BY EDMND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTS, France, April 24.—This little village, a rustic annex to the aristocratic and sumptuous castle of Candé, and the whole countryside were bursting with excitement over two pieces of news today. The reports were impossible to confirm, but were accepted by everybody here as certain.

One is that Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson's marriage to the duke of Windsor, the former King Edward VIII. of England, will take place here and not on the Riviera, and moreover that she is buying the Château de Candé and, with her royal husband, will become a permanent chatelaine of the region, thereby furnishing the natives here with a never ending smart show.

Expect Queen Mother Mary.

The second is a report which drifted in from London that Queen Mother Mary of England will attend her son's marriage.

Edward's reputation of being economical also has reached here and as a consequence the natives are not foreseeing a Gargantuan wedding party.

Mrs. Simpson has plenty of money, and travels to Tours every few days to draw funds. Her letter of credit which she cashes at a Tours branch bank of the Société Generale allows her as much as $10,000 a month.

3 Day California-Europe Mail Service Is Planned

Three day passenger, mail and express service from the Pacific coast to Europe will be provided under a trafic exchange agreement announced yesterday by the United Air Lines and the American Zeppelin Transport corporation. The airline will make connections with the dirigible Hindenburg at Lakehurst, N. J. Begining May 6 the airship will make eighteen round trips this summer, compared with ten last year.

ENVOY OF BUDDHA WEDS HIMSELF; 700 PRIESTS SING

Bride Wears 11 Kimonos Nine Centuries Old.

KYOTO, Japan, April 24.—(AP)—Bowing before a glittering gold lotus altar and a huge gilt Buddha, Count Kocho Otani, aristocratic hereditary chief abbot of one of Japan's foremost sects of Buddhism, married himself shortly after dawn today to a 19 year old princess.

The count, 27 years old and spiritual leader of 13,000,000 Japanese Buddhists, celebrated ancient colorful rituals that made Princess Yoshiko Tokudaiji his bride. The ruler of the Nishi-Honganji sect performed the service himself because no lesser dignitary was deemed eligible for such an honor.

700 Priests Chant.

Hundreds of Buddhist dignitaries, court officials, members of nobility and 20,000 followers in the faith crowded into a vast temple courtyard to catch a glimpse of the wedding procession.

High on the still morning air rose the queer-pitched song of two choruses of 700 priests, chanting an antiphonal liturgy older than christianity. The priests led the man whom they believe to be Buddha's earthly representative from his simple monastic dwelling.

The procession passed into the courtyard, joined there by a band of more than 100 acolytes, who swung their bronze censers in a rhythm to match the beat of the big skin-drums in the temple.

In the inner temple, before the great lotus altar, high dignitaries of the church knelt in devout prayer.

Bride Wears Eleven Kimonos.

In a cloud of incense, and with a mighty clash of cymbals, the tall princess was led from a nearby gold-screened ante-room, garbed in the impressive and glamorous brocade robes of a court lady of nine centuries ago.

She wore eleven vari-colored kimonos, laid one over the other. So voluminous were the ancient skirts that she had difficulty walking to the altar where her fiancé awaited her.

The ceremony over, the abbot distributed 1,500,000 yen [$420,000] as gifts among the poor. His bride gave away 1,500,000 classical fans to the wedding guests and other friends.

A newly built palace, with an exquisite garden landscaped in the old Japanese style, was presented to the abbot and his bride by his followers. It has 40 rooms.

LINGERIE SHOW? NO! IT'S ONLY AN ALARM OF FIRE

New York, April 24.—[Special.]—Passersby in Fulton street, Brooklyn, were treated to what appeared to be a spring showing of women's underwear at noon when many of the May department store's customers dashed into the street after a false fire alarm was sounded. The women had been in fitting rooms trying on dress, but none had on a dress at the time of the dash.

Police arrested Elsie Ullman of Brooklyn, a saleswoman, on a charge of disorderly conduct.

May's store has been the scene of disorder for the last week following a strike of some employés for shorter hours and more pay. Several days ago a group of strikers marched through the store, tumbled stock into the ailes and sought to tear clothing off loyal workers, but were evicted by police.

TWO BARTLETT BOYS OUTSPELL WHOLE COUNTY

Win First and Second Honors in Contest.

BY DORIS LOCKERMAN.

Out of Cook county's population of 4,225,000, the town of Bartlett, boasting only 405 inhabitants, furnished the two top winners yesterday at the Cook county spelling bee in the office of Noble J. Puffer, county superintendent of schools. Bartlett is in the extreme west end of Cook county, southeast of Elgin.

Kenneth LaRue and John Sandaker, both 13 years old, pupils in the Bartlett school, outspelled eighty-four girl and boy champions from twenty-five competing townships and stood alone, in a polite battle between themselves, in the competition for the championship.

Kenneth was the apologetic victor and his classmate, John, was the polite runner up. Before they entered the finals each had insisted that the other would win.

Called Outstanding Pupils.

The banners for first and second place in the contest will both hang in the small town's schoolroom presided over by Mrs. Elvina Brandt, who has taught both winning spellers since they were 10. Both are outstanding pupils in all their subjects, Mrs. Brandt said, and neither has been coached in orthography.

Third place was awarded Marion Mabee of Tinley Park, also 13, Bremen township girl champion, who stumbled over the word "jardiniere" and lost a chance to spell with the two boys for first place. She competed with Doris Bock, Melrose Park; Virginia Bill, Northfield; Eddie Pranger, Lansing, and Byrnice Schmidt, Northbrook, who after misspelling only one word in the first list, found "repertoire," "peripatetic," and "shallop" insurmountable.

All but 7 Eliminated.

After all except seven were eliminated on a first list with the words "vernal," "ecstasy," and "rhetoric" most often misspelled, the second list was pronounced to the five competing for third place. It contained:

repertoire
amphibian deficit
connoisseur shallop
buoyant
sylvan
fiscal
discernible frothy
cohorts exorcist
fuchsia

Both the Bartlett school boys missed "peripheral," "physiognomy," and "peregrination" when they competed on this list:

paraphernalia
technique
lucidity bailiff
boudoir judiciary
convalescence reminiscence
streptococcus
scullion

John Sandaker, second prize winner, also missed "lucidity," "streptococcus" and "scullion."

With boys walking out with two pennants, tradition in spelling bees in Cook county was overturned. Last year girls won first and second place, and a boy was declared winner of the third prize. It is usual, teachers commented, to find girls are superior spellers, with boys excelling in history and geography.

DRIVERLESS CAR GOES TO TOWN; DERAILS TRAINS

Battle Creek, Mich., April 24.—(AP)—A driverless automobile, rolling from its parking place on a steep hill onto a downtown Michigan Central railroad crossing, caused the derailment of one freight car on each of two trains speeding in opposite directions tonight.

The car, struck by an eastbound train, was hurled into the path of the westbound one. The machine was demolished and parts of it, carried for many yards, burst into flame, threatening the wooden boxcars of the two trains.

All Michigan Central train trafic through Battle Creek was halted temporarily. The eastbound and westbound Twilight Limiteds, Detroit-Chicago flyers, after being held up more than an hour, were rerouted over the Grand Trunk Western Railway tracks through the city.

SERB POLICE KILL 2 MONTENEGRINS IN RIOT AT BURIAL

[Copyright: 1937: By the New York Times.]

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, April 24.—Two Montenegrin peasants were killed and six injured by a volley fired by Serbian gendarmes into a party of mourners in a cemetery near Podgoritza yesterday during the burial of an unemployed man who was said to have died of hunger. So violent became demonstrations against the authorities that gendarmes were sent to keep order. When they sought to prevent a peasant from speaking at the graveside there was a general clash in which the police opened fire. A number of peasants were arrested. Excitement is running high in the province.

ESCAPED CONVICT HUNTED BY U. S. AS GIRL'S KIDNAPER

Federal agents joined the police yesterday in the search for an escaped convict believed to have been the robber who forced Miss Josephine Howe, 24 years old, of Kalamazoo, Mich., to drive him from that city to Chicago on Friday afternoon. Miss Howe said the desperado held a knife at her side during the terrifying 135 mile ride.

Her description of the man fitted that of James Moore, 38 years old, who walked off the honor farm of the Michigan state penitentiary at Jackson last Tuesday. He was serving a term for burglary. On the way to Chicago the desperado told Miss Howe that he had been released from Jackson prison on Tuesday.

The young woman told police her abductor took $15 and an engagement ring from her, but later returned the ring and $5. He jumped from the automobile at 84th street and Western avenue.

Conviction on HOLC Loan Charge Reversed

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday reversed the conviction of L. C. Christensen, real estate man of Raymond, Wis., who was found guilty in the federal court in Milwaukee Jan. 26 on charges of making a fraudulent application for a $5,715 Home Owners' Loan corporation loan. Judge Ferdinand Geiger sentenced him to serve six months in the Milwaukee house of correction. The opinion, which remanded the case for a new trial, held that the trial judge had failed to hear admissible testimony.

Riverside, Brookfield School Addition Voted

Voters of school district 208 yesterday approved a $200,000 bond issue for an addition to the Riverside-Brookfield High school in Riverside. In the district are Riverside, North Riverside, Brookfield and Hollywood.

RECENT BOMBING VICTIM A BLAST TARGET IN 1931

Painters' Business Agent Suspected, but Freed.

Police records disclosed yesterday that Arthur M. Gelden, Landis award decorating contractor on two jobs that were bombed last Tuesday night, was the target of a similar attack six years ago. James Dungan, painter's union official who is now awaiting a trial on a gun toting charge, was arrested as a suspect in the 1931 bombing, but was freed for lack of evidence.

James Dungan.

State's Attorney Courtney has attributed the recent bombings, two of a series of five which occurred within a space of a few hours, to trouble in the painters' union. Landis award contractors employ painters at $1 an hour for an eight hour day, the union scale is $10 for a 6 hour day.

Business Agent Nearby.

The previous attack on Gelden occurred on the night of Sept. 29, 1931 when his shop at 1240 North Wells street was bombed. A short time before the bombing an employé in a nearby garage noticed an automobile parked nearby. Fearing a holdup, he called police. A police squad found Dungan, who is business agent of Local 191 of the painters' union, among occupants of the car.

He was released after questioning. The bomb exploded a few minutes later. Dungan was rearrested at his home and charged with the bombing. George Henneman, another official of the union, was questioned by Wisconsin authorities regarding theft of dynamite from a store near Henneman's summer home. Charges against Dungan were later dismissed.

Dungan was arrested in 1935 and questioned about the bombing of a packing plant where nonunion painters were working. He was questioned again last May after a print shop which had printed a pamphlet attacking officials of the painters union was bombed.

He has also been arrested several times on gun toting charges, the last time in December. Henneman, who was arrested with him in December was sentenced to six months in jail on the same charge. On April 12, Municipal Judge Francis Borrelli continued the case against Dungan until October, pending disposition of Henneman's appeal.

Henneman's wife, Elsie, was shot to death by a shotgun assassin a year ago while riding with her husband.

No Warning, Says Victim.

Gelden has told authorities that he received no threats before the Lake Shore Country club and a Wilmette residence on which he was working were bombed. Other Landis award contractors are understood, however, to have told State's Attorney Courtney that they or their customers have received veiled warnings from agents of the painters union.

One of these contractors called the bombings an enforcement campaign designed to bolster the union wage scale. The competition of Landis award workmen at $1 an hour is only one of several reasons for lack of work among union painters, he said. Painters have the highest wage scale among the building trades unions, except that recently granted bricklayers, and are the only trade with a thirty hour week designed to spread work.

Both union painters and contractors employing union painters, this contractor charged, have been cheating on the scale of $1.66⅔ an hour. Contractors, ostensibly paying the union scale, have forced painters to rebate part of their wages, he asserted, so that the actual rate paid has been less than the Landis award scale.

Finds Union Work Declining.

Union painters are also competing with their employers, he said, by taking contracts for decorating and painting at $1 an hour, or less. This competition has caused a steadily declining volume of work done at the union scale, he said, although at present most union painters are working, due to the seasonal rush of work before May 1 moving day.

Chief of Detectives John L. Sullivan and Capt. Daniel Gilbert, chief investigator for the state's attorney, yesterday discussed increasing the personnel of the police bomb squad, arranged Thursday at a conference between the state's attorney and Police Commissioner Allman. It was suggested that the squad, now working out of the detective bureau under Sergt. Andrew Aitken, might be given secret headquarters to prevent surveillance and later intimidation of witnesses.

Hollywood, Cal., April 24.—George Givot, comedian, and Miss Marylon Dorothy Curtis today filed notice of intent to marry. The actor, who goes by the name of "The Greek Ambassador" in his comedy presentation, gave his age as 29. Miss Curtis is 22 and recently took screen tests. They will marry in May.

British Seamen Promised Better Support for Pants

LONDON, April 24.—(AP)—His majesty's seamen are to get better support for the pants. An admiralty fleet order today contained a solemn pronouncement that "requests for better quality braces" would be met with the introduction of a new type "in due course."

FLYING BOTTLES OF WHISKY FELL FLEEING BANDIT

Harry Nelson, an ex-convict, early yesterday walked into Samuel Schanen's liquor store at 5943 Madison street with a gun. Lining up Schanen, Schanen's son Marshall, and four customers, Nelson forced one of the customers to search the rest and pocketed the $35 collection.

Harry Nelson.

But just as the bandit was leaving the elder Schanen picked up a bottle of whisky and tossed it with unerring aim, Schanen's son got the idea, so did the customers. Nelson fell unconscious, the proprietor put the bottles back on the shelves, complimented the customers on their marksmanship and called the Fillmore street police to come get Nelson. They did.

Nelson was sent to the Pontiac reformatory in 1929 on six charges of robbery.

Oshkosh Couple Celebrates 54th Wedding Anniversary

Oshkosh, Wis., April 24.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Schloerb celebrated their fifty-fourth wedding anniversary at their home here today. Mr. Schloerb is the only survivor of the six letter carriers who first delivered mail here. He was in the service forty years and is now retired. The couple have lived in the same house during their entire married life.

VANISHING SAMARITAN CLAN MARKS ANCIENT RITE ON MT. GERIZIM

NABLUS, Palestine, April 24.—(AP)—A tiny remnant of the once proud race of Samaritans gathered on Mount Gerizim at sundown today to celebrate the Samaritan passover, one of the oldest of religious ceremonies.

Robed priests performed the sacrificial rites in strict accordance with Old Testament injunctions in the presence of the entire community of Samaritans—numbering just 160. The sacrifice of lambs was preceded by a long service. Hymns were sung in an Archaic dialect.

The Samaritans, tracing their existence back to days of Babylonian captivity, refused until recent days to marry outside their race, although faced with extinction. A few of the men have married Jews.

Awarded $15,000 in Injury Suit; Offers to Take $10,000

Although a jury awarded Perly Liepart of 6127 Wentworth avenue $15,000 in a personal injury suit against the city, his attorney, J. S. Pressman, offered yesterday to take $10,000. Judge Martin M. Gridley of the Superior court accordingly entered a judgment for that amount. Michael C. Zacharias and Benjamin J. Kanne, assistant corporation counsels, said they would appeal the judgment. Liepart, who is 47 years old, was run down a year ago by a truck hired by the city.

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

HUNT GAMBLING FEUD AS MOTIVE OF GANG SLAYING

Victim's Record Searched for Clew to Killers.

Mystery surrounding the gangland execution of Oscar Klinger deepened yesterday as police delved into gambling feuds and the six bombings of the last week for the explanation.

Klinger's slender, red haired widow, his sister, and two of the men who faced the wall with him while two methodical assassins riddled him with bullets Friday night in his poolroom at 2459 Armitage avenue, told their story at the inquest.

But they threw no light on any activities that would make it worth the underworld's time to wipe out Klinger in so spectacular a fashion.

Suspect Double Cross.

The leading theory was that Klinger, known as a gambler, had either tried to muscle in on some powerful gambling organization, or he had double crossed gamblers with whom he had been dealing.

There were reports that he had once forced his way into partnership in a racing handbook, and was quickly ousted. One of his employés said that he recently operated a handbook at 2443 Armitage avenue. But the police said he had vacated the room in which he operated it.

The poolroom in which he was assassinated, the police said, was only a front for a gambling house. But there was no handbook, they said, and their investigation disclosed no larger gambling operations there than telephoning bets to a handbook agency. The police were nevertheless of the opinion that some major form of gambling, as yet undiscovered, might have been operated there.

Once Quizzed in Bombing.

The theory that the recent bombings might underlie the killing grew out of the fact that Klinger was arrested a year ago for questioning about the attempted bombing of the Paradise hall, which the police said was a luxurious handbook establishment that was then about to be opened at 2047 Milwaukee avenue.

The police said Klinger had tried in vain to have himself cut in as a partner in this place, but they could find no evidence that he had tried to bomb it.

Lieut. Emil Anderson of the Shakespeare avenue police expressed the belief that the killers were hired executioners brought in from some other city. This again would indicate that Klinger was a far more important figure in some underworld enterprise than has as yet been learned.

Although the killers made no attempt at robbery, Capt. Charles Pawlowski of the Shakespeare avenue police, said that $76 was taken from the dead man's pocket as he lay on the floor by Klinger's day manager, Benjamin Goldstein, 28 years old, of 1355 North Western avenue. Pawlowski said Goldstein confessed taking the money while the night manager, Frank Socha, 35 years old, living above the poolroom, was telephoning for police.

At the inquest, held in the undertaking rooms at 2168 North California avenue, one of the principal witnesses was Klinger's widow, Barbara, who is 25 years old.

Mrs. Klinger said she last saw her husband at noon Friday. She said he gave no hint that he was expecting trouble. Miss Leonore Klinger, 28 years old, of 2059 West Washington boulevard, Klinger's sister, was another witness. She supplied the family history.

TRAP 4 WOMEN IN ROBBERY OF U. S. TREASURY

Agents Find They Retain Uncounted Old Bills.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 24.—[Special.]—Accused of achieving the impossible—robbing the United States treasury under the noses of an elaborate guard—four veteran women clerks in the currency redemption bureau today faced prosecution.

The identity of the women, one of whom is the wife of a Washington policeman, was being withheld pending a decision on their fate by the district attorney's office. All have been discharged.

The treasury said it was impossible to determine how much the women pilfered because of the nature of their operations. It was believed, however, that the women netted no more than a few hundred dollars.

They took advantage of errors in the periodic shipment by banks of worn or damaged currency. With such shipments the banks send vouchers noting the number of bills of various denominations and the total amount of the currency to be replaced.

Occasionally banks make errors in the shipments and send a few dollars more or a few dollars less than the number given on the voucher. The women pocketed money included above the amount given on the voucher.

The women's downfall came when one bank discovered its own mistake several weeks after a shipment and called upon the treasury for a refund. The case was turned over to the secret service. The women were trapped through a dummy mistake package.

HONOLULU IS ANXIOUS AS ITS PLANES BOMB MIGHTY FLEET OF FOE

HONOLULU, April 24.—(AP)—Defending army planes spotted and theoretically bombed the main body of the United States fleet today as it moved toward Honolulu and the nearby Pearl Harbor naval base for a long-awaited war game attack. Honolulu's defenders tightened their lines in preparation for an expected mass aerial attack followed by a landing.

Civilians awaited with interest and a little uncertainty the hypothetical destruction of Honolulu, which the defending force of 20,000 admitted it was powerless to halt, despite its planes, submarines, and mine layers. The enemy fleet seized the island of Hawaii yesterday after the imaginary demolition of Hilo, second city of the archipelago.

Defense planes went out early today on patrol duty in search of the approaching armada, which contains 111 warships, more than 400 fighting planes, and 40,000 officers and men.

EUROPE DISCARDS LOCARNO TREATY; BELGIUM FREED

Neutrality Is Guaranteed by France and Britain.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 24.—Completing the destruction of the Locarno peace treaty of 1925, which was supposed to guarantee the frontiers of western Europe, Great Britain and France in a historic move which may have far reaching consequences today released Belgium from its obligations under that pact to come to their aid in case of war.

The strategic little buffer state, the invasion of which by Germany brought Great Britain into the world war, thus regained its pre-war status of neutrality, with a promise of full protection from France and Great Britain against aggressors.

Belgium, in return, promised to rearm effectively and defend its frontiers against aggression and to prevent Belgian territory from being used for purposes of aggression against any other state. Belgium also promised to observe its obligations under the league of nations covenant.

Also Act to Curb Duce.

The agreement, which some observers said amounted to a virtual military alliance between France and Great Britain, continued the political realignment of Europe which has been in progress for the last several months. It followed close on the heels of Premier Mussolini's action at Venice this week in opening the way for Reichsfuehrer Hitler to have a voice in ruling Austria.

Further evidence that France and Great Britain are strengthening the close ties between them also was seen in the Franco-British agreement, made known earlier today, to adopt a joint policy for a united front against Mussolini's Mediterranean designs. The united front is the outcome of a visit paid to Great Britain during the last few days by Edouard Daladier, French minister of defense.

The scheme supposedly will counterbalance the recent Italo-German understanding. Disclosures made this week at the Venice conference between Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria and Mussolini indicated that Il Duce is trying to make this understanding more operative, especially in getting German support for his Mediterranean schemes.

A Four Point Program.

The Anglo-French coöperation will embody a four point policy:

FIRST—Maintenance of coöperation between France and England on all matters pertaining to the continent of Europe.

SECOND—Development of a guardedly cordial understanding with Germany.

THIRD—A united front against Italy in the Mediterranean.

FOURTH—Loosening of the Franco-soviet Russian friendship pact.

The last point, which presumably would make possible a rapprochement with Germany, is said to reflect also the skepticism of French military authorities over the efficiency of the Russian fighting machine.

Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, will fly to Brussels tomorrow to see Premier Paul van Zeeland and other Belgian leaders. In addition to discussing the future status of Belgium in European affairs, Eden is expected to talk over with Van Zeeland the proposed trip of the latter to the United States to sound out President Roosevelt on the possibility of expanding world trade. European leaders are hopeful that Van Zeeland's visit will result in Roosevelt calling a world conference.

In addition to releasing Belgium from all obligations under the Locarno treaty, under which five powers—Britain, France, Italy, Germany and Belgium—guaranteed to aid one another against an aggressor, the Franco-British action today released the Belgians from the agreement drawn up in London on March 19, 1936, after Reichsfuehrer Hitler virtually had nullified the Locarno pact by reoccupying the Rhineland.

The agreement was signed in Brussels by Paul Spaak, Belgian foreign minister; Sir Robert Clive, British ambassador, and Jules Laroche, French ambassador.

STARTS SAVING DAYLIGHT

Miss Charlotte Sroka, 2231 Augusta boulevard, moves her clock ahead on retiring, starting five months of daylight saving. The official time for the change was 2 a. m. today, and it will continue in effect until Sept. 26.

CAthedral 8000

Some 50,000 persons who forgot to set ahead their clocks are expected to telephone to Cathedral 8000 today for the correct time. Pictured is one of the operators who answers the calls with "At the next tone signal the time will be——," and then gives the time to a quarter of a minute. A green light signals her when to start. The two large clocks are synchronized with a smaller one on the switchboard.

NEW ONE-PUNCH KING IS CROWNED IN HOLLYWOOD

Hollywood, Cal., April 24.—[U. P.]—Veterans of Hollywood's famous "one-punch" battles hailed a new champion today in the Russian movie actor, Ivan Lebedeff, who mixed with "Prince" Michael Romanoff in front of a film colony night spot.

Romanoff, man-about-Hollywood known to the immigration authorities simply as Harry Gerguson, said it was a multi-blow affair and altogether quite gruelling. Lebedeff said poof, there was only one punch, and it was his.

The brawl was witnessed by a film colony crowd on the sidewalk in front of the Beverly Hills Brown Derby cafe last Thursday night, it was learned. It was described as round No. 2 of a previous fracas in which Lebedeff also landed his one punch.

Fla. Judge Holds Man for Showing Uncensored Film

Clearwater, Fla., April 24.—(AP)—Circuit Judge John U. Bird today ordered a man giving the name of Samuel Cummins, New York motion picture distributor, turned over to Dade county [Miami] authorities on a charge of exhibiting a motion picture which did not have national board of review approval, as required by Florida law. He is wanted in Miami on an information filed against him, and faces three similar charges in this [Pinellas] county, but hearings in these cases were continued for the term. He based his plea for release on the grounds the Florida law is unconstitutional.

OHIO EDITOR FINED FOR PUBLISHING GRAND JURY NEWS

Judge Demands Secrecy in Proceedings.

Akron, O., April 24.—(AP)—Judge Walter B. Wanamaker of the Court of Common Pleas found Walter Morrow, editor of the Akron Times-Press, guilty of contempt of court on three counts today and fined him $50.

Walter Morrow.

The case arose after Morrow ordered printed the names of grand jurors, names of witnesses and cases they were considering after Judge Wanamaker ordered strict secrecy on those matters.

Three Separate Fines.

The court assessed Morrow $10 for publishing the names of the county grand jurors, $15 for revealing the names of witnesses, and $25 for making known the titles of grand jury cases.

Judge Wanamaker contended there had been too much trying of lawsuits in newspapers instead of in courts, particularly in criminal cases, where he said the rights of society and the individual should be established by the orderly procedure of justice.

Case to Be Appealed.

Attorney Robert Guinther, Morrow's counsel, announced the case would be appealed. The editor furnished bond of $100, pending appeal.

In his opinion the court read one biblical quotation, on the letter and spirit of the law, and one citation in law by former Chief Justice Carrington T. Marshall of Ohio.

Morrow, at a hearing yesterday, insisted that it was his function as editor to determine what news should be published.

CLIPPER FLIGHT PIONEERS HOLD REUNION DINNER

New York, April 24.—[Special.]—The Pan-American Pioneers, veterans of the first Clipper ship flights to China and to South America, held a reunion dinner last night at the Ritz-Carlton hotel in honor of Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, chairman of the board of Pan-American Airways, and Juan J. Trippe, president.

Sterling silver and bronze globes, with the China and South American routes traced on them in red lacquer, were presented to the air transport company officials. The base of each globe was inscribed with the names of the veterans, who include newspaper publishers and editors and aviation officials.

Senator William G. McAdoo [D., Cal.] made the presentation to Trippe. Amon G. Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth [Texas] Star-Telegram, made the presentation to Whitney, and also presented both men with sombreros. Thirty-eight persons, including newspaper publishers, newspaper editors, directors and officials of the air line, and their wives attended.

BOY, 15, LOST SINCE APRIL 13.

Joseph Colangelo of 11839 Union avenue asked Kensington police yesterday to search for his son, Leonard, 15 years old, who has been missing since April 13.

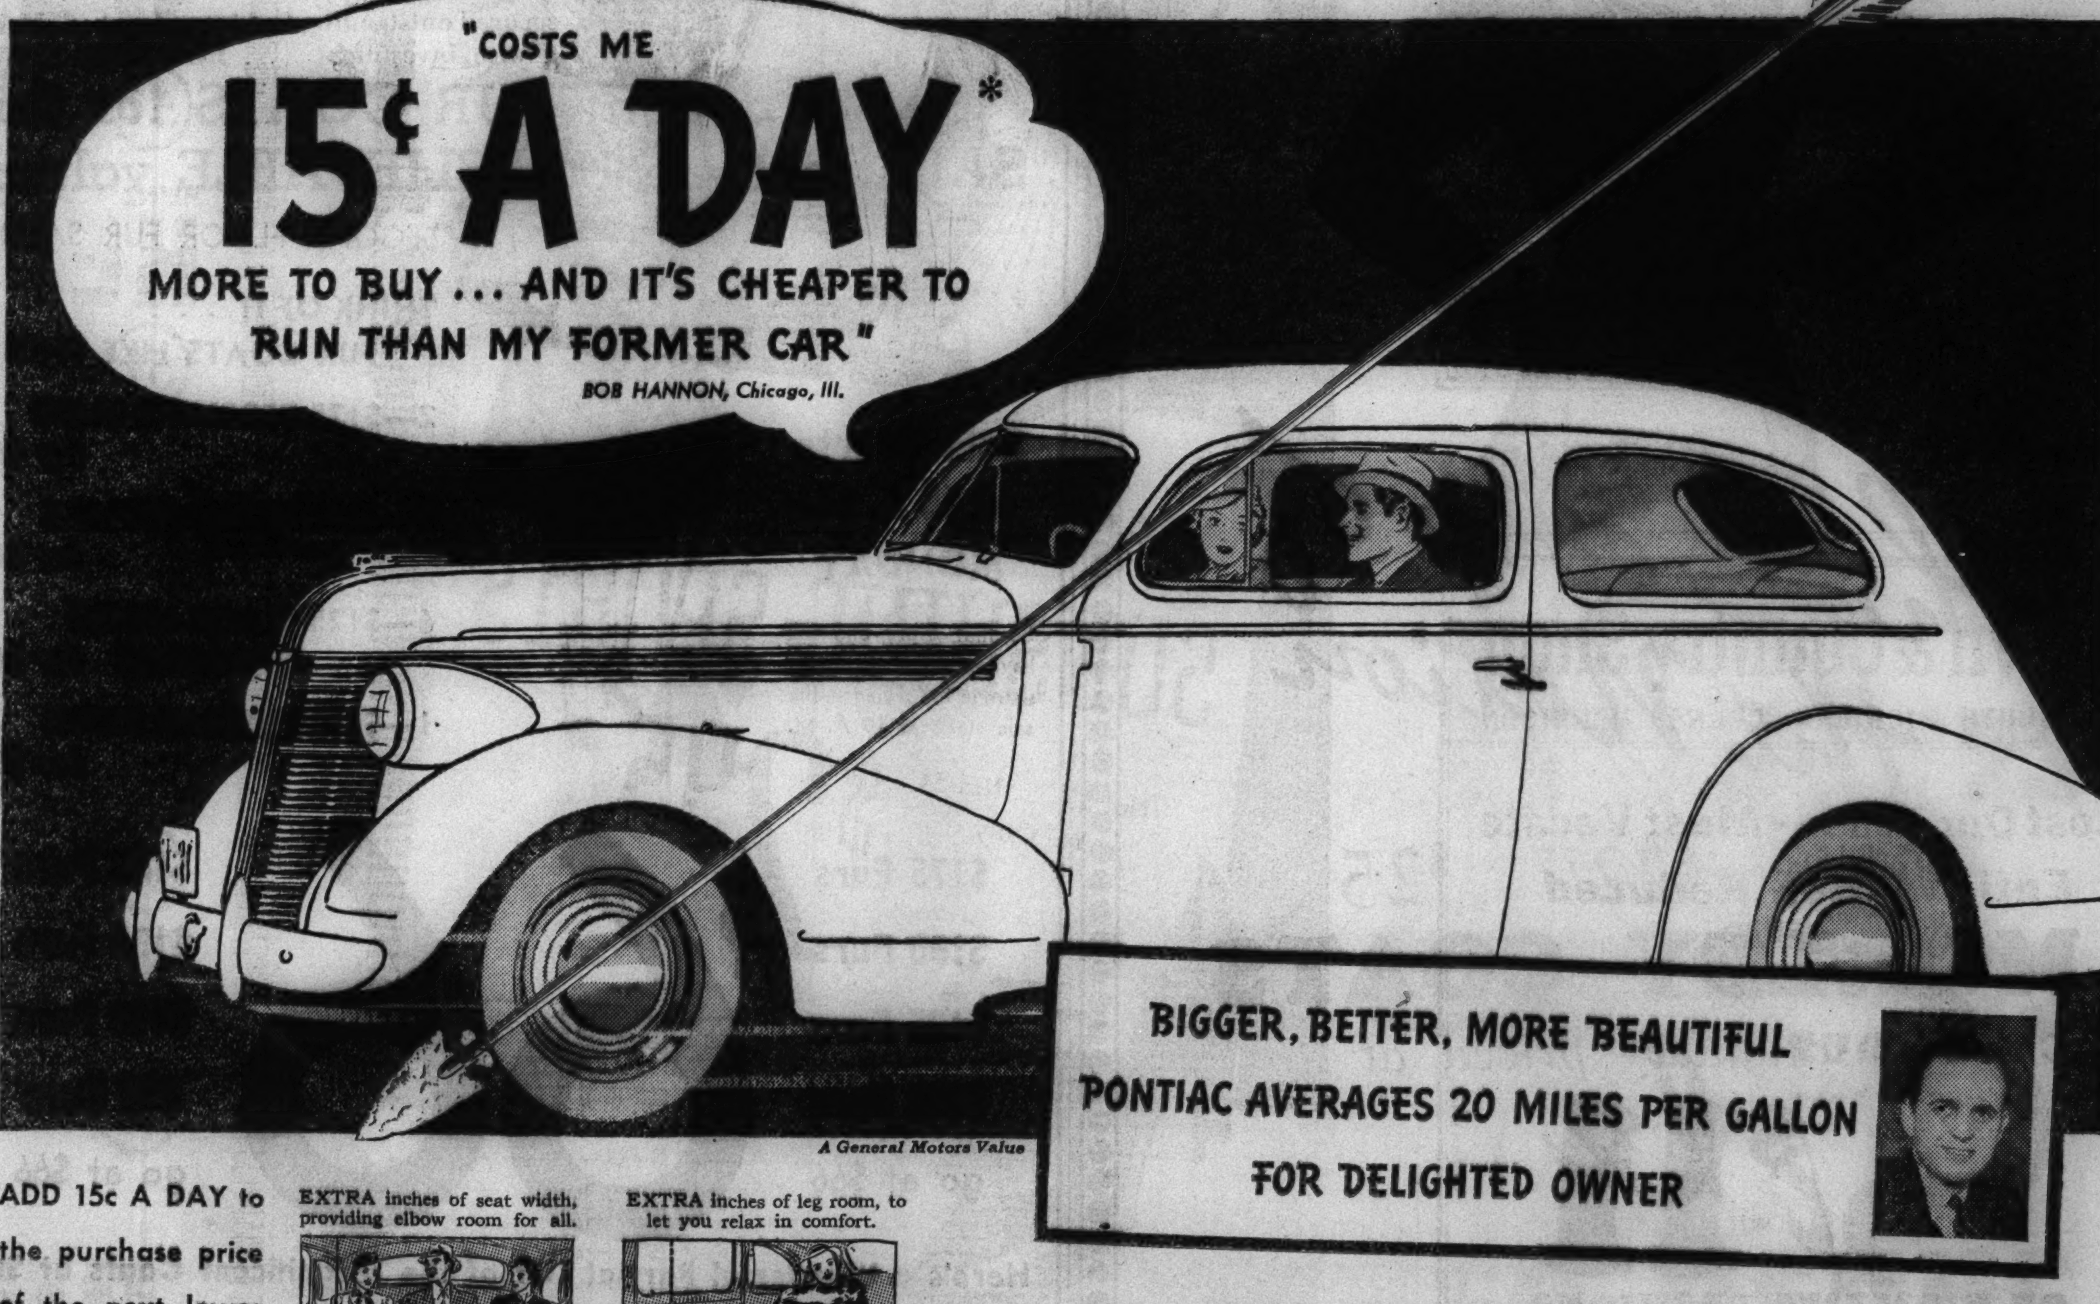
PONTIAC AMERICA'S FINEST LOW PRICED CAR!



"COSTS ME 15¢ A DAY* MORE TO BUY ... AND IT'S CHEAPER TO RUN THAN MY FORMER CAR"
BOB HANNON, Chicago, Ill.

A General Motors Value

BIGGER, BETTER, MORE BEAUTIFUL PONTIAC AVERAGES 20 MILES PER GALLON FOR DELIGHTED OWNER

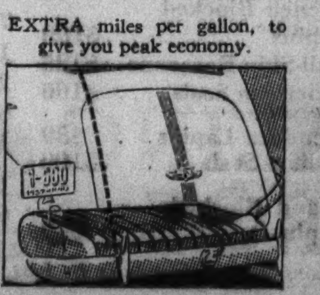
ADD 15c A DAY to the purchase price of the next lower priced cars and get a Pontiac with—

EXTRA inches of seat width, providing elbow room for all.

EXTRA inches of leg room, to let you relax in comfort.

EXTRA trunk space for 50% more luggage.

EXTRA miles per gallon, to give you peak economy.



EXTRA Knee-Action smoothness, to let you rest as you ride.

HERE'S the information that finally swung this satisfied owner to a Pontiac: based on 18 months terms in 168 representative cities, the average difference in monthly payments between a Pontiac DeLuxe six 2-door sedan and the same model of the next lower-priced cars is only 15 cents a day.* Here's what happened after purchase: Spending that extra 15 cents a day saved money in the long run because this big Silver Streaked beauty is a wonder for economy. And that's not all! The pride of owning the most beautiful thing on wheels . . . the secure feeling provided by Pontiac's roomy Unisteel Bodies by Fisher, triple-sealed hydraulic brakes and center-point steering . . . the added comfort of a longer, wider 6-passenger car with larger luggage space . . . the restful and relaxing smoothness of Pontiac's gentle, steady Knee-Action ride—each of these Pontiac advantages alone is worth the extra 15 cents a day, according to Pontiac owners. You'll think so too, after just one ride in America's finest low-priced car. Why not take it today?

DOG OWNERS GET CITY WARNING ON RABIES EPIDEMIC

Bundesen Calls for Aid in Drive on Strays.

BY BOB BECKER.

Unless dog owners coöperate with the authorities in their campaign to rid the streets of stray dogs, Chicago faces continuation of a serious rabies epidemic. This warning was sounded yesterday by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, head of the city health board.

Chicago streets have thousands of unlicensed, homeless dogs which are the carriers of rabies and dog owners are not taking the situation seriously enough, according to Dr. Bundesen.

Facts and Figures.

He marshaled facts and figures yesterday to show how serious the rabies menace is in Chicago. Exhibit No. 1 was the record of dog heads examined for rabies and the number which were proved to have rabies. The figures from last August are as follows:

	Heads examined..	Rabid.
August	172	61
September	113	36
October	107	36
November	94	40
December	47	23
January	51	21
February	52	21
March	66	27

So far this month 34 of the 79 heads examined showed rabies. This means that more than 40 per cent of the dog heads examined are rabid, a percentage so high that, according to Dr. Bundesen, it calls for an increase of all measures against the spread of the disease.

Comb Streets for Strays.

Meantime five squads of dog catchers are combing the streets for stray dogs. They are kept only twenty-four hours in the pound, after which all those without license tags are disposed of, most of them being destroyed.

The health department warns that animals other than dogs may transmit rabies and must often be impounded if they have bitten people. Two monkeys and 35 to 40 cats have been observed for rabies since the quarantine was put into effect last August.

Although the regulations of the present quarantine specify that no dog shall be on the street unless muzzled and leashed, owners apparently are being permitted to exercise their dogs if they are on leash but without muzzles.

Recognition of the present peril from rabies was given last week by the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois. The company announced the development of a pocket size first aid kit for use by meter readers and others workers in case of dog bites.

Riis Park Tree Planting Witnessed by Thousands

Thousands massed in Riis park, 6100 West Fullerton avenue, to witness Mayor Kelly turning over the spadeful of dirt for the planting of 1,000 trees yesterday. The ceremony was a tribute to Chicago's 100th anniversary as an incorporated city—an anniversary now being celebrated as Chicago's charter jubilee. The trees were a gift of the Pulaski Civic club of Hanson Park—ten trees for each of the one hundred years. They will be planted throughout the Montclare-Hanson park communities.

BILBAO DEFENSE ARMY REPORTED IN WILD RETREAT

Rebels at Town 19 Miles from Basque Capital.

SALAMANCA, Spain, Sunday, April 25.—(U. P.)—The Spanish rebel provisional government today protested to the British government for permitting the battleship Hood and a destroyer to escort three food ships to the entrance of Bilbao harbor, where they ran the rebel blockade.

HENDAYE, France, April 24.—(AP)—A Spanish rebel broadcast from Salamanca tonight announced the advance of Gen. Emilio Mola's troops to heights 19 miles southeast of Bilbao.

The rebels occupied the strategic village of El Orrio, the broadcast said, and heights three miles from Durango, "gateway" city to the Basque capital. One thousand prisoners were said to have been taken at El Orrio. Durango is 16 miles southeast of Bilbao on a broad plain.

Loyalist Basque lines were broken in the El Gueta sector and the government troops were said to be fleeing, closely pursued by their foe.

Basques Admit "Pressure."

The Basque line was broken on a 15 mile front, an insurgent communique declared, and almost the entire area between two of the main points southeast of Durango—Mondragon and Vergara—was occupied. Gen. Mola's left wing, under Col. Camilo Alfonso, drove ahead to outflank the defending militiamen and brought Durango under the fire of his machine guns, officers reported.

The Basques, in a communique, admitted there was "heavy pressure" from the insurgents at El Orrio and El Gueta, but said their forces were "defending their ground inch by inch."

Italian troops—who have seen little action since their two disastrous routs on the Guadalajara and Cordoba fronts last month—were reported to have been shifted to the northern front to bolster the big rebel push.

Rebel officers yesterday said 1,500 Italian troops who arrived at San Sebastian, Spain, 48 miles from the Biscayan battlefront, were regular Italian army artillerymen.

[Officials in Rome asserted the troops were "volunteers" who had been in Spain for some time.]

More Food Ships Sail.

Encouraged by the success of three food laden British freighters in reaching famished Bilbao yesterday, three others sailed today from La Rochelle, France, trailed by the British cruiser Shropshire. They will be given full protection against rebel war vessels blockading the Biscayan coast until they reach the Spanish three mile limit.

The three now on their way with food are the Thorpehall, the Stesso, and the Thurston. The Marvia and the Sheaf Field, two other British ships now loading are expected to follow. The steamer Backworth sailed from England. Still others were preparing at Gibraltar for similar dashes.

A French ship, which some reports identified as the Dairiguerre, reached Santander, west of Bilbao, with a food cargo.

Penetration of the rebel blockade solved the problem of feeding the city's 400,000 starving inhabitants. Bread will be distributed as soon as millers have had time to grind 4,000 tons of wheat which arrived yesterday. Rations of potatoes, rice, beans, sugar, and fish will be supplied Wednesday.

Restore Civil Rule in Madrid.

MADRID, April 24.—(AP)—A socialist baker and 32 other civilian anti-Fascists took over Madrid today from the military hands of Gen. José Miaja and restored civil rule to the city, still under the guns of rebel besiegers.

The new man of the hour, so far as Madrid's civil problems go, is 45 year old Rafael Henche de la Plata, once head of the Baker's union and for 20 years a Socialist politician in Madrid.

He was quickly elected head of the new municipal council of 33 members following a sudden order from Premier Francisco Largo Caballero at Valencia, which, in effect, directed Miaja to spend all his time fighting the rebels.

Gen. Miaja Satisfied.

That suited the bluff general, who has fought off rebel armies in Madrid's suburbs and elsewhere for nearly six months—and at the same time directed the Madrid military junta in the staggering problem of feeding and keeping in order the shell battered city.

"I am just a soldier," Miaja often has said. The order from Caballero, defining Miaja's functions "strictly" as those of "chief of military operations in the Madrid sector," and setting up a civil assembly to replace Miaja's defense junta, which was dissolved, meant this:

The government is assuring Madrid that it is not going to have permanent military dictatorship. At the same time, all of Miaja's energies are needed to whip back the rebels who still are on the edges of the city.

The new city council had one bit of luck—it was able to meet quietly. The rebels refrained from shelling Madrid for the first time in thirteen days. More than 250 persons were killed and vast damage done in downtown sections by the 12 days of shell-fire.

HINDU GIRL, ASKING TO STUDY AT U. OF C., FACES OUSTER ORDER

Baltimore, Md., April 24.—[Special.]—Jyotirmoyee Sarma, who came all the way from Calcutta to become a student at the University of Chicago, has been excluded from this country by the decision of a board of immigration officials here because she does not celebrate her fifteenth birthday until next September, whereas the visa on her passport calls for a person 15 years of age.

Jyotirmoyee arrived here with her aunt, Mrs. T. J. Sarma, aboard the City of Baltimore today and was met by her uncle, Dr. Sarma, who divides his time between a physician's practice in Calcutta and teaching in the medical school of the University of Illinois.

Dr. Sarma also met the boat at Norfolk yesterday, but the young girl was not allowed to land, because of the discrepancy of her passport visa. Jyotirmoyee was paroled in the care of her aunt and uncle pending disposition of an appeal to Washington.

Nazis Send 6 Churchmen to Prison for Immorality

COLOGNE, Germany, April 24.—(AP)—A stern Nazi campaign against alleged immorality among church folk was renewed today when prison sentences of ten months to three years were imposed on five lay brothers at Bonn and one Catholic priest at Essen on charges of immoral treatment of children entrusted to their care. Two other lay brothers were acquitted.

U. S. SALES TAX THREAT ADDS TO BUDGET WORRY

Early Balancing, Demand of Party Leaders.

monthly turnover on the WPA rolls is 3 per cent, indicating that the average work reliefer stays on the federal pay roll about 2 years and 9 months. In England the average period on the relief rolls is 6 months.

Prefer Federal Jobs.

On the basis of these facts it will be asserted that a large proportion of the unemployed on federal relief prefer public to private employment because of the higher pay, shorter hours, pleasanter work, and greater security of tenure than they would obtain in employment by private enterprise. Relief has become a vested interest to an enormous number of persons. They now have their organization, the Workers' Alliance, in which the communists are reputed to be influential, and they maintain a lobby in Washington to voice their demands and exert pull on the administration and congress.

Senator Byrnes asserts he will be able to prove that one billion dollars will finance relief amply during the next fiscal year, which is only another way of charging that one-third of the 1½ billions proposed by the President is pure waste.

The 10 per cent horizontal reduction of appropriations urged by Senator Byrnes would have about half a billion dollars. The 1938 budget is estimated at 7 billions 325 millions. But the 10 per cent cut could not be applied to certain items, such as 860 millions interest on the public debt and 540 millions representing the social security reserve. The cut could be applied to items aggregating 5 billions 870 millions. The saving, therefore, would be 587 millions or about 170 millions more than the President estimated as the prospective deficit for the next fiscal year.

Larger Deficit Seen.

Scrutiny of the President's budget message has yielded some results that will figure prominently in the forthcoming debate. Mr. Roosevelt submitted figures indicating that the deficit for the current fiscal year will be about 100 millions less than he had estimated last January. But analysis of the text of the message reveals that the deficit will be actually 309 millions greater. The President achieved the more favorable showing by omitting the contribution to debt retirement which he had included last January.

Likewise with regard to the next fiscal year the President calculated that the deficit would be only 418 millions. But if he had included the debt retirement item he used last January the deficit would be shown to be 819 millions.

One method proposed by the President to reduce next year's deficit is to liquidate the assets of certain emergency agencies, notably the RFC, the Commodity Credit corporation, PWA, the Farm Credit administration and the export-import banks. It is pointed out, however, that this is not a continuing source of revenue and would be merely a continuation of the present practice of converting capital assets into the financing of current expenditures.

C. I. O. LEADERS FACE THREAT OF CONTROL BY REDS

Attempt to Kidnap Labor Movement Feared.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

A growing dilemma in the opinion of some seasoned labor leaders, faces the Committee for Industrial Organization in the activities of communists who swung behind the C. I. O. at the start and are trying to head it toward a dictatorship of the proletariat on the Moscow model.

Communist literature indicates they may seek later to kidnap the movement to organize mass production industries from its head, John L. Lewis, who for years battled against communists in the United Mine Workers. In a crop of pamphlets, stress is thrown on "boring from within" in labor unions and factories by shop units of agitators and upon the building of a Farmer-Labor party aimed at a soviet dictatorship under Russian control.

Trouble in Automobiles.

Most troublesome spot is regarded as the United Automobile Workers, in which some of the agitators have at times displayed a mutinous spirit against the union leaders. Claims that communists played an important part in the General Motors strike at Flint are made in a recent booklet by William Weinstone. He is secretary of the Michigan district of the communist party. What he says seems to give substance to the recent charge of Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario that C. I. O. and communism are now marching hand in hand.

"There is no doubt," says Mr. Weinstone, "that where the communists were active and took an outstanding part, particularly at the most decisive points of the struggle, there the strike was strongest, and this made for the success of the whole battle. The communist workers combatted any tendency to waver."

Growth of a People's Front.

He says the communists should center their attention on factories and trade unions [the old boring from within], and he says the automobile strike shows the growth of a real people's united front—a movement which will embrace also the most aggressive revolutionary minded section of the working class—the communists and the communist party.

As No. 1 communist in America, William Z. Foster, in a pamphlet on steel in January, pulls political action out of the background, and says the next months should see great political activity by workers, farmers and lower middle class elements, as he terms them.

"Meanwhile," he says, "they should also systematically set up local and state Farmer-Labor parties. This whole developing movement should go in the direction of the formation, as soon as possible, of a great National Farmer-Labor party, the beginning of a broad people's front in the United States."

Veiled Threat to Leaders.

As to Mr. Lewis and other C. I. O. leaders, Mr. Foster, while applauding them, makes a veiled threat—"new tests will be made of their responsiveness to the masses' needs." Mr. Foster was three times communist candidate for president, is national chairman of that party, and is a member of the executive committee of the Moscow communist international.

He was a leader in the steel strike of 1919, then being with the American Federation of Labor, and in his book he says drives should be made to unionize metals and electrical workers, textile workers, truck, bus and taxi drivers, the packing houses, metal mines, food, lumber and agricultural workers, and white collar workers, teachers, technicians, office workers and government employés.

Not Bound by C. I. O.

Earl Browder, secretary of the communist party, in a pamphlet on the people's front, speaking of Mr. Lewis and his C. I. O. group, says the communists will support them but will not be bound by any limitations they may impose on communist independent activities. "It is our task," he says, "also to widen the vision of the forces around the Lewis group."

Likewise exhibiting the effort to gain control of labor for political purposes, the resolutions of the 9th communist convention in New York last June speaks of a policy of complete separation of workers from the Democratic and Republican parties. "It means," it says, "the utmost development of the united front of the working class and its organizations and the building up of a powerful people's front—a Farmer-Labor party—as a coalition of the working class, the toiling farmers, Negroes and middle classes." This, it says, will create conditions for the socialist revolution, soviet power and socialism.

Old Foes Work with Lewis.

Years ago when the ultra radicals started their boring from within in organized labor, the communists were battled to a finish by Samuel Gompers and William Green of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Lewis, as president of the United Mine Workers of America, the largest single labor union in the world, for years led a similar fight. Incidentally, one of the reasons given for the speed with which a union collective bargaining contract was made between U. S. Steel and the Steel Workers Organizing committee of the C. I. O. was the reputation of the United Mine Workers under Mr. Lewis for adherence to contract.

In the C. I. O., some of Lewis' former enemies are now working in his group, some of them apparently picked because of their ability and experience as organizers. Among many old labor men there is much conjecture that sooner or later the strange bedfellows may try to push each other out.

WPA Workers Pick Cactus Bed for Sitdown Strike

Marfa, Tex., April 24.—[Special.]—Bird Mitchell has returned to his town home here from his ranch in the Davis mountains, leaving thirty Mexican WPA workers on a sitdown strike, and at last accounts the disgruntled laborers were still sitting on the ground amid the cacti where they had thrown down their tools when their demands for higher wages were refused. The Mexicans were employed in clearing the ranch of the loco weed which is a government project.

HINES Bonded PRECISION LUMBER!

Investigate this NEW-TYPE lumber

USE OF unseasoned, inferior lumber in a new home is no laughing matter for the owner. This type of lumber shrinks after the house is built. As it shrinks it moves. Walls crack. Floors squeak. The owner faces years of costly upkeep.

Hines Bonded Precision Lumber banishes these costly upkeep worries—

1. Because it is scientifically stabilized to Chicago's climate. Won't shrink, warp, or twist.
2. Because it is denser, sturdier wood. It takes three times as many blows to drive a nail through Precision Lumber as it does through common lumber.

If you want your new home to stand staunch and true for centuries, insist on the use of this marvelous new-type lumber. Have it specified for the vital hidden frame. Demand it in joists, studs, rafters, sheathing, sub-flooring, and finish flooring. And be sure to get the official Chicago Lumber Institute Certificate of Inspection as proof of its proper use.

Hines Precision Lumber can be used in your new home at a cost of only one cent for each dollar invested. Get the facts before you build. Ask your architect—or call at nearest Hines Yard and see for yourself or call Hines Survey Department, Canal 0349.

HINES Bonded PRECISION LUMBER is insurance AGAINST

★ Squeaky Floors ★ Cracked Walls
★ Vibrating Frame ★ Jamming Doors

Adds Less Than $50 to Small Home Cost!

• You naturally expect Hines Bonded Precision Lumber is too expensive. Judged by its tremendous advantages in strength, density, and stability, it should cost twice as much as common lumber. But actually it adds but a very few dollars to building costs—less than $50 to a small house—less than $90 to a $10,000 house. At this amazing price it should be specified for even the smallest, most unpretentious home.

20 YEARS TO PAY FOR YOUR NEW HOME

• Now, under Government FHA terms, it is easier to pay for a new home than ever before. You can pay as little as one-fifth down. Your lot will usually take care of this down payment. Take 20 years to pay the balance in monthly payments just like rent. Often you can pay for your new home on these terms in smaller monthly payments than you now pay in rent. . . . And you'll own your home. Hines will arrange every detail of your home financing. No delay. No red tape. No embarrassment. Phone or write today to have a Hines representative call and explain Hines Precision Lumber and this easy finance plan. Address:

FORD OFFICIAL SPEEDING WEST FOR PEACE TALK

California Sitdown Ends After 12 Hours.

Richmond, Cal., April 24.—(AP)—An official of the Ford Motor company and a union leader were speeding here tonight to settle a situation involving sitdowners, 600 of whom evacuated the big west coast assembly plant today.

The strikers marched out, shouting and smiling as their leaders announced Ford officials would settle a complaint of discrimination against 12 workers. The strike lasted 12 hours.

Higher Officials En Route.

Frank Slaby, strike leader and local president of the United Automobile Workers, said Ed Hall, international vice president of the union, and a high Ford company official were en route from Detroit.

Slaby said the plant's 1,800 workers would return to their jobs Monday pending adjustment of the dispute. He asserted, however, a strike might develop in the General Motors Fisher body plant in neighboring Oakland, unless that company reëmployed a man said to have been discharged for union activities.

In Detroit, when it was suggested that an A. F. of L. group might act for employés of the company, an official quoted President Edsel Ford as saying there was "nothing we can add to what already has been said publicly." Henry Ford recently said his employés were "free to join anything they want to," adding they were "foolish if they join any union."

Ready for More Trouble.

Stockton, Cal., April 24.—(AP)—Peace enveloped Stockton's labor battlefield today pending cannery strike mediation efforts, but county authorities indicated opposing forces were increasing their potential fighting power.

Sherif Harvey O'Dell said:

"I will use five thousand deputies instead of five hundred if there is any further trouble."

After rumors that workers from the San Francisco bay area might aid the cannery strikers four sherifs of neighboring counties offered to supply more deputies.

In Sacramento, Gov. Frank F. Merriam stood by, waiting to assume the rôle of mediator whenever representatives of the opposing sides were willing. He announced that a new peace conference had been called for tomorrow morning at Stockton.

Eleven hundred men employed on the Parker dam, south of Boulder dam on the Colorado river, struck today for a daily increase of a dollar and the recognition of the C. I. O. as their bargaining agent. Half of them are WPA workers. Unskilled workers have been receiving 45 cents an hour and the skilled men $1.10.

C. I. O. Seeks Peace Offer.

Lewiston, Me., April 24.—(AP)—Powers Hapgood, a leader of the shoe workers' strike which has affected 19 Lewiston-Auburn shoe factories, tonight promised to "consider any offer of settlement as a basis for immediate discussion."

Hapgood, New England secretary for the Committee for Industrial Organization, made the proposal in a press conference as the strike, recently the cause of rioting, went into its second month with manufacturers still adamant in their refusal to deal with the C. I. O.

Steel helmeted National Guardsmen, with bayonets fixed to their rifles, did sentry duty in factory areas for the fourth day; C. I. O. leaders faced a variety of court actions, and strikers planned a mass meeting tomorrow although it might cut off their relief food supply by injunction. Such a move, said Hapgood, was "unconstitutional." "There is no law to prevent charity," he added.

Lewiston and Auburn police chiefs tonight denied a strikers' committee request for a permit to parade tomorrow in celebration of the Supreme court's validation of the Wagner act.

Leaders Held for Trial.

Judge Manser today held seven C. I. O. heads, including Hapgood and William J. Mackesy, strike director, for jury trial Tuesday on charges they violated his injunction.

Plans for a mass meeting tomorrow, with Hapgood as principal speaker, were announced today.

Meanwhile, Gov. Lewis O. Barrows, who sent in the troops Wednesday after a riot, was requested by the Episcopal bishop of Maine and the Maine Methodist conference to mediate the industrial strife resulting from the union demands for higher wages, shorter hours and union recognition.

Hope to Avert Strike.

New York, April 24.—(AP)—Union representatives and officials of eight railroads met tonight in an effort to avert a threatened strike of 25,000 members of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers and Station Employés, which would affect the entire metropolitan area.

The strike was scheduled to go into effect at noon, but was postponed 48 hours after a union conference this morning.

Reach Canadian Plant Pact.

WINDSOR, Ontario, April 24.—(AP)—General Motors officials and representatives of the 550 employés of the company's Windsor plant reached an agreement tonight under which the workers will return to their jobs Monday.

NEW DEAL TRYING 'OLD ARMY GAME' ON JOHN L. LEWIS

Blandishments of Society Their Weapon.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 24.—[Special.]—The capital's "old army game," is being tried on John L. Lewis. Social blandishments are being showered on the beetle browed leader of the Committee for Industrial Organization to bend him to the administration's will.

New Dealers are watching the experiment with bated breath. They look upon Lewis as the one man who can stop Roosevelt at any time on almost any issue. They are certain that if the Lewis grip on labor grows he can name himself President and perhaps dictator of the country in 1940 regardless of Roosevelt's plans.

Knowing that the dominating boss of the mine workers cannot be brow beaten or bullied into line, New Dealers turned to a weapon as old as the capital—the social whirl. Better men than Lewis, they said, have been guided to think the way of their betters through social rushing.

Works with Senators.

The stubborn opposition of many a senator has melted under a White House invitation. Many a lobbyist has achieved his aim by leading a congressional moth to glittering candelabra.

Lewis is getting both barrels of the weapon. Not only is he being showered with invitations but his wife is being "taken up" by the right people. Experience has demonstrated that a tough will may be inclined by judicious cultivation of a social ambitious wife or daughter.

The cultivation of Mrs. Lewis was begun by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, on whose official doorstep labor's problem child was found. Miss Perkins has had Mrs. Lewis' assist at tea pourings and other functions.

Shortly thereafter Lewis at a press conference went out of his way to praise Miss Perkins' administration of her office and to credit her with a great part in the settlement of the General Motors and Chrysler strikes.

From this New Dealers took hope that the "old army game" may succeed. They know as well as Lewis did that even though she resorted to tears Miss Perkins' efforts to settle the General Motors strike collapsed and that she did not inject herself into the Chrysler strike.

"The old army game" has never failed to at least dent a subject, veteran Washingtonians say. It softened Senator Borah and even the late Senator Thomas Walsh, Tea Pot Dome prosecutor.

Some say that it failed on the late Senator Huey P. Long, and others insist that there was no failure because the weapon was abandoned. No one would reinvite the Lousianian.

President Roosevelt led the assault on Huey with an invitation to dinner at his Hyde Park estate. At the dinner, which Huey monopolized, the President's mother, the dowager of Dutchess county, met the senator for the first time.

To the consternation of her son and the amusement of other guests she seized upon an infrequent lull in the senator's monolog to assert loudly: "I can't understand why Franklin went in for politics; he has to associate with such terrible people."

BARGAINING PARLEY WITH TELEGRAPHERS FAILS OF OBJECTIVE

New York, April 24.—(AP)—A collective bargaining conference between union representatives and officials of the Postal Telegraph company adjourned in disagreement today over what constitutes a bargaining unit under the Wagner labor relations act.

The conference was one of a series which began March 24 when the Commercial Telegraphers' union presented demands for wage increases and improved working conditions which company officials said would add 3,155,168 annually to its employé expense.

Robert McLaughlin, general manager of the company, announced at the close of today's session that the conferees had been unable to get together. No date was set for a future conference.

TACT

By CALEB

E. B. B— once told a small group of men of an incident whose lesson he never forgot. At Ogden, Utah, in the railroad station, he was stretching his legs while his transcontinental train paused for fuel. His heart was touched by the plight of a poor woman with four thin children—the two older of whom were begging her for food. They were clad shabbily. The woman was haggard. Mr. B—— neatly folded a ten dollar bill in his hand and, silently walking past her, he grasped her hand and slipped the bill into it.

Showing great surprise, the woman looked at the folded greenback. On the instant, her eyes blazed and she threw the folded bill toward him as far as she could.

One of the men listening to Mr. B—— exclaimed, "What an ungrateful, tactless woman!"

Mr. B—— made a typical response. "No," he said, "it was I who was tactless. No sooner had I pressed the bill into her hand than I recognized my failure. She needed what I could give her. I was crude. I failed in my manner of giving it."

"What should you have done?" asked one of the surprised listeners.

"I should first have engaged the woman in conversation and made her understand my sympathy and prepared her for an acceptance without wounding her pride. Or I could have placed the bill in an envelope and had a messenger give it to her after my train departed so no one could have been at hand whose condescension she might have imagined."

Tact is a great gift and a great asset. But kindly tactlessness represents charity gone awry, sympathy derailed, gentleness at a disadvantage.

Some people can tell a newsboy to keep the change in such a way as to gladden the heart. Others belittle and demean the recipient with the same gesture of generosity.

In education some people have the faculty of leading the budding mind upright and in full pride. Others tactlessly impose their knowledge and impair the teaching.

In business wherever people contact one another, tact is needed which enables everyone to retain full stature. Tact can not be developed for one person by another. It's everyone's task to become tactful on his own.

STRIKE OF 45,000 LONDON BUSMEN VOTED BY UNION

Set for Midnight Friday; Short Day Sought.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 24.—Delegates representing London's 45,000 busmen decided today to strike at midnight next Friday in accordance with notices demanding a seven and a half hour day.

Within a few minutes after the decision was made known, it was announced that the ministry of labor was in touch with the London Passenger Transport board and with the Transport and General Workers' union.

Unless some settlement is reached, no buses will be running in London next Saturday, which is May day. Seventeen days remain for a settlement before May 12, when King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain are to be crowned.

Next Move Up to Board.

Ernest Bevin, general secretary of the Transport and General Workers' union, said this afternoon that the decision of the delegates was unanimous.

"That appears to be the end of the chapter," he said. "If there is to be any further move, it will have to come from the board."

Lord Ashfield, chairman of the London Passenger Transport board, is not in London.

One of the most serious aspects of the threatened strike is that if it occurs the other London transport systems—trains, street cars and trolley buses—may be affected later on.

Meantime strikes among busmen outside of London were spreading. In ten counties surrounding London 8,000 to 10,000 men were out.

Pickets Hinder Buses.

The strikers, who defied the union officials' advice and began the movement in Kent, saw the walkout spread today to Essex, Sussex, Buckinghamshire, Hertfordshire, Cambridgeshire, Bedfordshire, Northamptonshire, Huntingdonshire, and Norfolk. At Cambridge and Norwich 800 men refused to go to work this morning.

Pickets have been posted by the strikers and in some instances men stand before the buses and refuse to let strikebreakers move them.

France Faces Labor Crisis.

PARIS, April 24.—(AP)—Capital and labor lined up tonight for a showdown over the social efforts of Premier Leon Blum's People's Front government.

Labor threatened a general strike if its full demands were not met. Some employers threatened lockouts if the government acceded further to labor's requests.

Building trades workers defied Premier Blum at a Vincennes mass meeting. They were prepared, they said, to use the "full power we possess" to force the government to spend 10 billion francs [$444,400,000] on public works. Blum contends no more money can be spent, and some financial experts say the treasury may be empty by June.

Dock workers demanded that wharves remain idle two days each week. Unionized newspaper printing employés were seeking to halt publication of newspapers two days weekly.

On the employer side, despite expectations that the forthcoming Paris exposition will increase business, hotel keepers and cafés threaten to close if the government applies the 40 hour week to them. The exposition probably will not open until May 17, although May 1 was the date originally set.

Representatives of big industry are touring the country to pledge employers to a "stop labor" movement.

Fight Park Levy Cut

Senator Harold G. Ward presides at hearing on question of whether park district tax levy shall be pegged at $7,600,000 or $9,000,000.

1,300 Newlyweds Among 2,600 Received by Pope

VATICAN CITY, April 24.—(AP)—Pope Pius received 1,300 newlywed couples and 1,300 pilgrims today, the largest number he has welcomed since his illness. He extended brief greetings after being carried in a chair to the throneroom.

SPEAKERS URGE DEFEAT OF SLASH IN PARKS LEVY

Half of Committee Hears Plea for 9 Million.

More than a dozen speakers in rapid fire succession yesterday urged the Illinois general assembly to vote down the impending cut of $1,400,000 in the tax levy of the Chicago park district.

They appeared at an unprecedented hearing in the city council chamber, one that was novel because it was before only one-half of the conference committee considering the bill. They were the seven senate members. The seven members from the house [the chamber which cut the levy from $9,000,000 to $7,600,000] refused last Wednesday to participate in this meeting.

Commission Is Proposed.

Representatives of approximately 100 organizations attended, but the two hour limit set for the meeting permitted only a limited number to speak. The best known among them were Miss Harriet Vittum, head resident of the Northwestern University settlement, and John C. Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Before hearing from the organization spokesmen Chairman Harold G. Ward called on Robert J. Dunham, president of the park board. After describing the effects of the proposed cut, President Dunham proposed the creation of a citizens' park commission to investigate park revenues and expenditures. He is expected to present this proposal in definite form to the park board at its next meeting.

Miss Vittum, a civic leader in Chicago for many years, pictured Chicago's system of parks and boulevards as one of its greatest assets.

"Chicago hasn't always had the greatest reputation in the world for beauty, for love of beauty, or for knowledge of things beautiful," she said. "We have been very busy during all the life of Chicago getting ourselves built, getting our industries built, getting ourselves ready to conduct the business of completing a good place for people to live.

"Gradually, however, in recent decades, we have been building a thing beautiful which is now the talk of the world. All the world comes to see Chicago's park and boulevard system.

Support by People Told.

"We have come to have a pride and a love for this system that is unequaled by any other activity, probably, in all Chicago. That is evidenced by the way the people of Chicago, rich and poor, have always supported bond issues for park extensions, for bathing beaches and other park purposes.

"These things must never be allowed to drop. They must go on to ever larger resources of enjoyment and culture for all of Chicago's people. We will never, without protest, submit to a reduction in this service. And we are not asking for any new expenditure of funds.

"The people of Chicago want the parks developed and the people of Chicago ask the legislature to continue the support of the last two years."

"I have been surprised," said President Fitzpatrick, "at the tremendous activity undertaken by the park district to bring these benefits into the life of the people. And we want more of it. We don't want any curtailment of it. We are ready to bear any burden to make these things possible."

Other Speakers Appear.

Other speakers were J. R. Batchelor, Chicago representative of the National Recreation commission, Mrs. W. H. Hermsdorf, president of the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's organizations; the Rev. Samuel Knox Wilson, president of Loyola university; Mrs. Charles W. Balch of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers; Judson Parker of the Englewood Kiwanis club; Dr. Ernest W. Burgess of the department of sociology of the University of Chicago, Thomas Watts of the Old Timers' Athletic association; Harry K. Eby of the Boy Scouts; George Fleming of the Keep Chicago Safe committee, and Frasier T. Lane of the Chicago Urban league.

The committee President Dunham proposed be appointed to investigate park income and expenditures would include at least nine members. Those he named were President Fitzpatrick, John O. Rees, Douglas Sutherland, Col. A. A. Sprague, Shelby M. Singleton, Mrs. W. H. Hermsdorf, Thomas E. Wilson, Max Murdock, and Herbert Bebb.

PROXY BRIDE ASSAILS VENEZUELAN CUSTOM, BUT GETS HER MAN

New York, April 24.—[Special.]—The Venezuelan custom by which a couple may marry by proxy, and get together for the honeymoon weeks later, is really not such a good practice, a pretty bride declared today.

Senora Don Juan Lecuna, who just has been married that way and ought to know, would have much preferred to have the husband around somewhere.

She took the vows with the first deputy bridegroom in Caracas, Venezuela.

"After the ceremony," she said, "we had champagne, much champagne.

"Then I wrote Juan a long love letter. Then I retired.

"And the next day, so excited I was, I sailed for America."

The bride was met here by her husband, who placed a wedding ring on her finger to complete the ceremony.

6 Doctors, Police Remove Rake from Child's Throat

New York, April 24.—[Special.]—A private physician, a police radio car and five doctors at Trinity hospital in Brooklyn coöperated this afternoon to save a three year old girl from choking to death when a toy rake became lodged in her throat. She remained in the hospital to be treated for lacerations of the palate and larynx.

★ "I CHANGED TO CHRYSLER BECAUSE OF THE GOLD SEAL ENGINE!"

"THE ROYAL is my first Chrysler. When we looked at all the cars near Chrysler's price, we decided the Gold Seal engine was the most modern. I guess we figured correctly, because our new Royal uses less gas than any car we ever owned."

CHARLES H. BECKER, Chicago, Ill.

CHRYSLER ROYAL DEFEATS NINE SMALLER CARS IN ECONOMY TEST!

UNDER OFFICIAL A. A. A. supervision, the Chrysler Royal showed 22.14 miles per gallon for 352 miles in the Gilmore-Yosemite economy run. Four cars with smaller engines failed to do as well. Eight cars of lesser roominess could not match Chrysler's record. No wonder owners everywhere agree: the big, roomy Chrysler Royal has the thriftiest power on the road.

★ "18 TO 20 MILES PER GALLON IN BUSINESS DRIVING!" "MY BUSINESS is building, and I picked the Royal as a smart, modern car in which to call on my clients. With the marvelous Overdrive and the new Gold Seal engine, I get between 18 and 20 miles per gallon day after day."

SENATOR LEWIS URGES U. S. TAKE GOODS ON DEBTS

Sees President This Week to Ask Acceptance.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 24.—[Special.]—A shipment to the United States of a billion or more dollars' worth of food supplies and manufactured products as a part payment on the war debts has been suggested to the state department by several of the debtor nations.

This was revealed today by Senator James Hamilton Lewis [D., Ill.], who said he approved of the offer. He will confer with President Roosevelt early this week, he announced, and urge acceptance of the offers of goods. He will recommend that the commodities be distributed for use by states for relief purposes.

State Department Issues Denial.

The state department issued the usual denial that it has under consideration any proposal for settlement of the debts. Senator Lewis insisted, however, that his information was based upon authoritative sources.

The offer aroused particular interest and has caused the state department to give it serious study because of President Roosevelt's plea of last week for economy. Congress has been perplexed concerning how to practice "restraint" in appropriations when the President's budget continues to recommend higher sums for the various departments.

Distribution of a vast amount of supplies for relief might facilitate the slashing of the relief appropriation, which has been set at one and one-half billions for the fiscal year 1938 by the President.

Question Going to President.

"I propose," said Senator Lewis, "to present to the President in the conference set for us in the next day or so that our government consider seriously these propositions. They, I understand, are in the possession of the state department and the President. They contain an offer of adjustment of the debt which amounts to an offer of goods, together with other suggestions of a reconsideration or a readjustment of the remainder of the fund due."

WHIPS HUSBAND SHE FINDS WITH ANOTHER WOMAN

New York, April 24.—[Special.]—Accused by the manager of the La Rue restaurant of "horse whipping" William R. Seymour, a diner in the restaurant, smashing valuable crockery and causing such a disturbance that 70 other customers departed without paying their checks, three married women were arrested tonight on disorderly conduct charges. They were identified as Mrs. Tupple Seymour, 37, wife of Seymour, who was alleged to have wielded the "horse whip"—a dog leash; Mrs. Edith MacNab, 55, her sister, who suffered lacerations in the fight, and Mrs. Robert Adams, 47, another sister. According to the police the disturbance occurred when the women found Seymour in the restaurant with a strange woman.

Woman Charged with Neglecting Six Dogs

Mrs. Dorothy Whittle, operator of a tavern in Half Day, in Lake county, was arrested last evening on a charge of cruelty to animals brought by Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin of Lake Forest, who told Justice of the Peace Peter J. Duffy that six famished Scotch terriers were brought to the haven Friday by a man who said he found them starving in the kennels behind a vacant house formerly occupied by Mrs. Whittle. Mrs. Whittle posted bond and denied she has been neglecting the dogs.

WIFE SLAYER SENTENCED.

Denver, Colo., April 24.—(AP)—Marion James Linden, former Texas and Nebraska youth convicted of killing his wife, Arlene, was sentenced today to from seven to eight years in the state penitentiary.

NEW FIREBOAT ARRIVES

The Fred A. Busse, photographed as it chugged into the Chicago river last night after trip from Bay City, Mich., where it was built.

NEW FIRE BOAT ARRIVES, AND 10 GUESTS ARE GLAD

Chicago received its new fireboat, the Fred A. Busse, at the Navy pier last night. Those made glad by its arrival included bandsmen and a reception committee who had been waiting since the afternoon, hundreds of motorists attracted to the scene by fire department sirens, and ten of the 25 guests on the boat, who had become sick since joining the trip at Racine, Wis.

The band struck up the semi-official fire department anthem, "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," as the bright red 92 foot craft swung around the end of the pier. Motorists and drivers of fire trucks played their lights on the boat, which was promptly overrun by children and other sightseers.

Leaving Bay City, Mich., where it was built, the boat became ice bound on Monday. It put in at Racine yesterday morning after a stormy crossing. The boat is the largest Diesel-powered fireboat ever built. It can pump 10,000 gallons of water per minute and has a maximum speed of 15 miles per hour.

ONION MAESTRO GIVES ACCOUNT OF STEWARDSHIP

A report on the management of the Cook county hospital was made yesterday by Anton Negri, efficiency expert, who was hired by the county board on Feb. 11 at an annual salary of $25,000 on his promise to save the county $100,000 a year.

In the report, sent to Clayton F. Smith, president of the county board, Negri outlined the changes he has made in coördinating several departments at the hospital and in improving the quality of the meals at lower cost.

Negri, who is rated an expert in mass cooking, catering and hotel management, said that he has improved the hospital food through the use of his standardized recipes. On taking charge at the hospital Negri declared that the institution was buying so many onions at a time that they sprouted whiskers a foot long before they were used.

Doctor Injured Assisting 2 Women Hurt in Falls

Madison, Neb., April 25.—(AP)—Mrs. E. O. Wilson stepped back from a door while talking to Mrs. F. A. Long here last night. Mrs. Wilson fell, suffering a fractured left hip and bruises. Mrs. Long ran to her assistance, stumbled, and she suffered a broken arm and rib and deep scalp wounds. Mrs. Long's husband, a physician, went to the rescue of the two women. In assisting them he suffered a back strain.

KING ZOG OF ALBANIA STILL SEEKING WIFE. ONE WITH $5,000,000

TIRANA, Albania, April 24.—(AP)—King Zog of Albania still wants a wife, but royal romance comes high.

King Zog.

Diplomats, denying rumors of his engagement to a member of Italian aristocracy, said there remained two obstacles to the king's marriage. The first is to find a wife with at least $5,000,000; the second is to get four of his sisters married off.

Albania is a poor country with a possible future in oil. Zog figures an heiress—perhaps an American—not only would bring him a personal fortune, but would aid him in interesting the United States or some other country in his little kingdom.

HEIR OF U. S. ARMY NOTABLES HIT BY WIFE FOR TACTICS

James Starr 3d Framed Her in Raid, She Says.

New York, April 24.—[Special.]—James Starr II., 22, member of a family which has supplied seven generations of United States army notables—including an aid to Gen. Washington, a secretary of war of 1812—was named by his estranged wife today as the commander in chief of a framed divorce raid.

Mrs. Margaret Schroeder Starr, 22, daughter of a Lutheran minister and an honor graduate of the New York Liberal Arts college, made the charge in Supreme court, replying to a divorce suit filed by Starr.

The young wife, who supports herself as interpreter for a midtown hotel at $17 a week, was married to Starr on July 9, 1935. He is the favorite grandson of wealthy Mrs. Charles G. Ayres. Now she accuses him of sending an agent, one Ed Harley, to cultivate her acquaintance and to escort her to her sister's apartment, where Mrs. Starr was residing.

Recounts Insistence of Youth.

"Harley was very insistent on seeing me that night," said Mrs. Starr, after explaining she had known him for a week. "When we arrived at my home I prepared to retire and my sister prepared to go out with Mr. Harley."

A knock sounded at the door, however, she said, and her husband entered. He was accompanied, she related, by Bill Pack, whom Harley had identified as one of his friends, and by a fellow officer of Starr's regiment. They announced it was a raid and then stalked out, the wife declared.

Starr's complaint charged that his wife was guilty of misconduct that evening with an unidentified man, but Mrs. Starr insisted she was the victim of a frameup, fraud, and collusion.

Testifies Accomplice Confessed.

She declared that Harley telephoned her a week after the raid to say he was sorry to be involved in such a contemptible piece of business and that he acted in collusion with Starr and his friends.

Her complaint charged also a conspiracy on the part of Starr's family to rid itself of her. Starr now lives with his grandmother and received from her large sums to maintain his rôle of Park avenue playboy, according to the young wife. She will appear in Supreme court May 8 to request temporary alimony and counsel fees.

Edward A. Strobel being kissed by his wife after he was freed by jury yesterday on girl's rape charge.

IT ARE AN ERROR BUT LET IT RIDE, SAYS NEW DEAL

Washington, D. C., April 24.—(AP)—Some clerk on Capitol hill nodded drousily, so the new Guffey-Vinson coal control bill is likely to go on the statute books with a typographical error in it. The engrossed bill, as sent to President Roosevelt for signature, contained an "are" where an "or" should have been. But legislators decided that the meaning was plain, and so suggested that the President sign it that way, instead of sending it back to congress.

TEACHER FREED ON RAPE CHARGE; GETS JOB BACK

Edward A. Strobel, 45 years old, suspended gymnasium teacher at the Darwin elementary school, was found not guilty by a Criminal court jury yesterday of the statutory rape of a former girl pupil, 15 years old.

His acquittal automatically restored hi mto the public school pay roll. He will receive back pay from March 11, the day of his suspension, according to James B. McCahey, president of the board of education.

Strobel, who was accompanied to court by his wife, Rose [who had expressed complete faith in her husband's innocence], seemed bewildered as he heard the verdict. Mrs. Strobel cried out hysterically, flung both arms about her husband's neck, and showered his face with kisses. As the significance of the verdict dawned upon him Strobel's pale, bespectacled face lighted with a broad smile and he rushed forward and thanked each of the jurors in turn. Strobel's accuser was not in court.

HOMES DAMAGED AS TORNADO HITS TOWN IN ILLINOIS

Raymond, Ill., April 24.—[U.P.]—A tornado swept north through this village shortly after midnight today along a path about 200 yards in width.

The front of a two story building occupied by an implement firm was torn off and the roof of the village grade school was damaged. Windows were blown out of 15 homes. None was injured.

Trafic on state highway 48, which the twister followed, was held up by the debris with state police rerouting trucks through the town.

DENHARDT'S TOY GUN RULED OUT AT DEATH TRIAL

Mrs. Taylor on the morning and afternoon before her death, gave no evidence that she was contemplating suicide.

There was testimony today that Denhardt owns a fountain pen pistol, which might support the theory that he had this on the night of the shooting and fired it to distract attention from himself. The judge later ordered this evidence stricken, on the defense plea that it was mere "hearsay."

Charles Powell and his son, Roy, both residents of La Grange and friends of Gen. Denhardt, told the jury in Judge Charles C. Marshall's court that on a visit to the Denhardt farm last summer the general spoke of this pistol as among his collection of firearms. The elder Powell attempted to describe how it could be pulled out of a vest pocket in an emergency. His testimony was ordered stricken from the record, but the statement of Roy that "I heard Denhardt say he had a fountain pen pistol" was not challenged.

It is left for the jury to determine whether Denhardt might have had that pistol in his pocket on the night of Mrs. Taylor's death on a country road and after the firing of the first shot from his service revolver, which killed her, the toy pistol had been fired to throw more mystery into the scene.

The testimony of George R. Baker, the farmer in front of whose home the shooting occurred, was to the effect that he heard a loud shot and several minutes later a pop like a pistol. In an earlier examination he had stated that "Denhardt could not have killed the woman because I was with him when the second shot was fired." In his examination, he said he came out of the house and saw Denhardt moving about near his parked car at about the time he heard the second shot. The shot from the little pistol came just before he saw Denhardt, he said.

An effort was made at the trial today to have the fisrt statement of Baker stricken from the record, but the plea was not allowed. This is the first hard blow the state has received in presentation of its case.

Brother, Sherif Examine Ground.

The condition of the ground at the spot where Mrs. Taylor's body was found in a ditch, 600 feet from the Baker home, formed an important part of today's evidence.

Sherif Walter Briggs of Oldham county told of a visit to the spot on the morning of Nov. 7. He saw about 20 small heel tracks, he said, on the edge of the road just above where the body had been found. These were in a small space and all at the same angle.

Roy Garr, a brother of Mrs. Taylor, studied this ground condition that same afternoon, he testified.

"I saw her heel marks where she had backed up four or five times," he said.

He stepped from the stand and illustrated to the jury how the marks looked. He backed slowly away as if in a struggle.

Her Shoes in Court.

The shoes which Mrs. Taylor had worn that day, on her visit to Louisville with Denhardt and the ride toward home which ended in her death, were brought into court. The jurors also were shown the black crêpe dress she wore, the black caracul coat, the little black hat, and even the pink underthings, including the blood-stained slip.

Smith Keightley, La Grange embalmer, identified all these garments and described how he had been called to the scene of the death at 10:30 p. m.

"She had on one shoe," he said, "and the other was lying by her left elbow. The gun was about four feet away, on the bank. The bullet entrance was an inch below the left breast. The exit was two inches higher, midway between the shoulder blade and the backbone. There was a bruise on the inside of her right thigh about five inches in diameter. There were no powder particles on her skin and no powder burns on the clothing. There was little blood."

Found Denhardt Nervous.

Asked what Denhardt had said to him that night, he replied:

"He seemed weary and nervous. He asked me what the attitude of the Garr boys would be toward finding her dead in his presence and whether he ought to go home with the body or go to his farm.

"I asked him how she had come to do this. He said she had threatened to kill herself that afternoon and he had taken the gun away from her. I said that if she loved him well enough to wear his ring, she was leaving him in an awful spot.

"He said she had promised to leave a note explaining everything. I said we probably would find the note at the house, but he said he did not think so. He said they had argued and she had talked that afternoon of giving back the ring.

"He said the girls [her two daughters] objected to him keeping company with her and kept nagging her, and that she was weary and had threatened to kill herself.

"He said, 'You know I didn't kill her. I loved her. We were to be married in about a month. I couldn't kill her.'"

This witness told of a visit with officers to the Denhardt home on the following Monday, when spots resembling blood were found on the overcoat which Denhardt had worn on the ride with Mrs. Taylor. At that time paraffin casts were made of the general's hands to make tests for powder reactions. The witness did not give the results, as the judge said he had not been qualified. The overcoat was presented in evidence. Spots were pointed out on the lapel, on the front, and on the inside of the coat.

Keightley said on cross-examination that Denhardt was sober when he saw him the night of the shooting.

Mechanic Finds Body.

Cuba Schaffer, automobile mechanic who was called out to repair the Denhardt car on the night of the shooting, described Denhardt's actions. Schaffer said he had no idea there had been anything except car trouble when he arrived.

"Denhardt said Mrs. Taylor had gone up the road and that he had heard a shot," Schaffer continued. "He said his gun was gone from his car and asked me what I thought had happened. I said maybe Mrs. Taylor had killed herself.

"We took a lantern and a flashlight and went up the road. I saw her in the ditch.

"Denhardt asked me to see if she was dead. I told him she was.

Denhardt Avoids Body.

"Denhardt did not go near the body. He asked if she had on a ring.

"The gun was on the bank. He asked me to take him home."

D. L. Ricketts, coroner of Henry county, told of getting Denhardt's overcoat at the farm on Nov. 9. Denhardt said to him:

"Don't let any one put blood on it, because there's none on it now."

The coroner added: "I said to him, 'Since you mention blood, let's take it out and see.' We went into the yard and he looked and started to scratch at it, and he started to say something he never finished."

"Was there blood on it then?" the attorney questioned.

"There was," the coroner testified. "There were fifteen or twenty spots, smears and trickles on the coat."

DENHARDT JURORS TAKE STROLL

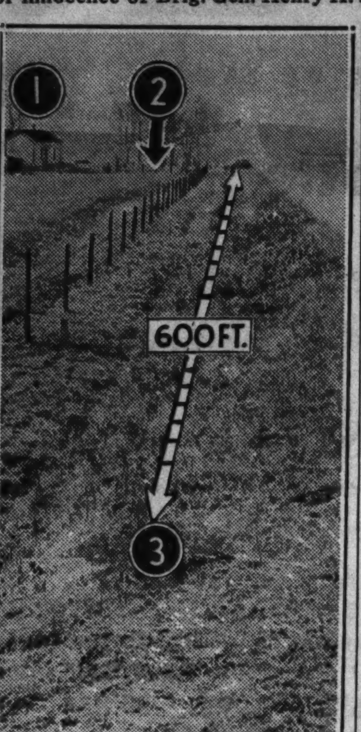
The twelve farmers and business men of the blue grass region of Kentucky who will decide the guilt or innocence of Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt, charged with the murder of his fiancee, Mrs. Verna Garr Taylor, go for an airing around the courthouse at New Castle, Ky. [Acme Photo.]



The scene of the slaying: (1) Home of George R. Baker; (2) spot near Denhardt's auto where he talked with Baker after first shot was heard, and (3) the place where Mrs. Taylor's body was found.

SUDDENLY BACK, ANN HARDING IS QUEBEC VISITOR

QUEBEC, April 24.—(AP)—Ann Harding, star of stage and screen, arrived here unexpectedly from England today on the Duchess of Atholl just 24 hours after a Quebec judge had annulled an unserved warant for her arrest on a kidnaping charge. Accompanied by her husband of three months, Werner Janssen, composer and orchestra conductor, and her daughter Jane, 9 years old, Miss Harding boarded a train almost immediately—presumably for New York. It was Jane whom the actress was accused of kidnaping in the warant which her former husband and Jane's father, Harry Bannister, procured here almost a year ago in an effort to prevent Miss Harding from taking the child abroad.

City Is Sued for $76,000 as Billboards Are Smeared

Lincoln, Neb., April 24.—(AP)—Mayor Charles W. Bryan's order to smear several outdoor advertising billboards here with red and yellow paint bounced back into the city's lap today. The Waller Displays, Inc., through its attorney, filed claims for $76,050 damages against the city, alleging the city smeared, painted and superimposed grotesque figures on artistic advertising posters.

GOING WEST TO TEACH.

Dr. Lawrence Murray Graves of the University of Chicago will serve as an associate professor of mathematics at Leland Stanford university during the summer of 1938, it was announced yesterday.

Rebuke for Broken Dish Called Skillet Murder Cause

Murphysboro, Ill., April 24.—[U. P.]—Elbert C. Lamb, 16, who confessed the murder of Mrs. Mary Wright Flannery, 82, wealthy widow of East St. Louis, Ill., was brought here today because of anger against him in that city. Lamb, who was captured in Eldorado, Kas., said he killed her with an iron skillet "because she cursed me when I broke one of her dishes." A coroner's jury ordered him held on a charge of homicide.

Dapper Bandit Gets $2,500 in Stevens Store Holdup

Scaling a partition 7 feet high, a dapper, youthful gunman took $2,500 yesterday in a holdup of the cashier's office of the Charles A. Stevens & Co. store at 19 North State street. He pointed his weapon at the ten women and five men in the office on the seventh floor while he took the cash from Otto Brombeck, the cashier. Then he climbed the partition again, rang for an elevator, dragged out Miss Marguerite Brouillet, the operator, and descended.

LEADING THE WORLD

IN THE FINE CAR FIELD

AMERICA IS BUYING almost as many Cadillac-Fleetwoods as all other fine cars put together! It is the greatest public approval ever won by a builder in the quality field.

The reason for this is obvious. Cadillac has refused to lower its standards in order to enter a lower-price range. Both its engineering and its manufacturing are still the finest it is possible to attain.

One ride will show you what this means in terms of a better automobile. In performance, in beauty, in comfort, and in its general quality and luxury—Cadillac-Fleetwood stands completely alone. Why not come in today for a demonstration?

HIZI KOYKE, JAP SOPRANO, SCORES AGAIN IN CHICAGO

Stars in San Carlo Troupe 'Madame Butterfly.'

BY CECIL SMITH.

An enthusiastic house greeted the best performance of "Madame Butterfly" Chicago has seen in several years at the San Carlo Opera company's matinée in the Auditorium theater yesterday. A second capacity audience in the evening applauded Gounod's "Faust," sung by Leola Turner, Charlotte Bruno, Rolf Gerard, Mostyn Thomas, and Harold Kravitt.

Ever since Fortune Gallo, impresario of the San Carlo troupe, discovered the dainty Japanese soprano Hizi Koyke nine years ago, "Madame Butterfly" has been an assured box office success. The bittersweet tragedy of little Cho-Cho-San, whose life was blighted by Lieut. Benjamin Franklin Pinkerton, U. S. N., in the days when all Japan was easy prey for unscrupulous Americans, seems to possess deathless appeal for American audiences.

A Special Occasion.

Yesterday, however, was a special occasion, for Hizi Koyke fully and finally established herself as one of the great emotional singing actresses of the operatic stage. No other Cho-Cho-San singing here in the last decade has penetrated so deep into the character, or sung and moved about the stage with more resourceful art.

Perhaps Miss Koyke had a premonition of the success she would make, for in her entrance scene she appeared in a new headdress embellished with glittering jewels and pendants. Perhaps Mr. Gallo knew, too, for he lavishly cast opposite her Dimitri Onofrei, his star tenor and a good one, and Mario Valle, whose performance of the American consul does honor to our diplomatic service.

The Unanimous Fireflies.

With these admirable artists on the stage, who could cavil at the unanimity of opinion among the fireflies which caused them all to light up and go out at precisely the same instant, time and time again?

The spring engagement of the San Carlo company closes tonight with "Il Trovatore." Bianca Saroya will sing the leading soprano rôle, and not Leonora Corona, as stated on another page of this issue.

VICTIMS OF THE DUST BOWL

Everybody lends a hand as members of two families prepare to abandon their farm in northeastern Colorado's dust bowl near Purcell to resettle on a government irrigated project near Grand Junction, Colo. About 100 families will be moved under the resettlement program.

DIAMOND BROKER HELD; ACCUSED IN DILLINGER PLOT

Meyer Gordon, 45 years old, 3565 Pine Grove avenue, a diamond broker at 27 East Monroe street, was held on $5,000 bond when arraigned before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker yesterday for removal to New York City. He is under indictment there for violation of the national stolen property act. The hearing was continued until April 29 after he filed a plea of not guilty.

Gordon is charged in the New York indictment with conspiring to transport $21,000 worth of bonds stolen from the American Bank and Trust company at Racine, Wis., on Nov. 20, 1933. The robbery was committed by the gang headed by the late John Dillinger, notorious desperado. Morris Renkoff and Albert S. Montlake of New York City are under indictment in the same case.

Tie Captor to Tree, Steal Car, Four Felons Free

Tallahassee, Fla., April 24.—(AP)—E. A. Atwater, prison transfer agent, was handcuffed to a tree by four white convicts who confiscated his motor car and escaped. A passing farmer had to cut down the tree to free him.

Plane Propeller Cuts Off Girl's Arm; Hits Her Head

Chanute, Kas., April 24.—[U. P.]—Miss Bethene Thomas, 22, lost an arm when she walked into an airplane propeller. The spinning propeller also struck her a glancing blow on the forehead.

First Major Trek

Purcell, Colo., April 24.—(AP)—Six dusty years—when "black rollers" were a terror and fields blew skyward—ended today for a dozen Colorado families.

They packed belongings and headed westward—the first of more than 100 "drylanders" to move from the dust bowl to green, irrigated acres west of the Continental divide.

It was the first major trek of families from the southwestern dust area under federal resettlement plan. All were residents of this community.

First families to participate in the project were selected for good health, financial stability, and farming experience.

The government purchased their arid farms, paying about $4 an acre, and financed purchase of the irrigated tracts of 60 to 80 acres each.

Mrs. Margery F. Nast Wins Divorce in Reno

Reno, Nev., April 24.—(AP)—Mrs. Margery F. Nast, daughter of the late Felix Feist, motion picture executive, won an uncontested divorce today from Myron C. Nast of Beverly Hills, Cal. Nast is a grandnephew of the famous cartoonist, Thomas Nast. Mrs. Nast charged cruelty. They have two children.

Measure Signed to Equip Congress Library for Blind

Washington, D. C., April 24.—(AP)—President Roosevelt signed today a bill providing a $275,000 annual appropriation to the Library of Congress for purchases for the blind. Of the total, $175,000 is to be spent for sound reproduction records and $100,000 for books in raised characters.

DEFENSE IN THE PACIFIC.

The splendid enterprise of the Pan-American Airways system is one of the marked features of America's remarkable part in the conquest of the air. The success of recent flights to Honolulu has greatly strengthened our hold upon the Hawaiian Islands, our main outpost in the Pacific, although Pan-American is a commercial undertaking. Meanwhile this development of peace times and purposes will raise the query in the citizens' mind, what are the army and navy doing on their part?

The navy is naturally in advance in this particular field, where it has a special responsibility for our communications. The army must put its main reliance upon the navy if it is to take an effective part in the defense of our island outposts. Upon this assumption the navy for several years has been procuring long range airplanes, the latest ships ranging from 1,500 to 3,400 miles. The navy's new long range patrol bombers, of the type which has been recently flown from San Diego to Honolulu, carry a heavy military load for 3,400 miles. Qualitatively this equipment is excellent but quantitatively not so satisfactory. The army situation is even less assuring. Up to four years ago the army's longest range airplanes were bombers capable of flying, nonstop, only 800 miles. The army now has bombers with a maximum range of 3,300 miles, but there are only four. All are the new Boeing four engined ships, just delivered. The war department has just announced that it has ready for trials a huge new Boeing bomber plane, a third larger than the China Clipper. It is designed for a range of 6,000 miles, carrying a military load of four tons all the way.

The army has three Douglas amphibians carrying fuel for about 2,700 miles; also two attack planes built by Northrup that carry fuel 2,000 miles.

Navy airmen are specially trained for long distance flight, although army pilots flew to Honolulu years ago. The army men are accustomed to short flights over the commercial airways and over country which possesses certain points of reference, while navy men have experience of long flights over the featureless oceans, are trained celestial navigators and are trained in the use of radio equipment which the army does not possess.

Not less important perhaps than the Hawaiian outpost is our much less prominent base in the Aleutians on Unalaska Island. While the Japanese naval and military departments undoubtedly have all the information they can procure as to the present strength of this base, the American public gives little thought and has no information of this sector of our Pacific front. The navy, however, recognizes its vital strategic value and the recent long range naval planes are expected to cover the ocean from Hawaii to the Aleutians.

How much is being done to develop the Aleutian base we do not know, but its development is essential to our defenses in the Pacific, as it guards an approach which would not be neglected in any general advance upon our shores from the west. The importance of the defense of the canal is recognized by the civilian mind and has had considerable public discussion in past years, but the decisive action of a war in the Pacific is not unlikely to be taken in the strategic triangle of Hawaii, Unalaska, Sands Point, Wash. Not only our navy but our air forces must command this region if we are to have security.

EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENT OF THE JUDICIARY.

The critics of the elective system of judicial selection must find in recent developments some cause for further consideration. The weaknesses of the system have been thoroughly examined by the legal fraternity and the trend of professional opinion has been toward some form of appointment. With the appearance of the President's project to pack the highest tribunal in the land with judges who can be depended upon in advance to conform to his ideas of his authority, the system of executive appointment may seem less attractive. It must suggest that an elective judiciary may be preferable to a terrorized one.

Of course the appointive method of selection in any of the various forms approved by its proponents did not contemplate such a situation as that presented by the court packing scheme. Its object is a greater independence of the judiciary, not its subservience to the appointing authority. Appointment, it is assumed, is not to be exercised so as to make the bench subservient to the will of the executive, but to be so staggered as to avoid any sudden and sweeping change by the executive in the personnel of the judicial branch of government. Nevertheless there has been no safeguard in our own constitution against this resort. Obviously when a court is narrowly divided even one appointment may work a radical change in the trend of judicial decisions. Where the executive, as very often, perhaps even generally, occurs, has the coöperation of the legislative branch of government by procuring a law empowering him to increase the number of judges he may, as Mr. Roosevelt intends, bring about a transformation in the court.

Is it advisable that such transformation rest with the executive, or even the executive in combination with the legislature of the moment? The present popularity of Mr. Roosevelt or approval of his economic and social purposes ought not to obscure the significance of this issue. Do the American people wish to invest the executive branch of government, or even the legislative, with this control of the judiciary? Are they ready to discard the system of checks and balances which generations of Americans have cherished as essential to the preservation of their liberties?

SPRING RHAPSODY.

A good many complaints have been heard in recent weeks directed against the quality of Chicago's weather. The complaints are all unmerited. They assume that the weather this spring has been exceptional. They overlook the fact that Chicago has no spring in the conventional sense, never has had one, and presumably never will have one, at least in this geologic era.

The fact that dwellers in these parts year after year expect something they don't get constitutes a remarkable tribute to the power of the printed word. The literature of western Europe is filled with references to a period after winter and before summer which is called, variously, spring, printemps, fruehling, primavera, and some other things. It is a time of the year when the air is soft and moist, the breezes gentle, the sun's light is yellow, the occasional showers are brief, and the rain is warm. In short, it is a time of the year for softies who can't take it.

If we had that kind of spring in Chicago we wouldn't like it and we'd take steps to change it. It is only because we don't experience it that we are attracted by it. A moment's reflection will show how adversely such a spring would affect life in our community. The coal business would be all but ruined. The gas business likewise. The parks would be thronged with people who at present spend their days and nights improving their minds in the public library. People who had work to do would leave it undone and instead play golf or go picnicking.

Nothing like that happens in a Chicago spring. There is no amusement to be derived from walking amid an April rain in this iron climate. All you get is wet feet and a chill. The best that a softie can expect from our climate in April is a stiff northeast wind blowing down from the straits where the ships still butt their way through the ice floes. Among all the great cities of the world Chicago is unique in that its air is ice cooled in spring as well as in winter. This natural advantage is seldom mentioned by Chicagoans out of regard for the feelings of dwellers in less favored localities. Nothing is to be gained by making these people envious.

THE TEARFUL MUSE.

The centenary of the Yale Literary Magazine has inspired a former chairman of that venerable institution, Prof. Bellinger, to review the poetry contributed by Yale students from 1836 to 1936. The student muse, he finds, of course, has followed the literary fashions, and literary youth is more prone to imitate than to rebel. One tendency seems to have continued throughout all changes. "It does not seem probable," remarks Prof. Bellinger, "that at any time the undergraduate was given to weeping in his proper person, but he continually bedews his page and that apparently quite independent of the trend of fashion in other respects."

But this was not independent of the trend in adult poetry, which at least since the Restoration poets has attuned its lyre to melancholy strains. Even the incorrigible optimist, Browning, was not free from this form of enjoyment, and it is not astonishing that adolescence which is prone to moods of gloom should follow a fashion so general with mature celebrities.

Why lyric poetry has been so persistently bent on tears and has so little occasion for joyous song might be worthy of a psychiatrist's inquiry. All our poets have not starved in attics. Many of them have lived what we common mortals would find rather comfortable and satisfactory lives. If they were more sensitive to the sorrows of the world than the common run of us, they surely must have had moments of happiness, and we wonder why they have so seldom found inspiration in the bright moment.

It is a pity the poets have let us down like that. They have been heard to complain of neglect, but more poetry would be read if there were more cheerful poems. As for the Yale undergraduate, he has been led astray for a century. We doubt, with Prof. Bellinger, that he does much weeping even over a lost game with Harvard, and we suggest that his instructors might do him a service by cutting down his diet of Shelley and Francis Thompson in favor of Peacock, Calverley, Gilbert, and even a dash of Ogden Nash.

"PUTZI" DEPARTS.

[Des Moines Register.]

Ernst Hanfstaengel, who was "Putzi" and personal pianist to Adolf Hitler, left Germany because "der fuehrer" failed to send him a congratulatory telegram on his fiftieth birthday. But that was not just a case of pique over Hitler's neglect of the formal niceties customarily observed among themselves by the Nazi leaders.

When Feb. 11, his birthday, arrived, but brought no telegraphic "happy returns," Hanfstaengel was certain that no return he might make from Bavaria, where he was "vacationing," to Berlin could be a happy one for him.

At London, where he is now living, the former chief of the foreign press section of Minister Goebbels' propaganda department, explained that he left Germany "on a hunch." He simply walked inconspicuously across the Swiss frontier and later traveled to England. It was a feud with Goebbels that prompted his loss of favor with the Nazi dictator and his flight.

With imprisonment or "sudden death" awaiting him should be return to the reich, he is said now to be considering permanent exile.

Hanfstaengel has been close enough to the "throne" in today's Germany to know just how serious his own situation is. And, of course, none of the explanations he is now giving of his absence from Germany are helping his standing at home. The longer he stays away and the more he explains the longer he will have to stay away.

There haven't been enough such scramblings for shore to indicate that the ship is sinking, but—if the metaphor may be garbled a bit—the one swallow which doesn't make a summer still implies that winter is drawing to its close.

ANNOUNCING MR. CICADA.

[Danville (Ill.) Commercial-News.]

The 13 year brood of periodical cicada, called locust by many people, will be general over the southern third of Illinois this year, according to W. P. Flint, chief entomologist, University of Illinois college of agriculture, and Illinois state natural history survey.

Mr. Cicada and his family are scheduled to make their appearance the latter part of May, and the insects will be flying for about three weeks in woodlands, orchards, and trees in parks and on city streets. He probably will be found as far north as Vermilion county, but not in such quantities.

The brood which will take wing this year was hatched from eggs laid 13 years ago. In fulfilling their life cycle the insects have been living as underground hermits in cells in the earth. In this stage they obtain their food by sucking sap from the roots of trees and shrubs. Because they grow so slowly, little harm results to the trees from this feeding. About the only real damage caused by cicadas is the weakening of twigs by egg punctures. On large trees this injury is not serious, but in orchards the insects occasionally cause some loss in the fruit crop.

Adult cicadas feeds very little. They about, mate, and the females lay eggs in the twigs of several kinds of shade and fruit trees. Thousands of eggs are sometimes deposited in the twigs of a single tree. The adults soon die and after passing a few weeks of their life in the egg stage the young insects fall to the ground where they enter the hermit stage.

The 13 year cicada is one of 30 different broods that appear from time to time throughout the United States. Last year the 17 year brood was abundant in this section. They haven't the destructive power of the genuine locust or grasshopper, and little can be done about them except to let them live their cycle of life.

How to Keep Well By Dr. Irving S. Cutter

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

"THE SERE, THE YELLOW LEAF."

AMONG older people, problems of management in the home may be difficult. The mind as well as the body is subject to a slow but progressive decline and some of these patriarchs will show symptoms of confusion and restlessness. Certainly they should not be expected to carry responsibilities. Forgetfulness is a dominant symptom and numerous accidents have occurred because of the failure to light the gas when it is turned on, close faucets, or operate electrical devices properly. Falls come not infrequently because memory of certain steps has faded, and when confusion is uppermost the sense of time may be lost.

It is truly the picture of second childhood, and these individuals need just as much supervision as a youngster. True enough, they may be able to dress and feed themselves, but definite control must be their lot if injury or some untoward event is to be avoided.

With many there comes a longing for the scenes and surroundings of youth. The old home may be a thousand miles away and the oft repeated plaint, "O, if I could only see my birthplace and meet some of my boyhood friends I would die happy," is heard again and again. They cannot be convinced that the village has changed completely and that the familiar landmarks have disappeared. No, such a visit is all too often a disappointment—even a shock.

When age mellows and ripens, nature displays her rarest gifts. On the other hand, with a high degree of blood vessel hardening, a querulous disposition may manifest itself and become the source of much unhappiness to every one. The irascible old gentleman or the scolding, petulant grandmother may be responsible for much disharmony that is utterly unfair to the members of the younger generations.

Nevertheless these elderly persons are obliged to have constant attention. Their presence in the home of a son or daughter, grandson or granddaughter may be made a pleasant experience; that is, if they will recognize that they have a part to play in the economy of the household. In so far as possible they should have quarters of their own quite apart from the balance of the family. They will thus be freed from the irritating shouts of grandchildren and they can surround themselves with beloved furniture, pictures, and books.

A real philanthropist is he who establishes a community home for the superannuated whose happiness would be marred by residence with a relative. Here single or married couples can live in small communities, find congenial companions, and spend their remaining years in comfort.

A distressing situation is presented whenever senile decay fills the mind with unjust ideas of persecution, complaints of neglect, etc. If the attitude of son or daughter appears in even the slightest degree to be one of indifference, suspicion is aroused and motives are misunderstood.

Rarely will new ideas be accepted. A change of residence is often fought bitterly and one of the most pitiful plights is that of an oldster, the last of his race, living alone amid the dilapidated ruins of former grandeur. To transplant such a one is well nigh impossible, as resistance would be too great.

Physically the body demands more care than during the productive years. More heat is desired, as a rule, as the circulation is somewhat slow and the extremities are likely to be cold. Some are voracious eaters, yet they are thin, while others become slovenly about their personal habits. Here the services of an understanding companion are essential.

The diet should supply large quantities of milk. In the first place, more calcium is necessary and milk is our best food source. Chewing is often difficult and hence food that requires long mastication should be avoided. Soft vegetables, well cooked and plenty of them, ground meats, and puddings become the staples on the menu. Fruits are always in order, and baked apples, apple sauce, oranges, grapefruit, and stewed fruits of all types, dried or fresh, are healthful.

BLOOD COLORING.

Mrs. H. writes: What is the meaning of "hemoglobin of the blood?"

REPLY.

The red coloring matter of the blood corpuscles is known as hemoglobin. It is a compound of complex composition and contains iron. Blood cells supplied with this substance have the power of transporting oxygen to the tissues.

The volume of Legal Friend mail necessitates printed statements on common questions. No copies or records of the letters or answers are kept. Hence, follow-up letters should be complete in themselves. If questions are based on some previously printed problem a clipping of the article should accompany. Most of the replies are mailed. Letters bearing no name and address are disregarded. A self-addressed envelope will expedite handling.

CHIMNEY HEIGHT.

Chicago, April 15.—[Friend of the People.]—Is there not a ruling compelling the owner of a house to have his chimney higher than the windows of the top floor of the building alongside it? The chimney on the house directly south of ours reaches just about up to our third floor apartment and if we have our windows open the smoke goes right through our apartment, ruining curtains, furniture and decorating. The smoke also enters the apartment next to ours. Will you be so kind as to investigate this matter and let me know how the owner of the house next to ours can be made to raise his chimney? H. S.

This complaint has been assigned for immediate investigation and the department will follow up the matter until the smoke nuisance has been entirely abated.

FRANK A. CHAMBERS,
Deputy Smoke Inspector.

CHIMNEY REPAIRS.

Chicago, April 15.—[Friend of the People.]—The building next door to our home has a smoke chimney, the uppermost bricks of which have loosened to a menacing degree. I am in fear these bricks may be dislodged by a sudden gust of wind and crash through our bedroom window. Is there anything you may do to remedy this condition? H. N.

Our inspector reports that the chimney top at the above address is in need of repairs. The owner has been notified to make the necessary repairs and if the work is not done at the expiration of time allotted in our notice we will proceed as the law directs.

ENGLISH IN PORTO RICO.

Chicago, April 18.—On Sunday, April 18, you quoted a statement of President Roosevelt in which he advocates a bilingual training in the schools of the island of Porto Rico. As a native of that island and a student of its educational system I should like to indicate several ways in which that policy would be wrong.

It is time to end the experimental procedure in the public schools of the island which has been carried on there during the past three decades. It has been tried again and again and found that the mental advancement of native children seems to be retarded when the English language is forced upon them in addition to their natural Spanish. We should convince ourselves that a people who have spoken Spanish for over four hundred years are going to insist that their children be taught the same tongue. No wonder the efforts of the Americans to substitute English for the native language have met with failure so far.

Are the Porto Ricans getting a new deal like the rest of Latin America? Is the present administration walking away from the good neighbor policy?

Overpopulation in the island will result in an exodus to other countries, but opportunities for the Porto Ricans lie chiefly in the sister Latin American republics. These states are identical in racial stock and traditions; also, climatic conditions are similar and, above all, they are less densely populated. All of which goes to prove that the vital language training for these school children is their own Spanish. RAFAEL MOYANO REYES.

THE MORE ABUNDANT LIFE.

Wichita, Kas., April 8.—Please don't think I am crazy when you read the following letter, as the thing I am about to do is only one of the thousand things that a desperate person will do. I am a young woman, and my husband, although not very old, is a world war veteran. We have one child who needs medical care, as does my husband, who has been unemployed for the past four years. As we have no money and no home of our own we get our home in exchange for work around the house, but the people who own the place are now on relief and we cannot get work there even.

We are badly in debt and need so many things that I wonder if it would be possible for me to borrow some money from a medical school somewhere and use my body as security until I could pay it back. If something happened to me before I could pay the money back they can have my body, but if I could get the money to get a start I believe I can make it after my baby gets well. I understand that many people sell their bodies, but I don't want to sell mine if I can help it. I don't think God would like that.

People borrow money on land, cars and furniture. It looks like a body is worth more than that, and besides, that is the only thing in this world that I own. My soul is not mine but my body is.

If you think I could borrow a thousand dollars I wish you would forward this on to some medical school, as I don't know where there is any. And please don't let any one know my name for I wouldn't want any one to know I was this desperate for anything in the world. That is why I don't try a home town paper. M.

WITH THE CAVALRY AT CAMBRAI.

Downers Grove, Ill., April 4.—I have been following the Liddell Hart articles in THE TRIBUNE with great interest. May I draw your attention to a very grave mistake on your part in today's issue in the "Battle of Cambrai" and the failure of the cavalry to operate as hoped for? Capt. Hart stated that the cavalry were easily stopped by a few machine guns. On the day that the cavalry moved into action we passed the tanks and infantry mopping up. We rode through them in echelon order out in the open and did not come under fire until we arrived at the banks of the Canal du Nord at Mesnieres. The tanks had received orders to use the bridge at that point. One did, and the result—down went the bridge, tank, and crew. Two squadrons of the Lord Strathcona's Horse [Canadian cavalry] were already thundering down the road, intending to cross the canal and get to the village of Rumilly, turn the German flanks, and gallop to Cambrai. English cavalry was to follow and support our mad rush.

Now, sir, I will show you a thing that was overlooked by the British G. H. Q. The canal is a man made water course and, as nearly always, has perpendicular banks. Horses can swim streams and are trained to do so, but they must be able to walk out. You cannot get a horse out of a stream with perpendicular banks.

One squadron crossed the canal on a narrow plank bridge [Fort Garry Horse of Winnipeg]. They charged some German artillery, silenced it, made a good reconnaissance, and returned. This gallant squadron was led by Capt. Strachen, who won his V. C. in doing so. By the time the pontoons arrived the breach in the German line was closed and the banks of the Canal du Nord were bristling with machine guns.

So the great opportunity was lost by the canal and not a few machine guns. In closing I must tell you that I rode orderly for Gen. J. E. B. Seeley, D. S. O., during this action; also in the German counter attack. I have in my memoirs an accurate description of these battles. TOM H. MILES.

NOT A BAD IDEA.

Chicago, April 14.—The Illinois Supreme court says that "the public school system of the state was not established and has not been maintained as a charity or from philanthropic motives." 20 Years Ago Today

APRIL 25, 1917.

LONDON.—An exodus of civilians from Petrograd is described in a dispatch from the Russian capital. One permit office was besieged on Tuesday morning by 800 persons. The anxiety to leave the city is generally attributed to fear of a German advance on the capital. In order to obtain a seat on a train for Moscow it is now necessary to book some days ahead.

PETROGRAD.—The American embassy was threatened with an attack by a mob of radical Socialists incited by Nikolai Lenin, an exile who recently returned from Switzerland through Germany. A crowd started for the embassy but militiamen dispersed them. Lenin harangued the crowd, branding America an enemy of socialism for allegedly having hanged a socialist named Mooney at San Francisco.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Food, ships and money—these are the pressing wants of the allies as stated to the administration in the order of their importance by the British war commission, headed by the Right Honorable Arthur J. Balfour.

LONDON.—The Spanish government's note to Germany regarding the latter's submarine campaign contains a paragraph stating that if Germany continues in its determination to sink all vessels in order to defend its life, Spain must act.

PETROGRAD. — Prof. Paul Milukoff, minister of foreign affairs, and David R. Francis, the American ambassador, clasped hands on the platform of Alexander Hall while an immense crowd stood and applauded. It was the first public demonstration of the new friendship of Russia growing out of America's entry into the war.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE. — The intensely bitter ground fighting of the last two days has been reflected in the air, and the British Royal Flying corps has established a new record of bringing down forty German machines. The fights took place 15,000 feet in the air. Only two British machines are missing.

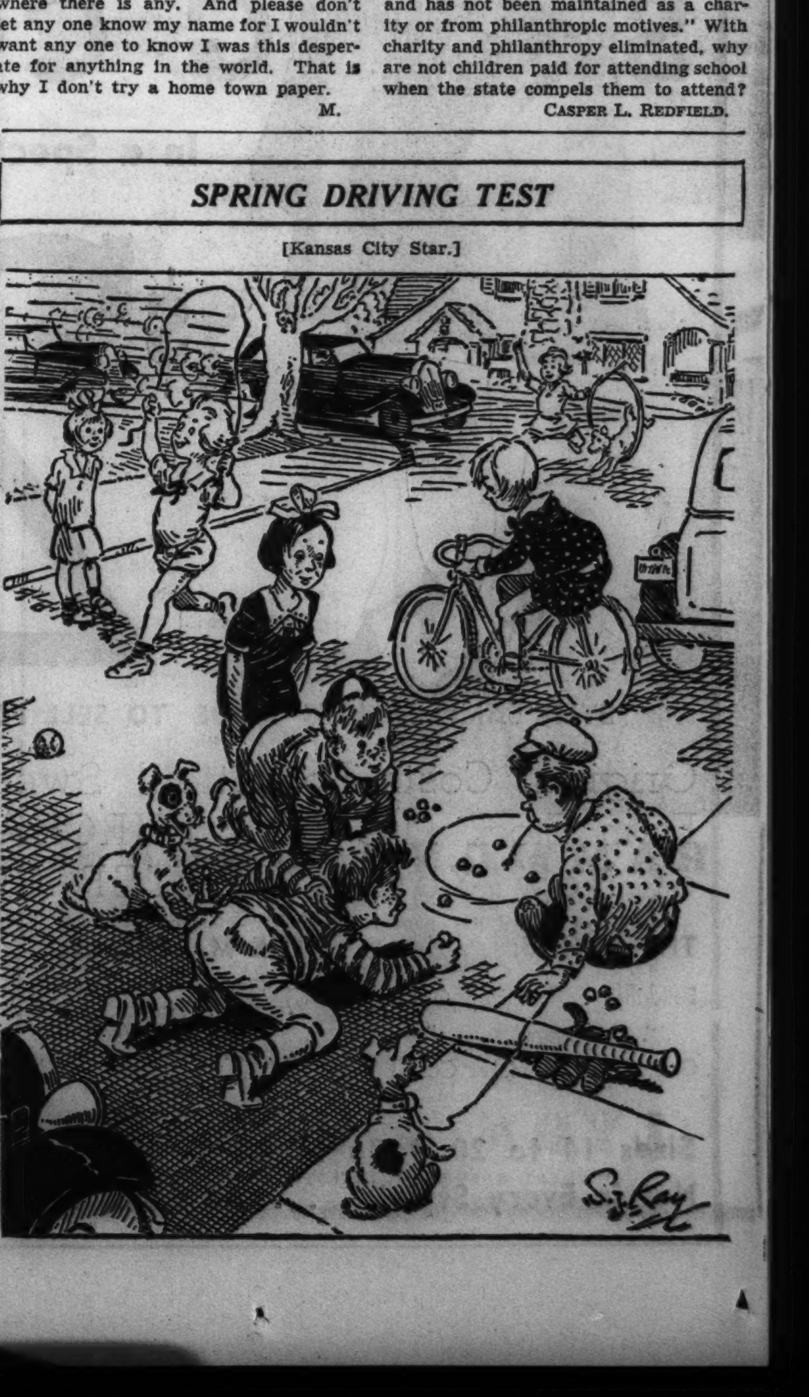
PETROGRAD. — War Minister Gutchkoff appealed to the Russian soldiers urging them not to leave the front. He said that the number of deserters has become dangerously large, adding: "All Russia is stricken at the sad news from the front."

CHICAGO, Ill.—Construction of fifty frame barracks and twenty-five mess halls for the men who will train at Fort Sheridan to become officers of the new army will begin this week. Similar improvements are to be begun at once at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Fort Riley and Fort Snelling.

ROME.—The Corriere D'Italia, the clerical organ, declared it is able to confirm reports published in the Spanish newspapers that the immediate following of the German emperor is exerting pressure on him to abdicate.

SPRING DRIVING TEST

[Kansas City Star.]



CHICAGO DOCTORS SPUR ON STATE'S RAGWEED WAR

Map Attack on Main Cause of Hay Fever.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

State officials at Springfield are eing praised by Chicago doctors and ther scientists for taking steps to ut ragweed, the principal cause of ay fever, under control. The Chicago ociety of Allergy, a group of specialists on hay fever and asthma, yesterday commended the house of representatives for the recent passage of resolution providing for a state-wide ducational campaign against ragweed nd other troublesome plants.

Weed Destruction Days.

The resolution is expected to be approved soon by the senate. It has he support of Gov. Horner. The proosed campaign is to be handled by he state department of agriculture nder the direction of John H. Lloyd, ho becomes chief of that department ay 1. The campaign will be started mmediately after the resolution is assed. The governor will designate ug. 8 to 22 as "weed destruction ays."

Scientists have brought serious harges against the ragweed. O. C. urham of Chicago, America's foreost authority on pollen and author f a new book, "Your Hay Fever," ade estimates in the Abbott laboraories, North Chicago, yesterday, that agweed alone produces more than 000,000 tons of pollen in the United tates each year.

Mr. Durham also estimated that here are from 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 hay ever victims in this country annually.

Loss of $70,000,000.

Experts who drafted the resolution assed by the house point out that he economic loss from weeds to Illiois agriculture is about $2 an acre. his would amount to more than 70,000,000 for the entire state.

In addition to ragweed they find hat certain other weeds and shrubs, hrough their irritating pollens and lant juices, contribute directly to ay fever and plant poisoning.

The resolution directs the state deartment of agriculture to consider he establishment of a competitive eede control program, "specifically o encourage the destruction of rageed, horseweed, poison ivy, poison umac, wild parsnip, white snakeroot, okeberry, and burdocks on all pubc and private lands, highways, and ights of way."

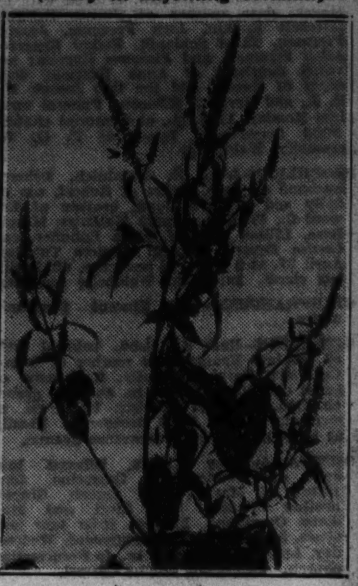
Four Kinds of Ragweed.

Botanists find ragweeds of differnt kinds in every county in Illinois. here are four species in the state—he common, giant and lance leaved, ll annuals, and the perennial rageed. All of them produce pollen hat may cause hay fever, which is ot a fever and is not caused by hay.

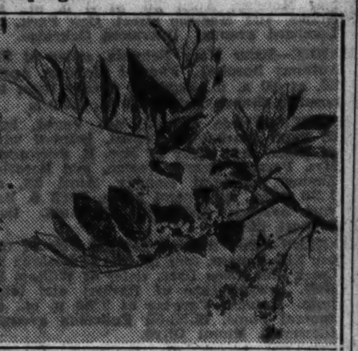
Illinois is in the heart of the rageed belt, which extends over a greatr part of the United States. This tate has more than its share of rageeds and consequently more than s share of hay fever.

Plan War on Weeds

(Story in adjoining column.)



Blossom of the giant ragweed, one of four varieties which flourish in every county of Illinois and which will be one of the plants to be attacked in proposed state-wide campaign.



Leaves of the poison sumac, another of the weeds named in resolution adopted by state house of representatives to further drive against hay fever and plant poisoning.

And this is poison ivy, familiar to every picnicker. It is condemned to destruction in resolution.

SURFACE LINES CLAIM PLACE IN TRANSIT PLANS

Defend Usefulness to Modernized System.

BY WILLIAM BROMAGE.

The Chicago Surface Lines dispute Mayor Kelly's belief that the day of the street car is passing. The mayor proposes substitution of gasoline and trolley buses on many lines as the way to modernize Chicago's local transportation facilities.

Street car officials assert that rail vehicles are necessary on lines where large numbers of passengers must be carried within a short time. They also claim that new street cars such as those now in service on Madison street compare favorably with modern buses in popularity with the rider, economical use of street space, and economy of operation.

Report Gives Position.

Although Surface Lines officials are not ready to commit themselves in quotation while franchise negotiations are under way, their position on the usefulness of the street car as compared with the bus was set forth by Guy A. Richardson, president, in the system's recently issued annual report.

Mr. Richardson in discussing the comparative riding appeal of street cars and buses declared that the Surface Lines have made a greater recovery in trafic since the depression than any other local transportation system, including the Chicago Motor Coach company. The Surface Lines, he said, now are carrying 80 per cent as much trafic as they handled in the 1929 peak year, compared with a recovery of 75 per cent for the transit industry as a whole in the United States.

"As compared with this surface lines recovery to 80 per cent of its peak year," he said, "the business of the Chicago Rapid Transit company [elevated lines] now is 66 per cent of its peak year [1926] and that of the Chicago Motor Coach company is 72 per cent of its peak year [1929]."

Mr. Richardson asserted that in the last ten years the surface lines have increased their proportion of the total local transit trafic here from 75.5 per cent to 78 per cent, while the bus company is still carrying about the same ratio, 5 per cent.

"These figures," he added, "have an added significance in view of the widespread propaganda to the effect that motor buses are supplanting street cars. In this connection it may be well to cite the New York situation because it is most frequently mentioned as an example of the alleged decadence of street cars and the ascendency of the bus.

Gives New York Data.

"The latest available data shows that 64 per cent of the local transportation in Greater New York is handled by rapid transit lines, 21 per cent by street cars and only 15 per cent by bus.

"In the borough of Brooklyn, 80 per cent of all surface passengers are carried by street cars, and street railway operation is being extended and improved. It must be evident, therefore, that sweeping statements that street cars are disappearing from New York have been exaggerated.

"There is no intention to disparage the value of the bus in local transportation or to imply that it will not have a greater use than it has today. In 1930 the surface lines began the installation of trolley buses and now has the largest trolley bus system on the continent. More riders, revenue and on transfers, were carried on surface line buses last year than were carried by the entire Chicago Motor Coach system."

Joseph H. Newman, 62, West Side Druggist, Dies

Joseph H. Newman, 62 years old, 3537 Madison street, well known west side druggist, died suddenly in his home yesterday. Mr. Newman was born in Chicago, and owned the drug store at 738 Madison street. He was active in the affairs of the Chicago Retail Druggists' association. PHILIP PARODI, 54, ONCE BODYGUARD FOR CERMAK, DIES

Lieut. Philip Parodi.

Lieut. Philip Parodi of the Albany Park police station, former personal bodyguard for the late Mayor Cermak, died of a heart attack yesterday in his home at 4315 Vista terrace. He was 54 years old.

Lieut. Parodi was a member of the police department for 29 years. His name was first on the recent civil service list for promotion to a captaincy. His body was found by State Representative Charles H. Weber and Capt. Patrick O'Connell of the Town Hall station. They went to the home after Miss Elsie Anderson, 45 years old, 1100 North La Salle street, became alarmed when she could not reach Parodi on the telephone.

In his long police career Parodi received four creditable mentions for valor on duty. He was Mayor Cermak's bodyguard during a tour of Europe in the summer of 1931.

1,600 Sign Petition

Washington, D. C., April 24.—[Special.]—Francis H. Case, representative of South Dakota, has been deprived of three nights' sleep by six warlike Sioux Indians who came to the capital from the Rosebud reservation in South Dakota, to protest that the Howard-Wheeler Indian act is "making us eat our own horses."

Representative Case, a member of the Indian affairs committee, is just as much confused as the Sioux tribe about the operation of the Wheeler-Howard act, but he learned from a petition signed by 1,600 Indians that they did not like it.

The Indians have been camping in Representative Case's office and his services are required at night to placate the proprietress of the boarding house across the street from the house office building.

She complains that Chief Walter Bull Man, Chief Josiah Spotted Owl, Chief Moses Slowfly, Chief Eugene Little, Joseph Thin Elk, and Ben American Horse stay up all night trekking back and forth from the bathroom and disturbing the slumbers of the fastidious Englishmen who live in the boarding house.

CYCLIST KILLED, ANOTHER INJURED BY HIT-RUN CAR

Struck as They Ride on Kane County Road.

A hit and run automobile killed one boy bicyclist and injured another last evening as they rode together in highway 64 thirteen miles west of St. Charles, in Kane county. The dead boy was John Eberhardt, 18 years old, 1911 Keystone avenue. His companion who was taken to the Sycamore hospital, is Andrew Hansen, 4037 Armitage avenue. They were on their way to work on a farm near Sycamore.

A few minutes after the accident Sidney Beasley of Rock Falls, Ill., a truck driver, saw a black sedan in a ditch half a mile away. Unaware that the boys had been struck, Beasley helped the driver of the sedan get back on the road, but he noticed that the right front headlight and fender had been crushed. Later he reported the incident to authorities. Beasley described the driver as a young man, who appeared to have been drinking.

Dies After Crash.

Maurice Crabbe, 29 years old, 15147 South Marshfield avenue, Harvey, a store manager, died early today in the Ingalls Memorial hospital, Harvey, of injuries suffered in a motor collision yesterday afternoon. His wife, Edna, 27, and their daughter, Mildred, 8, were slightly hurt, as was Hollis Saalman, 15111 South Ashland avenue, Harvey, driver of the other car. Crabbe was east bound in 152d street when his car crashed with Saalman's, north bound in Ashland avenue. Saalman was held by Harvey police.

Albert Matwij, 61 years old, 2218 Mobile avenue, was struck and fatally injured by a hit and run car last night at Grand and Mobile avenue. He died while being taken to the Danish-American hospital.

Electric Train Hits Car.

Theodore Suller of Melrose Park was thrown from his automobile when it was struck by a Chicago Rapid Transit Lines train at the 25th avenue crossing in Bellwood yesterday. Although his car burst into flames when it was pushed onto the power rail, short-circuiting the current and tying up service for twenty minutes, he escaped with slight injuries.

Suller, a restaurant employé, 30 years old, was taken to the Westlake hospital by another motorist. Bellwood police said the gateman at 25th avenue had raised the gates after a westbound train passed, permitting Suller to drive into the path of an eastbound train which had just left the station there.

Killed in Truck Crash.

Charles James, 16 years old, colored, 2973 Ellis avenue, was killed yesterday when the truck in which he was a passenger overturned after a collision with an automobile at 72d street and Luella avenue. The truck driver, Ted Crawford, 27 years old, colored, 328 East 37th street, was slightly hurt. Rudolph Eckstine, 54 years old, 425 Roscoe street, driver of the automobile, was uninjured.

Booker Kendler, colored, 26 years old, 3739 Block avenue, Indiana Harbor, died in the South Chicago hospital yesterday of injuries incurred on Thursday when a car in which he was a passenger collided at 90th street and Burley avenue with another driven by Joseph Gilbert, 805 East Marquette road.

Lawrence Englehardt, 35 years old, 10748 Eggleston avenue, was struck at 109th and South State streets early today by the car of a hit and run motorist who left him lying in the street. Physicians at the Roseland Community hospital said he had a severe fracture of the skull and internal injuries and that his chances of recovery were slender.

Death on Grade Crossings.

Grade crossing accidents during January cost 170 lives and caused injuries to 527 persons, it was reported yesterday by the bureau of statistics of the interstate commerce commission in Washington. There were 458 crossing accidents during the month, an increase of 24 over January last year.

Up to 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon 338 persons had been killed in Cook county trafic accidents this year, according to the coroner's office. In Chicago, the deaths for this period were 268, while 6,132 persons had been injured.

1937 Ford V·8

- If you think that "all low-price cars cost about the same"—forget it! They don't.

Ford makes a car—a 60-horsepower economy Ford V·8—that sells from 30 to 60 dollars under the prices of any other car of comparable size. The lowest Ford price in years!

Check delivered prices with the different dealers in your town and see for yourself.

- Of course, first cost doesn't prove "low cost"—you must consider operating cost also.

The "60" has definitely established itself as the most economical car in Ford history. Ford cars have been famous for economy for 34 years, so that means something!

Owners who have driven it thousands of miles report that the Ford "60" averages between 22 and 27 miles on a single gallon of gas.

You can prove those figures—on the road—in a car provided by your Ford dealer.

- When you've finished your personal check-up, ask yourself a few questions.

"Do I want to save money the day I buy my car and every mile I drive it?"

"Do I want a safe, roomy, comfortable car of advanced design—a car created from the finest materials to the highest precision standards—a car with the extra value born of building 25 million?"

There's only one answer—the 1937 Ford V·8—THE QUALITY CAR IN THE LOW-PRICE FIELD.

Ford V·8 Prices Begin at $529 at Dearborn Factory. Transportation charges, State & Federal taxes extra

This price is for the 60-hp. Coupe equipped with front and rear bumpers, spare tire, horn, windshield wiper, sun visor, glove compartment, and ash tray.

$25 A MONTH, after usual down-payment, buys any 1937 Ford V·8 Car from any Ford dealer in the United States. Ask your Ford dealer about the easy payment plans of the Universal Credit Company.

FIGHT FOR LAKE FRONT AIRPORT WILL BE PUSHED

Civic and Aviation Chiefs Point to Its Need.

BY WAYNE THOMIS.

The fight for Chicago's downtown lake front airport will be continued. That was disclosed here yesterday by civic and aviation leaders. Mayor Kelly and Merrill C. Meigs, chairman of the Chicago aero commission, joined in asserting that construction of such a modern air terminal still is their goal.

Even after the existing airport is expanded until it is a square mile in area it still will be eight miles from the banking and business centers of Chicago, Mayor Kelly pointed out. This means that passengers alighting from airliners there will be forced to drive for 50 minutes through heavy trafic before reaching their downtown destinations.

Island Airport Near Loop.

"A landing field on an island airport just off Grant park would change this entirely," the mayor said. "Passengers who disembarked there would be less than ten minutes away from the loop. An island airport would provide Chicago with the finest air transportation facilities in the United States."

It is the mayor's idea that the downtown field which aeronautical experts and flight engineers have proposed for years should be merely an air terminal base. There would be no storage or repair hangars on the field and there would be no military or private flying there.

Instead it would be an air park. After transport planes deposited their passengers there the machine would be flown out to the present municipal field at 63d street and Cicero avenue for repairs and servicing.

Plans Already Drawn.

"There's absolutely nothing the matter with the projected island airport a few million dollars wouldn't cure almost instantly," said Mr. Meigs, who has been a stanch advocate of the lake front field for many years.

"The Chicago plan commission has drawn up detailed plans for the building of an island field which would be an ideal airport. There are no engineering difficulties which are insurmountable, and permission of the war department and the Chicago Park district for construction of the island has been given."

Surveys made by the plan commission indicate that the proper spot for the island field is about 1,600 feet directly east of the foot of 16th street. The landing area would be triangular in shape with the base parallel to the shore. Twin bridges would connect it with the mainland and would create a lagoon ideal for swimming and boating.

No Obstructions, Say Airmen.

Runways at the field would vary in length from 3,800 to 4,000 feet in length and would be laid out so that approaches from any direction could be made. Airmen point out that the island field virtually would be a perfect airport since there would be no obstructions for miles in three directions.

Planes need never fly over the city to get to the field, they also point out. Ships arriving from the west would cut over to the lake either north or south of the city proper and fly up the shoreline.

Attempts to obtain federal funds to build the field met with failure on several occasions during the last two years. Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes denied requests for allocations for this purpose after investigating the project, despite the approval of the federal bureau of air commerce, the war department, and other agencies.

Former Queen Fined $250 for Practicing Witchcraft

SEROWE, Bechuanaland, South Africa, April 24.—(AP)—Former Queen Bagakgametsi was sentenced today to pay a $250 fine or serve one year in jail for witchcraft. She pleaded guilty to charges of trying to harm the queen mother by mystic potions and incantations. Two skin-clad witch doctors, who had made the same confession at the bizarre trial held under a cluster of thorn trees, received the same sentence.

RELIEF BURDEN DROPS 5.2 PCT. DURING MARCH

Madison, Wis., April 24.—[Special.]—A ray of sunshine was dropped on Wisconsin's dark outdoor relief picture today in a report by Phil D. Flanner, director of the state public welfare department, that the relief load declined 5.2 per cent during March.

With the state's relief coffers empty, the counties, cities, villages, and towns last month provided direct relief aid to 166,000 persons, a total equivalent to the combined populations of Madison, Racine, and Oshkosh.

"Persons receiving outdoor relief consist largely of unemployables not able to work, employables ineligible for jobs on federal projects, and eligible employables who cannot be put to work because the WPA quota is too low. Only about 8,000 persons employed on federal projects also are receiving outdoor relief," Flanner explained.

The decline in relief cases from February to March, Flanner added, was due primarily to warmer weather, but also to a cessation of industrial strikes especially at Racine and Janesville.

'REST, BANISH WORRY' CURE FOR 'SPRING FEVER'

Indianapolis, Ind., April 24.—(AP)—The Indiana State Medical association prescribed today for "that mythical ailment known as spring fever."

"Rest, sleep, fresh air, a certain amount of recreation, exercise, freedom from worry, and an examination by your family doctor," said a bulletin of the association, "will do more good than all of the old-fashioned, nasty tasting concoctions containing sulphur and molasses that grandmother used to force down us, or any of those newfangled, highly publicized remedies."

Acquitted of Suicide Plot After Friend Sticks to It

Forsyth, Mo., April 24.—[Special.]—Elza Herd, 21 years, was tried in Circuit court today because he did not commit suicide, but a jury acquitted him. According to evidence, Herd and a friend, Paul Sullenger, 26, decided on suicide and obtained a rifle. Sullenger killed himself but Herd changed his mind. He was prosecuted for manslaughter for assisting in a self murder.

GOV. LA FOLLETTE CALLS PARLEYS IN LABOR DISPUTES

Madison, Wis., April 24.—[Special.]—Gov. Phil La Follette moved today to bring the State Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization together for conciliation. He announced a series of meetings next week with the newly created Wisconsin labor relations board and the two warring labor organizations. He will meet Tuesday with federation of labor officials and on Wednesday with C. I. O. leaders. Later in the week the governor probably will meet representatives of large industries.

It is expected that Henry W. Ohl Jr. and J. J. Handley, president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of the State Federation of Labor, and members of its executive committee will attend Tuesday's gathering.

Assemblyman Emil Costello [Prog., Kenosha], who has been so occupied as chief state C. I. O. organizer that he hasn't answered a single roll call in the house since April 12, will head Wednesday's delegation.

3 Persons Escape as Fire Sweeps a Furniture Store

Oshkosh, Wis., April 24.—[Special.]—Three persons escaped with their lives when an oil heater in the Seifeldt Furniture company store exploded and set fire to the building here today. Donald Ginsmore, 22, was injured when he jumped from an upper story window. An infant, James Pierce, was tossed through a window to the roof of an adjoining building. Others leaped to the safety of the roof. Those rescued are Mrs. Marion Pierce; her son James; Mrs. Elizabeth Ginsmore; Mrs. Amanda Gerhardt, 70; and Gladys Gerhardt. The damage was $20,000.

Two Gunmen Kidnap Youth in Waukegan; Seize $798

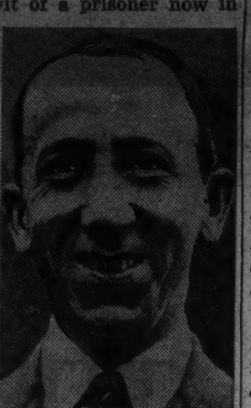
Paul Ivantic, 19 years old, 1034 Park avenue, North Chicago, was kidnaped by two gunmen in Waukegan yesterday, forced to drive several miles into the country, and robbed of $798 he had just withdrawn from a bank.

KENNEL ATTENDANT FOUND SHOT.

John Hectus, 27 years old, an attendant in a dog kennel at Dempster street and Waukegan road in Morton Grove, was found severely wounded in his quarters there yesterday, a .22 caliber rifle nearby. His sister, Miss Emily Hectus, said Hectus attempted suicide by poison three months ago.

BASE WARANT IN LINDY CASE ON JAIL STORY

Clinton, N. J., April 24.—[Special.]—The affidavit of a prisoner now in the Bronx County jail that he had been asked to take part in the Lindbergh kidnaping was the basis of a new complaint in the case, County Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck revealed today.



John J. Nosovistsky.

Private Detective John J. McNally of Jersey City, who made the complaint, placed in the hands of Mr. Hauck a warant for the arrest of John Jacob Nosovistisky, alias J. J. Faulkner, accused of conspiring in an 'international spy plot" to kidnap and murder the baby.

The warant was issued last night by Justice of the Peace E. R. Hummer in Frenchtown on information from McNally, who said he had spent several years investigating the crime.

C. Lloyd Fisher, counsel for Hauptmann, declared there was "absolutely nothing" to the new evidence.

"J. J. Faulkner" was the name signed to slips when approximately $2,970 in gold notes of the ransom money paid by Col. Lindbergh was exchanged in the New York Federal Reserve bank.

NAZIS DISFRANCHISE WIFE OF NOVELIST LION FEUCHTWANGER

BERLIN, April 24.—(AP)—Martha Loeffler Feuchtwanger, wife of the novelist Lion Feuchtwanger, was listed today among 36 persons deprived of citizenship.

[Feuchtwanger, author of "The Ugly Duchess," "Success," and other novels, lost his German citizenship in 1933 because his behavior was held officially to have "harmed German interests."]

The list of those disfranchised, published in the official gazette today, included the wives of two former Social Democratic party leaders, Rudolf Breitscheid and Rudolf Hilferding. Hilferding was finance minister in the Stresemann cabinet. Breitscheid's wife was an advocate of votes for women.

SCHOOL DANCING TO BE ISSUE IN ROCKFORD BOARD

Rockford, Ill., April 24.—[Special.]—Dancing in the public schools of Rockford provided an issue that had members of the board of education at odds today. The parent-teacher association sponsored a dance and card party in a grade school auditorium last night and the party was in way of being a success when in walked Thorsten Thorstenson and Carl Sandstrom, members of the board. Then in the presence of startled guests Thorstenson and Sandstrom debated the question of dancing and card playing in a public school building and finally left with a declaration that they would make a formal demand at the Monday night board meeting that dancing in schools be barred hereafter.

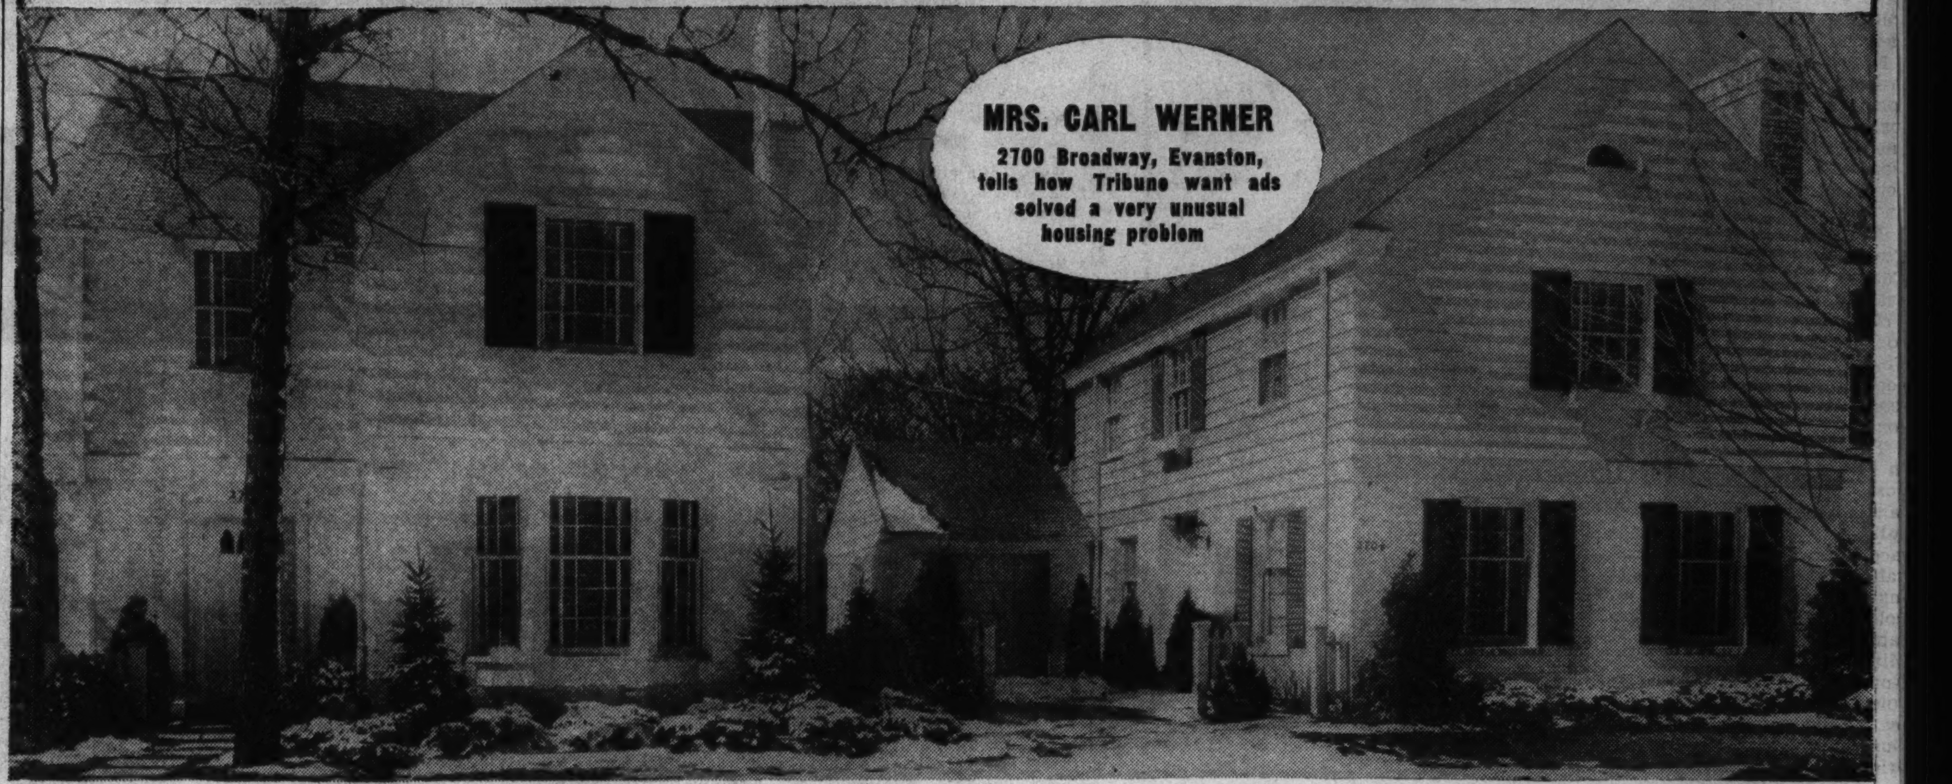
"OUR PROBLEM WAS TO FIND TWO HOUSES"



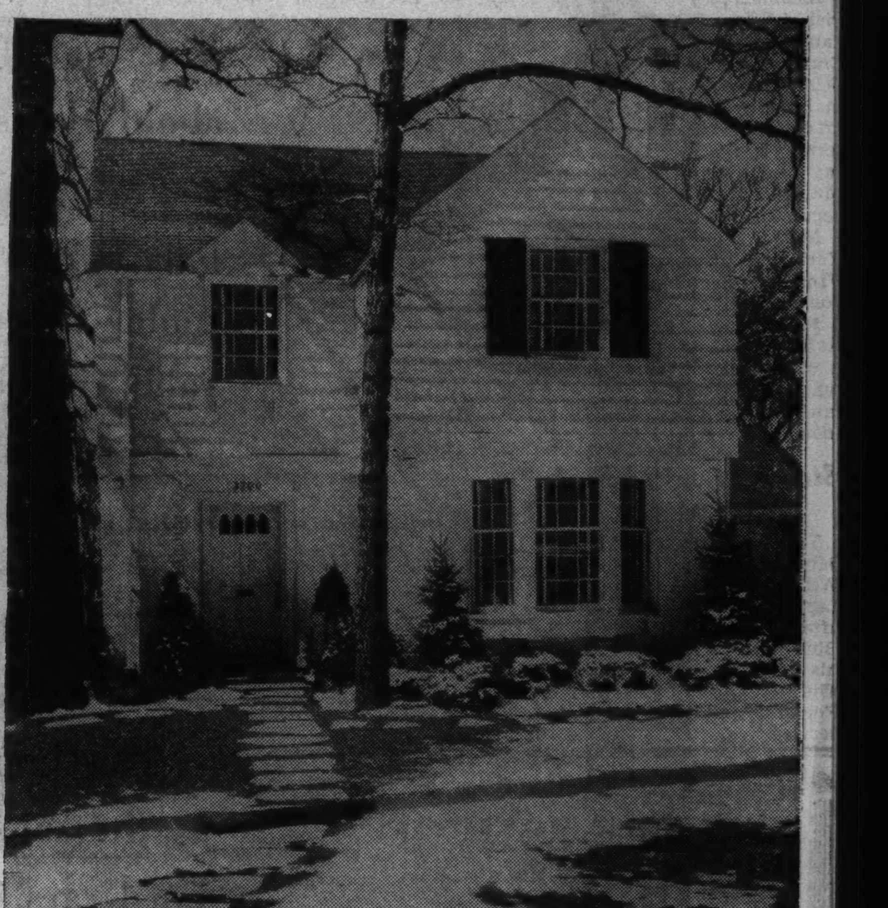
MRS. CARL WERNER

2700 Broadway, Evanston, tells how Tribune want ads solved a very unusual housing problem

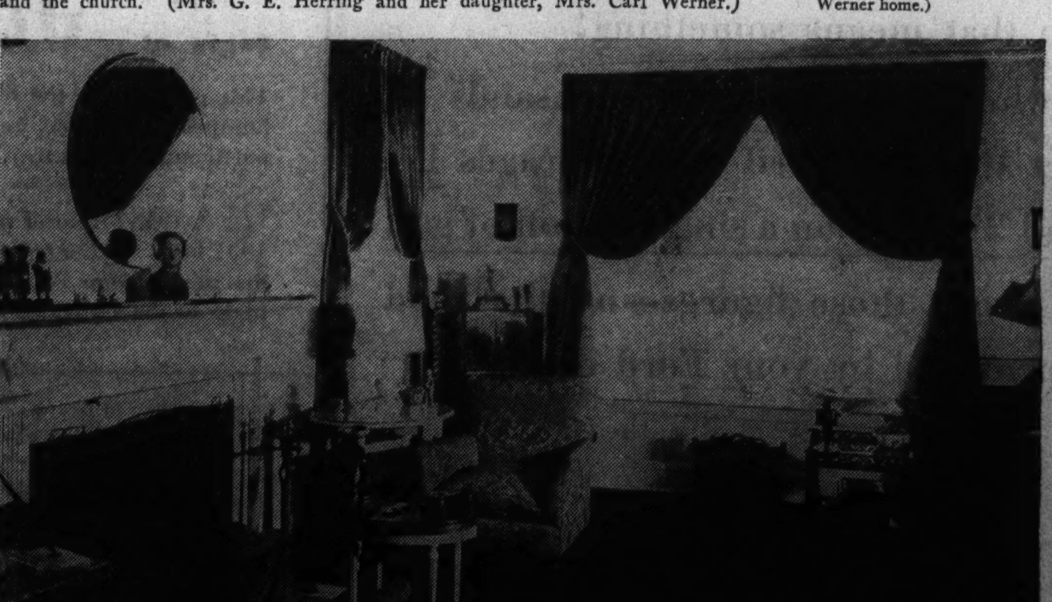
1. "These two houses were the happy solution of the very unusual housing problem of two families. In the fifteen years I have been married I have always lived near my father and mother. For many years we lived in apartments close together on the north side of the city. We finally made up our minds to look for two houses close together in the suburbs.

Simplicity of line and detail lend old fashioned charm to the New England type house. (Entrance to the Werner home.)

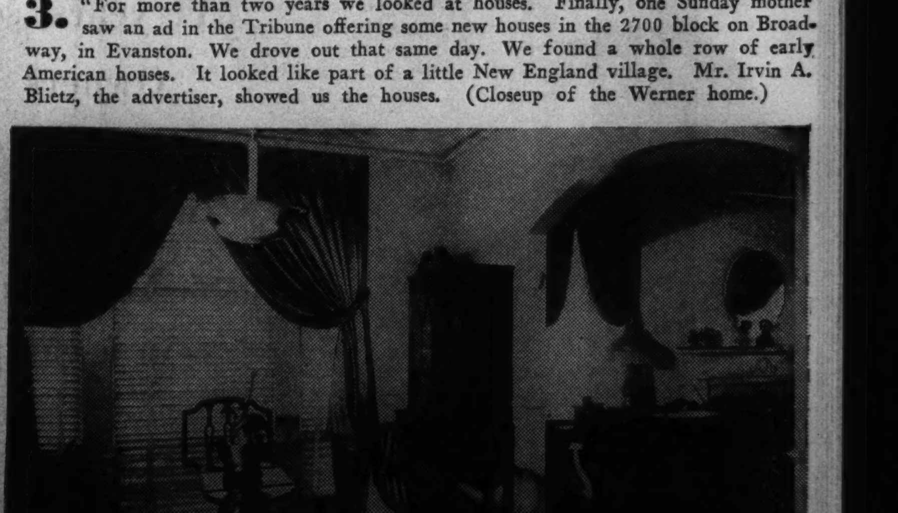
2. "We were confronted with the problem of finding two suitable houses in a location which would fit the requirements of every one in our two families. It looked like an impossible task, but the Tribune did it. My husband drives, my father takes the train. We wanted to be near the station, the stores, the movies, and the church. (Mrs. G. E. Herring and her daughter, Mrs. Carl Werner.)



3. "For more than two years we looked at houses. Finally, one Sunday mother saw an ad in the Tribune offering some new houses in the 2700 block on Broadway, in Evanston. We drove out that same day. We found a whole row of early American houses. It looked like part of a little New England village. Mr. Irvin A. Blietz, the advertiser, showed us the houses. (Closeup of the Werner home.)



4. "My husband and I liked the one at 2700 Broadway. It was a six room house. It had gas heat, air conditioning, and an attached garage. There was a wood-burning fireplace, plumbing fixtures of the latest design and plenty of closet room. The decorating was very attractive and in keeping with the early American period. The location was excellent, only a block and a half from the station and the stores. We decided that we liked it very much. Father and mother liked the house right next door. So we talked price and terms with Mr. Blietz on the two houses, and bought them. We like both houses. We like the location, the neighborhood and everything about them. We are grateful to your want ads for helping us solve a double housing problem." (The living room in the Werner house.)



5. HAVE YOU, too, an unusual housing problem? No matter how difficult it may seem, Tribune want ads can help you solve it as they have helped thousands of families. You have only to follow the real estate columns in the Tribune want ad section. (The dining room of the Werner home.)

"I have been using Tribune classified ads for more than fifteen years and I honestly believe that there is no other medium like it."

ADELE SANDMAN, H. N. WOODWARD WED AT U. OF C.

Joan Cotter Becomes Bride of William H. Fogarty.

BY JUDITH CASS.

Two weddings of social interest ook place last night, one at Bond hapel at the University of Chicago, he other at St. Luke's Pro-cathedral n Evanston. The south side bride as Miss Adele Sandman, daughter f Mrs. Clarence E. Nelson of Minneapolis, who was married at 8:30 'clock to Herbert Norton Woodward, on of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Woodward of Winnetka. Dr. Sidney B. now officiated at the ceremony and reception followed at the Windermere East hotel.

The bride, who wore a charming ld fashioned gown of white taffeta, ame down the aile alone. Her nother gave her in marriage. The ride's bouquet was a colonial one, n keeping with her costume, made f white violets and gardenias. For omething old, something borrowed nd something blue, she wore a sapphire and pearl cross lent by Miss eslie Wilson, one of the bridesmaids.

Small Reception Held.

The five attendants were gowned like in old fashioned dresses of coral ink lace with matching coronet turans and blue sashes, and carried olonial bouquets of rosebuds and achelor buttons.

Easter lilies, white gladioli, and reens decorated the chapel, and pring flowers were used at the hotel or the reception, which was a small ne. Mr. Woodward and his bride ill make their home on the near orth side.

Joan Cotter Wed.

The Evanston bride was Miss Joan Cotter, daughter of the Harold E. Cotters. Bishop George Craig Stewrt officiated at her marriage at 8:30 'clock to William Henry Fogarty Jr., on of Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Fogarty, also of Evanston, and a reeption for 400 family friends folowed at the Country club of Evanson.

The bride made a pretty picture n her springlike gown of white embossed mousseline de soie made boufant style with a long train. The ulle veil was edged with heirloom ace, and she carried lilies of the alley and sweet peas. Her six bridesmaids were gowned alike in amber olored marquisette trimmed with angerine, and the maid of honor, Miss Caryl Cotter, sister of the bride, vore a similar frock in the tangerine olor. They all carried African daises. Following a wedding trip to Guatemala, Mr. Fogarty and his ride will be at home in Evanston.

HOWARD TO TEST EQUIPMENT FOR UNITED AIR LINES

Ben O. Howard, airline and race pilot and head of the Chicago airplane manufacturing company bearing his name, has been appointed flight research engineer in United Air Lines' technical division. He will fly the company's laboratory airplane and will collaborate with staf engineers in developing projects under test.

Howard and his wife, Maxine, are recuperating on a Southern California ranch from injuries incurred last September when their cabin racer, Mr. Mulligan, crashed in New Mexico. At the time of the accident they were leading the Bendix Trophy race, which Howard won in 1935 in the same airplane.

Howard has recovered from critical injuries, but Mrs. Howard still has one leg in a plaster cast. They left their home in Chicago a month ago and flew west in one of their own airplanes with Howard at the controls. He will return here on May 1 to assume his new duties.

1,000 PROTESTS ON REAL ESTATE TAXES IN 1935

Noon yesterday was the deadline for the filing of objections to 1935 real estate taxes. About 1,000 protests have been filed in the County court, representing about $60,000,000 in taxes on 67,000 parcels of real estate in Cook county.

Immediately after the deadline County Judge Jarecki entered an order to permit the sale of tax titles against owners who had neither paid their 1935 taxes nor made formal objection to them. The sale of these titles will begin tomorrow.

The largest objection in the present batch was filed by Robert N. Holt, a tax attorney, in behalf of 273 individuals and corporations, including large railroads and loop stores. These protests represent about $20,000,000 in taxes on 10,000 parcels. The Cook County Civic league filed a blanket objection in behalf of some 4,000 owners of property.

Oliver Hardy, Comedian, Asks Divorce for Cruelty

Los Angeles, Cal., April 24.—(AP)—Counsel for Oliver Hardy, fat film comedian, filed a sealed divorce complaint today against Myrtle Hardy, who has a separate maintenance suit pending. Attorney Benjamin Shipman said Hardy charges mental cruelty.

Review of the Week: Chicago: The Nation: The World:

Foreign

Spanish War.

There were no major victories for either side last week in the Spanish civil war, but furious fighting continued on several fronts. The biggest air battle of the war thus far was fought last Sunday over the Aragon front in northeastern Spain. The rebel [Fascist] headquarters claimed a victory.

It was announced that a crack squadron of fifteen rebel planes dispersed a squadron of twenty-three government flyers after destroying seven of the loyalist planes.

The heavy rebel artillery bombardment of Madrid, begun two weeks ago, was continued with increased intensity. At the end of the week it was estimated that more than 250 residents of the loyalist stronghold had been killed by the shells.

The bombardment came from rebel gun emplacements on the outskirts of the city. On Friday a rebel shell fragment struck the closed American embassy. Slight damage was done. Almost every section of the besieged city was raked by the constant shell fire. The worst damage was done along the Gran Via, Madrid's "Broadway."

The rebel forces of Gen. Francisco Franco attempting to capture Bilbao, the loyalist Basque seaport on the Bay of Biscay, near the French border, made little progress last week. On Friday Gen. Franco dispatched reinforcements to this front. They were 1,500 Italian volunteers. A new and more determined attack against the Basque city was imminent yesterday. [See main news section.]

By decree Gen. Franco last week merged all political factions fighting for the rebel cause into one with himself as virtual dictator. The decree hinted that if the rebels win the war the exiled monarchy of Spain might be restored.

Armed Neutrality.

A neutrality patrol of Spanish coasts by warships of four nations, Britain, France, Italy and Germany went into effect last week. The patrol was protested vigorously by the loyalist government. Immediately following the protest came the report that a British food ship, the Seven Seas Spray, had run the rebel blockade off Bilbao and had landed much needed food supplies at the Basque port. On Thursday two more British ships ran through the blockade and landed food.

The blockade running raised loyalist morale throughout Spain and greatly lessened the hostility toward Great Britain's leadership in the international hands-off-Spain campaign, of which the warship patrol of Spanish waters is a part. The sea patrol was established to prevent the smuggling into Spain of war materials and volunteers. The patrol ships were ordered to halt any suspected ship.

Duke's Bombshell.

British court circles and Britons generally were excited Friday when reports reached London that the duke of Windsor, formerly King Edward VIII., might marry Mrs. Wallis Simpson on or before Coronation day, May 12.

The duke, according to the report, is furious at recent published and spoken comments in England concerning his abdication and his plans to marry Mrs. Simpson after her divorce from Ernest Simpson becomes final. This is expected to be about April 27. In recent weeks the royal family made efforts to persuade Edward to postpone his wedding until after the coronation of his brother, King George VI., on May 12.

The duke's anger was said to have been aroused by many things. It reached its height when a book called "Coronation Commentary" appeared in London. The book, written by Geoffrey Dennis, was published by William Heinemann, Ltd.

A. G. Allen, the duke's solicitor, demanded that the book be withdrawn and that a suitable apology be published. Allen threatened to bring a libel suit in behalf of Edward if his demand is not met. One of the book's chapters tells what are purported to be intimate details of Edward's abdication. [See main news section.]

Another cause for Edward's wrath may have been a letter published in the newspaper, Edinburgh Scotsman, on Thursday in which A. Berriedale Keith, a famous constitutional lawyer, expressed doubt that Mrs. Simpson was properly divorced from her first husband in the eyes of British law. Mrs. Simpson was divorced from Lieutenant Commander E. W. Spencer Jr. of the United States navy in Virginia in 1927.

In the meantime plans and rehersals for the coronation pageantry were proceeding smoothly in London. [See main news section.]

British Taxes.

Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, presented to parliament last week the heaviest British budget since the world war. He said national finances for several years to come will be dominated by the cost of Britain's huge rearmament program. Chamberlain announced the government will need more than 4 billion 315 million dollars to carry out the arms program and meet expenses during the next year.

He said the expected deficit would be more than 74 million dollars. To meet it the income taxes will be raised three pence on every taxable pound of income. Chamberlain also proposed a new tax on industrial profits. This suggestion met with a storm of protest from conservative ranks in parliament. [See main news section.]

Italy and Austria.

For two days last week Premier Mussolini of Italy and Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria conferred at Venice on affairs of vital importance to both countries. It was reported the chief subject of the conversations was Austria's relations with Nazi Germany.

It was reported the Austrian leader warned Mussolini that Austria would resist, with force if necessary, any attempt by Germany to annex Czechoslovakia. It was understood that Il Duce had pointed out that Italy believes German expansion in the south is inevitable.

Business

Tin Demand Gains.

World trade revival has increased consumption of tin, it was shown by statistics issued last week. With increased demand derived mainly from the automobile and tin plate industry, consumption for the year ended Feb. 28 amounted to 160,391 tons of 2,240 pounds each, a gain of approximately 7½ per cent over the previous 12 months.

According to the International Tin Research and Development council these figures do not represent the full amount of tin actually used, but more properly represents imports to which must be added the use of tin already on hand.

War preparations have played a leading part in the increased use, for, though tin is not a munitions metal, nations preparing for war take large quantities in the form of tin cans and miscellaneous products.

Business Irregular.

Business indices continued to reflect an irregular trend during the week. Steel ingot production climbed 1 point to 92 per cent of plant capacity. Output for the week was estimated at 1,196,000 tons, the highest on record. Fears that prices for third quarter delivery would be raised were set at rest by an announcement of Carnegie-Illinois Steel company, biggest United States Steel corporation subsidiary, that no change would be made.

Electric power output dipped two-tenths of 1 per cent to 2,173,223,000 kilowatt hours. Railroad freight trafic gained more than is customary for the period, car loadings totaling 751,328 cars, a rise of nearly 5 per cent over the preceding week.

Automobile production was the heaviest since 1929 with approximately 139,000 cars and trucks rolling off assembly lines.

Stocks and Bonds.

The stock market declined slightly during the week. Bonds were irregular, with government obligations falling sharply. Commodities also suffered heavy losses.

Leading corporations issued statements on the condition of business during the first quarter of 1937. Their average earnings were approximately 35 per cent ahead of last year.

Flying

More progress was made last week on the plan to double the size of the Chicago airport. City officials and officials of the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad agreed on a plan for removal of tracks along the line of 59th street between Cicero and Central avenues. The tracks bisect the square mile area available for the new airport, bounded by 55th and 63d streets and Central and Cicero avenues. The present airport occupies the southern half of this area. The railroad agreed to deed the city its right of way in exchange for a new right of way, west of Central avenue. The city agreed to bear the cost of track removal and reinstalling. The cost is yet to be determined. Meantime, the fight for a lake front airport will be continued. [See main news section.]

A ton of mail, sent chiefly by stamp collectors, was started on an air journey around the world from Chicago Tuesday. The mail will girdle the globe and return to Chicago on regularly scheduled air lines.

P. G. Golovin, noted soviet flyer making an aerial survey of arctic regions, was reported last week to have reached Rudolf Island, the world's northernmost habitation. It is 2,500 miles north of Moscow and 550 miles from the north pole.

The City

Whoopee Jury.

The Zintak whoopee jurors and the former bailif who conducted them on a wild tour of west side taverns were sent to jail and fined Friday for contempt of court. All had admitted participation in the drinking party, which took place between sessions of the second trial of Frank V. Zintak, ousted clerk of the Superior court, who was acquitted of embezzlement early this year.

Judge Benjamin P. Epstein, the trial judge, sentenced five of the jurors to five days in jail, six others to three days, and one, who didn't drink on the party, was fined $50. The former bailif, Daniel Miller, who was in charge of the jury, got a six month jail sentence. His attorney was allowed thirty days to prepare an appeal.

Transit Hearings.

Chicago's transportation problems were considered last week at two hearings. City officials on Monday appeared before the Illinois commerce commission to demand that the three transit systems—elevated, surface, and bus lines—be ordered to issue interline transfers with limits only on time and direction.

At present, under an experimental order of the commission which has been in effect since 1935, transfers between elevated and surface lines may be made at 55 points and between elevated and bus lines at 27 points.

Reorganization of the Chicago Rapid Transit company [elevated lines] was considered Thursday before Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson. Officials of the company, which is in receivership, requested the judge to appoint a citizen's committee of five members to work out a reorganization and rehabilitation scheme under section 77B of the bankruptcy laws.

Country Judges.

Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes last week won two victories in his campaign to prevent downstate judges sitting in Cook county from awarding unwaranted personal injury damage claims against the city. Mr. Hodes contends that downstate judges are not sufficiently familiar with metropolitan conditions to hear personal injury cases.

On Tuesday Judge Harry M. Fisher of the Superior court refused to hold Mr. Hodes in contempt for alleged criticism of Judge John T. Cummings of Kewanee, Ill., one of the downstate judges sitting here. On the same day, at Mr. Hodes' request, Judge Martin Gridley of the Superior court set aside a $15,000 personal injury award and granted the city a new trial.

Suburban Elections.

A heavy vote was cast Tuesday in village elections in 71 Cook county suburbs and in many towns and villages in nearby counties. In a majority of the towns the previous administrations were retained in office.

The nation's leading fisherman, President Roosevelt, was getting ready last week to leave the capital for his annual spring fishing trip. For ten days or more within the next three weeks Mr. Roosevelt will try his luck at deep sea fishing in the Gulf of Mexico. He plans to leave Washington next Wednesday. As shown by the map Mr. Roosevelt will make several stops in the south before boarding the presidential yacht Potomac at New Orleans. When the cruise ends at Galveston, Tex., he will visit several places in Texas.

Mr. Roosevelt hopes that on this cruise he will hook a gratifying catch of tarpon. A naval cruiser will accompany the Potomac. Temporary White House headquarters will be established at Galveston in charge of Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre. Mr. Roosevelt will keep in touch with headquarters by radio.

Plans for this year's cruise are no less elaborate than for the President's fishing expedition a year ago in the Caribbean. That trip cost $300,000. The yacht Potomac, on the 1936 cruise, was accompanied by two naval destroyers.

As he did a year ago, Mr. Roosevelt will leave congress to wrestle with controversial issues of vital importance to the nation. Chief of these is his proposal to pack the Supreme court. [See Washington.] When he left on the 1936 cruise [itinerary shown on map] congress was struggling with such major legislative problems as the corporation surplus profits tax and others.

Labor News

Labor Warfare.

Labor strife was marked by serious acts of violence last week in various parts of the country. In Chicago police were faced with an outbreak of dynamite bombing attacks which were traced to building trades union warfare.

The outrages began Wednesday night when a terrific explosion wrecked the entrance of the fashionable Lake Shore Country club in suburban Glencoe. On the same night the interior of a $40,000 home in Wilmette was demolished by a bomb explosion. Nonunion painters had been employed in redecorating both places.

Then came a series of four more bombings. A northwest side dairy and the south side homes of two officials of the operating engineers' union were bomb targets in Chicago, and a bomb was exploded at the home of Earl Rieck, official of the DuPage County Building Trades council, in Lombard.

Police and the state's attorney's office launched an immediate drive to arrest the bombers and to prevent further outrages. [See main news section.]

Labor warfare also broke out in Maine and on the west coast. In Maine striking shoe factory workers became unruly Wednesday after a state Supreme court judge had held the strike illegal under the Wagner act. The strikers rioted when police attempted to disperse a mob with tear gas. This led to a call for National Guard troops.

Eight companies were sent to the Lewiston-Auburn area by Gov. Lewis O. Barrows. Authorities said the trouble was incited by organizers for the Committee for Industrial Organization—C. I. O.—headed by John L. Lewis.

At Stockton, Cal., on Friday, the most serious violence of the week occurred. Fifty persons, including several women, were wounded in a battle between striking cannery workers and state police and sherif's deputies.

The crowd had gathered when it was rumored the Stockton Food Products company was reopening its plant in spite of a strike. Yesterday a state investigation of the shooting was in prospect. [See main news section.]

Canadian Settlement.

The strike at the Oshawa, Ont., plant of the General Motors of Canada, which caused Ontario's premier, Mitchell Hepburn, to defy organizers of the American C. I. O., was settled Friday when the workers voted overwhelmingly to accept an agreement reached Thursday in the premier's office between union and company officials. The workers will return to the plant tomorrow. [See main news section.]

Strike trouble also developed yesterday at the Ford Motor company assembly plant at Richmond, Cal. [See main news section.]

In the meantime the wrath of Premier Hepburn was again aroused against the C. I. O. when that organization began a campaign to organize the Canadian mining and pulpwood industries. Hepburn said he was prepared to press legislation to keep the C. I. O. out of Ontario if such a step became necessary. Early in the week Hepburn issued a direct warning to the C. I. O. leader, John L. Lewis.

"Let me tell Lewis here and now," he said, "that he and his gang will never get their greedy paws on Ontario as long as I am prime minister."

Father Divine.

Troubles piled up last week for Father Divine, colored messiah of New York's Harlem. They began last Sunday when a white man was stabbed in his Harlem "heaven" during services. A warant for the messiah was issued, but he had fled. Later he was found hiding in a house at Milford, Conn. He was arrested and returned to New York. On Friday he was released on $500 bail, furnished by one of his faithful. There followed a joyous celebration of 1,500 followers, who consider the cult leader to be "God." [See main news section.]

CLARK GABLE.

Clark Gable, romantic film lover, was the star of a federal court case last week in Los Angeles. As a witness he denied that he ever had been a father. This statement was opposed by Mrs. Violet Wells Norton, who was on trial charged with using the mails to defraud Gable by accusing him of being the father of her daughter, Gwendoline, 13. The jury decided Gable told the truth and found Mrs. Norton guilty. She faces a maximum five year prison sentence.

Crime

Murders Solved.

Chicago police cleared up three murder cases last week, one of them within a few hours of the slaying. Last Sunday the wanton murder on March 17 of Frank Panfil, a storekeeper, was solved through the confession of Harold Julian, 18. He calmly related that he and a companion, Emil Trimarco, 19, a paroled convict, had shot Panfil because they wanted money to go to a dance. Trimarco was seized in Cincinnati and returned to Chicago. He confessed firing the shot which killed Panfil.

Two youthful bandits, John Mikosz, 18, and Walter Pekovitch, 18, both paroled from St. Charles reformatory, admitted to detectives they had robbed and shot at Edward Niewerowski, 40, last April 6. They also admitted a series of other robberies. They did not know that Niewerowski had been fatally wounded. They were charged with murder.

Late Thursday night Miss Helen Stahl, 50, a cripple, was found beaten to death in her home at 3817 North Claremont avenue. The murderer left a printed note stating that if the victim had been a man she would have been killed long ago. Within a few hours police arrested Albert Watts, 58, Miss Stahl's brother-in-law.

He confessed after detectives found a piece of paper in his pocket which matched the paper of the note left by the murderer. Watts said he killed Miss Stahl because she had made life miserable for him and his wife, Alma, 48.

Studio Murder.

New York police quickly solved the slaying last Sunday of Julia Nussenbaum, 24, a violinist, whose body was found in a rehersal studio in downtown Manhattan. They arrested Mischa Rosenbaum, a Broadway booking agent, who admitted hitting the girl with a hammer during a quarrel. He said they had been sweethearts and that the quarrel developed when he told her he was returning to his estranged wife.

Denhardt Case.

Brig. Gen. H. H. Denhardt, former lieutenant governor and one of the best known politicians in the state of Kentucky, went on trial last week at New Castle, Ky., on a charge of murder.

He is accused of slaying his fiancée, Mrs. Verna Garr Taylor, a widow and a beauty of the blue grass country, last Nov. 6. Mrs. Taylor was shot beside a road with Gen. Denhardt's revolver. He contended she committed suicide. [See main news section.]

Gang Execution.

Two gunmen walked into a Chicago cigar store-poolroom Friday night and lined four men against the wall. Then they singled out one of the four and fired eleven bullets into his back. The slain man was Oscar Klinger, owner of the store, an ex-pugilist, gambler, money lender, and one time bombing suspect. Yesterday police were searching for members of a prohibition booze gang. Washington

Budget Message.

President Roosevelt on Tuesday sent congress a special budget message in which he asked for a relief appropriation of 1 billion 500 million dollars for the fiscal year 1938. The President also revealed that a revision of his previous budget estimates had become necessary because of a falling off of revenues. Receipts for the fiscal year 1937, he indicated, will be about 604 million dollars less than the treasury had estimated. Mr. Roosevelt urged congress to exercise the utmost economy. He said the treasury would end the fiscal year 1937 with a deficit of 418 millions, without taking into account 400 millions needed for debt retirement. [See main news section.]

"I propose to use every means at my command to eliminate this deficit during the coming fiscal year," he said.

The federal fiscal year begins on July 1 and ends June 30 of the following year.

Mr. Roosevelt announced last week that he plans to leave the capital next Wednesday on his annual spring fishing trip. [See map and text.]

Court Controversy.

Public hearings before the senate judiciary committee on President Roosevelt's plan to add six new members to the Supreme court ended Friday. During the week the committee had heard many witnesses voice strong opposition to the court packing scheme.

On Wednesday Dean Edward T. Lee of the John Marshall Law school, Chicago, said that the proposal was a great impropriety in that it was made while cases in which the government was interested were pending before the high court. A Democratic state chairman, J. F. Smith of Connecticut, appeared Friday. He warned that if the court packing plan succeeds it will wreck the Democratic party as well as constitutional government.

Senator Henry F. Ashurst [D., Ariz.], chairman of the judiciary committee, said that body would require several weeks to consider the court bill before reporting to the senate.

Congress.

As Republican leaders tried in vain to carry out President Roosevelt's request for economy, a turbulent house on Friday ignored the economy proposal and passed the 927 million dollar agriculture department bill. The opposition, led by Representative John Taber [R., N. Y.], failed to put through a motion to send the bill back to committee with instructions for a blanket cut of 10 per cent.

In reply to the Taber proposal Representative Clarence Cannon [D., Mo.] said that Democratic leaders in both houses of congress were planning to put through a joint resolution at th close of the session automatically reducing all departmental appropriations by 10 per cent.

On Thursday the house approve an emergency appropriation of $1,655,000 to carry five government departments through the present fiscal year

Crack Down.

The department of justice on Friday filed suit in the federal Distric court at New York to dissolve th Aluminum Company of America o the ground that it holds monopol control of the aluminum industry.

The action was a revival by th New Deal administration of the Sherman anti-trust act as a legal weapo in regulating business. This law wa suspended during the life of the NRA invalidated by the Supreme court.

The lawsuit also carried a ste further the bitter fight of the administration against Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury in the Coolidg and Hoover administrations who i chairman of the Aluminum company The government has been pressin for the last three years a 3 millio dollar back income tax claim agains the elderly financier.

Announcement of the suit was mad by Attorney General Cummings. Th action names thirty-six officers, directors and stockholders of the company including Mellon. Reaction to th lawsuit in New York was a drop o $4 a share in the common stock o the Aluminum company.

Capital Notes.

Secretary of Labor Perkins announced that 305,000 unemployed workers got jobs during March. In manufacturing industries of the country, she said, approximately 1,600,000 more workers were employed in March, 1937, than in March, 1936.

Records of the treasury for the first nine months of the present fiscal year showed that in order to retire the federal debt on a per capita share basis each of the country's 129 million inhabitants would have to pay $269.55. The national debt at present stands at the all time high of $34,772,671,296.

Special capitol police patroled the senate galleries following the receipt of a death threat note by Senator Harry S. Truman [D., Mo.]. The senator attended sessions as usual, apparently unconcerned.

Democratic officials mourned the death at Columbus, O., last Tuesday of W. Forbes Morgan, 57, former treasurer of the Democratic national campaign committee. Mr. Morgan was president of the Distilled Spirits Institute, Inc.

Sports

Cubs and Sox.

The Chicago White Sox enjoyed a more prosperous week than their fellow townsmen, the Cubs, even though they hardly performed in the manner that placed them in third place in the American league in the final 1936 standings. The Sox started off well, winning the deciding game of the city series from the Cubs, 7 to 6, Sunday.

Previous to that game each had won five. Two doubles in an extra inning gave the south side team its margin. A crowd of 29,197 saw the game, played at Wrigley field.

The Sox contributed generously to the St. Louis Browns' home opening Wednesday when they lost, 15 to 10, before 7,090, the Browns largest opening day crowd in years. They came back behind the pitching of Monty Stratton to win from the Browns, 6 to 1, Thursday, but were overwhelmed, 10 to 2, by the Detroit Tigers in the Sox's home opener before 15,000 Friday.

The Cubs were blanked, 5 to 0, by Cy Blanton and the Pittsburgh Pirates in their home opener before 18,940 Tuesday. The Pirates beat them, 4 to 2, Thursday, and on Friday they were humbled, 5 to 4, by the St. Louis Cardinals at St. Louis. They salvaged one game by beating the Cardinals, 13 to 12, yesterday. [See sports section.]

Roosevelt luck failed the Washington Senators in their opening game Monday as they were defeated, 4 to 3, in 10 innings by the Philadelphia Athletics. President Roosevelt saw the game. On that same day Philadelphia's National league team, the Phillies, spoiled the Patriots' day celebration for the Boston Bees, defeating the Bees, 2 to 1.

Al Simmons, now with Washington, his fourth club in the American league, helped ruin the opening day for the world's champion New York Yankees Tuesday, hitting a home run, double, and single in the game in which Washington defeated New York, 3 to 2. Another outstanding opening day achievement was that of Gerald Walker, Detroit outfielder, who hit a single, double, triple, and home run in Detroit's 4 to 3 victory over Cleveland.

Billiard Champ.

Ralph Greenleaf of New York returned after a lapse of four years to win his 14th world billiard championship Wednesday night. He defeated Andrew Ponzi, also of New York, 125 to 107, in the final match to take the first prize of $1,500. Two round robin tournaments were necessary to determine the winner.

Grey Gold.

Grey Gold, a comparatively little known horse, beat Col. Edward R. Bradley's two Kentucky Derby candidates, Billionaire and Brooklyn, in a Derby trial at one and one-sixteenth miles at Keeneland track Wednesday. Grey Gold took a lead of two lengths at the start and finished two and one-half lengths in front, although both Bradley horses challenged him at separate times during the race. Brooklyn is one of the betting favorites among Derby entries. The Derby will be run May 8 at Churchill Downs.

Strange

Asleep at the wheel of his automobile, Leo Sims, 25, was suddenly awakened when the car plunged into the Rock river, near Rockford, Ill. Under seven feet of water, Sims opened the door of the car and swam ashore. He was uninjured.

A panic occurred in a Boston radio station when a professional apiarist dropped a hive, releasing 30,000 bees. The drone of the huge swarm had just been broadcast.

Emmett Keefe of Peekskill, N. Y., went to the Hudson river bank to pull in his fishing nets. Entangled in one of them was a young buck deer weighing 70 pounds.

In Lorch, Germany, a stork was seen on the roof of a dwelling house. Within a short time it was announced that triplets had been born there.

Goldfish became so plentiful in the park lagoons at Elgin, Ill., that the city announced any person who came for them might have goldfish free.

A small boy asked Daniel Jones, hardware salesman at Coldwater, Mich., for a key to fit a pair of handcuffs the boy had found. Jones put on the cuffs. It took a locksmith three hours to make a key to release Jones.

UNREST GROWS IN NEW ZEALAND OVER LABOR RULE

People Find Being 'Saved' Has Disadvantages.

BY QUENTIN POPE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, April 24.—As the Labor government goes well into its second year of office here the voices of discontent begin to be heard throughout the land.

Chief among the complainers are the farmers, whom the Laborites promised to "save." The agriculturists admit that in the field of milk products the government has given them a fixed return and saved them from price swings, but they contend the return they are getting is too low to meet the extra cost of operation since labor took power. For the new radical administration set out also to be kind to the farm worker and made employers step up his wages and give him a full month's holiday every year with board allowance so that he could enjoy himself.

The general higher wage-shorter work week policy has brought the inevitable price rises in its train and the farmer today finds he must pay more than last year, or even last month, for many of his necessities.

Farm Labor Lured to City.

On top of this is the fact that the keystone in the government's program to bring back prosperity, the launching of numerous works progress administration undertakings, including many which aim at improved transit for farm products to markets and ports, has carried the lure of easy work at city wage rates into the country districts and the hired men on the farms are joining up. The attraction of a pay check at least 33 per cent higher than their old one and of a forty hour week, as well, has been too great to be resisted.

So today the farmer, who was to be helped to easier times by the Labor policy, is beginning to find himself doing chores he long ago handed over to his hired help and his wife back in the cowbarns helping him. This state of affairs was the subject of bitter complaint at the recent national conference of the dairy industry here.

And if agriculture has been annoyed by the impact of the public works plan and the rising tide of farm costs which is drowning any benefits gained from fixed returns above the market average, industry is becoming aggravated in various ways, but chiefly over the question of state contracts.

Clamp Secrecy on Tenders.

The government is one of the biggest buyers of materials and also has become one of the biggest of building promoters because of its need for new factories and offices to carry out various socialistic schemes. Acclaim greeted Public Works Minister Semple's declaration that the government intended to give private industry a chance to show what it could do by the contract system. But as secrecy was clamped down on tenders for various jobs, industrialists became annoyed.

The stores control board justified its system on the ground that the tenderers stipulated that their prices must be treated as confidential, and followed up with the statement that it was "not in the interests of the country to disclose particulars of prices paid for stores." The public works and housing ministries insist the figure at which some of their construction work is being done is their business.

In other fields strange things have happened. Needing an established export agency to carry out its plans for keener marketing of agricultural products, the government bought out the flourishing firm of Picot Brothers, keeping the executive head as a state servant for five years. The price agreed upon has not yet been revealed and the country will have to wait until Prime Minister Savage returns from the crowning of King George VI. to learn what it was.

Taxes on Upgrade.

Pressure of taxation also is being felt. The associated chambers of commerce, long silent on the Socialists' plans for a new state, have at last come out with an analysis of the taxes paid by each citizen as a result of the latest experiment in advanced legislation.

Indirect taxes, plus the direct levy on the worker for relief of the jobless, money which is deducted from his pay check and which he barely realizes he is losing, now total $300 a year for a family of four. In addition the average married man drawing as low as $1,350 a year has to pay taxes which have been stepped up from 80 to 100 per cent since Labor began to improve his condition.

Another factor which has caused controversy and has been seized upon by opponents of the Labor government is Labor's attack on the court. This country supplies Great Britain with much of its meat. A sitdown strike in the big factories where this meat is chilled for export immobilized shipments worth some millions of dollars and periled the market. The government intervened, brushed aside the arbitration court appointed to govern industry, and granted the men's demands. Anti-Socialists, charging that this move shows that Labor cannot be relied upon to leave the courts alone, have created some uncertainty as to the future. The government claims the strike was the result of an error of the court and that it merely ended an anomalous position.

AMERICAN MOTHER OF 1937 AND HER FAMILY

Accepts Honor May 9

Omaha, Neb., April 24.—[Special.]—The routine of the busy life uhich Mrs. Carl R. Gray has followed for many years—raising a family, working for the church, and taking part in numerous community activities—will be broken in two weeks so that she may be honored as "the American mother of 1937."

Mrs. Gray, whose husband is president of the Union Pacific railroad, will go to New York on mother's day, May 9, as guest of the Golden Rule Foundation, which selected her for the honor. She will attend a luncheon in her honor, she will receive a silver motherhood medal, and will participate in a radio program to mark the day.

The mother of three sons, Mrs. Gray is five times a grandmother and once a great-grandmother. She and Mr. Gray recently noted their golden wedding anniversary.

44,671 Youths Accepted for Camps; First Job for Many

Washington, D. C., April 24.—[Special.]—Of the 44,671 young men selected for the Civilian Conservation corps during January, 30,687 were either 17, 18, or 19 years of age, according to a survey made public today by Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation works. Of those selected, 7,805 never had held a job. Slightly more than 8 per cent had finished high school, less than 1 per cent college.

HANGS BY FOOT 2 HOURS; FREED BY THE POLICE

New York, April 24.—[Special.]—After hanging helplessly head down from part of a furnace apparatus for two hours William Hoy, 47, a watchman at the Hecker Flour company plant, was revived by a police emergency squad today.

Attempting to turn a four foot wheel, which operates the plant furnaces, with his foot Hoy was lifted from the floor when his foot was caught. He remained hanging, his cries unheeded, until Peter Presendo, plant fireman, found him.

Sergt. John Ford, in charge of the emergency squad, found that Hoy could not be removed without cutting the wheel with an acetylene torch. To avoid setting an adjacent oil tank on fire and burning the already tortured man it was necessary to cover him with an asbestos blanket. Dr. Ralph Elias took Hoy to a hospital. There it was said his right foot might have to be amputated.

PRIEST FOR 25 YEARS TODAY.

Deaver Dam, Wis., April 24.—[Special.]—The Rev. John Brzonkala, pastor of St. Michaels parish, will celebrate the 25th anniversary of his ordination tomorrow.

SHOTS BOUNCE AMONG CROWD; POLITICIAN HELD

Knoxville, Tenn., April 24.—(AP)—City Jailer L. L. Bradford said State Representative A. J. Cockrell Sr., was free under bond of $250 today on a charge of "shooting in the city."

A. J. Cockrell Sr.

Eight persons were slightly wounded last night when a shotgun was discharged into a crowd in front of a hotel managed by Cockrell.

Cockrell posted bond after telling a reporter the gun was discharged accidentally while he held it under his arm. The shot ricocheted from the sidewalk, he said, causing arm and leg wounds. His son, A. J. Cockrell Jr., was among those hit.

Jailer Bradford said Cockrell had complained to police because a crowd of persons had assembled in front of the hotel to listen to a sidewalk religious service. Bradford declared Cockrell told him the crowd refused to move away from the hotel.

GAMBLING CHARGES DROPPED.

Gambling charges against Robert White, 31 years old, 6235 Ingleside avenue, and George Smith, 35, of 5509 Woodlawn avenue, who were seized in a raid at 826 East 63d street on Friday, were dismissed by Municipal Judge Gibson E. Gorman yesterday because the raiders had no search warants.

U. S. INDICTS 18 MORE IN KANSAS CITY VOTE FRAUDS; TOTAL IS 126

Kansas City, Mo., April 24.—(AP)—A federal grand jury completed the first chapter of the government's inquiry into the Nov. 3 election here today by charging eighteen more persons with vote fraud conspiracy, bringing the total thus indicted to 126. Judge Albert L. Reeves, who ordered the investigation Dec. 14, announced another grand jury would be summoned May 4 to carry on. The investigation has resulted in conviction of thirty-two precinct and party workers, eighteen of whom have been sentenced to prisons and reformatories. Eight others who pleaded no defense have been placed on probation.

CUBS WIN, 13-12; LEE HALTS CARDINAL RALLY

INDIANA SETS RECORD AT PENN; DRAKE MARKS STAND

RACING TO CHAMPIONSHIPS IN TWO FAMOUS MEETS

Members of the University of Indiana four mile relay team, just after they had set a world record of 17 minutes 16.1 seconds in winning their event at the Penn relays. Left to right: Mel Trutt, James Smith, Tom Deckard, and Don Lash.

FRANCIS, TERRY RETAIN TITLES AT DES MOINES

San Romani Wins in Special Race.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Des Moines, Ia., April 24.—A complete absence of new records was the only record established today as the 28th annual relay carnival of Drake university arrived at a chilly, rainswept conclusion. Never before in the long career of the middle west's oldest track and field show had one of the leggy young men present failed to chisel a second or a fraction of a foot off of an old mark.

The total derth of new numbers for the Drake books can be charged to the weather man, who was in a mood more suited to November than April. A spanking southwest breeze drove a fine mist, interspersed with biting rain flurries, into the faces of the athletes. A heavy downpour last night left the infield a mass of soggy turf which drove the pole vaulters into the Drake fieldhouse and left the high jumpers with a precarious takoff.

Weather Is Raw.

The closing hour of the two day meet found the temperature nearing a raw 40 degrees, and only a few hardy youths frisked about in the correct lingerie, many of them slipping on gloves and into top coats once they had done their stint.

Despite this losing fight with the weather two champions retained the titles they had won last year while one co-title holder was dethroned. One was the handsome and husky Samuel Francis, the southpaw weight tossing hero of the University of Nebraska and last year's American Olympic team. Samuel, who had won the discus toss yesterday, came back this afternoon to make it a double by taking the shotput with a fling of 51 feet, 5½ inches, sufficient to prove to runnerup Tony Geniawicz of Darthmouth that the best iron thrower in these United States still lives out our way.

Terry Retains Title.

Alton Terry, who set a new Drake and American intercollegiate record for the 1936 javelin throw, was the other champion to prove that he is still boss. The Hardin-Simmons collegian wasn't so far from his mark of 222.65 feet today, at that, slinging the spear 218.9 feet.

The loser among last year's bosses was Cornelius Warmerdam of Fresno State, who had shared the 1936 pole vault crown. Warmerdam was among the fortunate young men who were sent indoors to wrangle at their specialty, but while he matched the performances of four others at 13 feet ½ inch, the title was awarded to Dan Gibbs of Notre Dame, who took fewer trials to go over at that height than any of his rivals.

Smoothest performance of the day was contributed by the gifted Archie San Romani of Emporia State Teachers, who engaged in a special match race at one and one-half miles with the famed Rideout twins of North Texas Teachers, among others.

San Romani Wins Easily.

Archie did not go to work until the middle of the back stretch on the third lap, but from there on he left his field tied to a post, finishing 200 yards in front of the brothers Rideout, who attempted to stage a fraternal dead heat for second, but without success, the judges awarding the place to Wayne over Blaine. San Romani's time was 6 minutes 46.9 seconds, short of the world figure of 6:42.5, set by Paavo Nurmi twelve years ago.

Mel Walker of Ohio State proved to be the surest footed of the boys who approached the skillet slick takeoff aft of the high jump bar, finally sailing over at 6 feet 3⅝ inches, enough to win from John Croson of Fresno State, who negotiated 6 feet 2 inches.

The western conference dominated the meet in total victories scored. After Walker had given Ohio State its second win, on top of yesterday's sprint medley victory, the Buckeye two mile foursome came back to beat a strong field.

Wisconsin Wins Two Events.

Wisconsin started the afternoon off by winning the first two track events, and then added a second and fourth in the pole vault. Jack Kellner ran away from the long legged Jack Patterson of Rice to win the 120 yard high hurdles, and the Badger four mile quartet then came back to take their race.

Bobby Grieve, University of Illinois sprint star, had quite a time of it to win by inches from Eddie Toribio of Oklahoma university in the 100 yard dash, but succeeded in the good time of 9.8 seconds. The Illinois 480 yard shuttle hurdle

HOOSIERS BREAK WORLD 4 MILE RELAY RECORD

Philadelphia, Pa., April 24.—[Special.]—Indiana's system of producing distance runners paid a heavy dividend today as 40,000 watched four Hoosier youngsters break the world record for the four mile relay, the crowning achievement of the 43d annual Pennsylvania relay carnival.

Indiana's combination of Melvern Trutt, Jimmy Smith, Tommy Deckard, and Don Lash stepped off four miles in the astounding time of 17:16.1, an achievement that erased with one sweeping motion world, American, collegiate, and meet records.

This exploit was the more surprising because it removed from the records the 17:17.2 set by the American Olympic quartet of Chuck Hornbostel, Gene Venzke, Archie San Romani, and Glenn Cunningham in the United States-British empire games at London last August.

Smith Timed in 4:14.

That was a record made by record breakers, an all-star combination primed for a killing. And Indiana broke it today with four undergraduates, only one of whom could be considered a standout miler. He, of course, is Don Lash.

Yet it was not Lash, but the unheralded Smith, who broke up the race and made the new mark possible. The willowy colored star uncorked a 4:14 mile in winning the second leg, and the mighty Lash did not have to punish himself to get a strangle hold on the record.

Indiana took major honors in the two day carnival. It won three of the seven relay championships. Deckard captured the steeplechase yesterday and today Indiana furnished another victor in Lash, who beat Luigi Beccali and Venzke in the special mile event, though the time of 4:24.3 was unimpressive.

Texans Are Disqualified.

To its distance medley crown of yesterday and the four mile triumph today Indiana added the 880 yard title. That, however, was something of a gift, since North Texas Teachers, the actual winner, and in record time, was disqualified and Indiana moved up into first place.

The disqualification enabled Indiana to escape being bracketed along with Manhattan and Pittsburgh with two relay victories. Manhattan won the one and the two mile championship, and Pitt made off with the sprint medley and freshman mile titles.

But Indiana produced the only real record of the day. There were two other minor ones, one a 3:19.6 class B mile by the North Texas sprint combination and the other a 3:23 accomplishment by Western Michigan Teachers' college.

Nearly Catches Field.

It is not often that a four mile relay can climax a show of the magnitude of the Penn relays. But the crowd seemed to sense something unusual was going to happen the instant the six teams lined up.

There was a roar at the getaway and for more than 17 minutes there was the rumble of human thunder rising to the cloudless sky. And it was not even a race. It was a procession.

Trutt fashioned a 50 yard lead with a 4:22.2 mile. Smith then did 4:14, and the lead had hopped up to 200 yards. Deckard made it 250 with his 4:22.7 mile, and then Lash, the unpredictable, took the baton.

Bedlam broke loose. The clock at the open end of the horseshoe indicated a record. Lash flashed away to a 61 second quarter and then slowed down.

The race, however, resembled an

Tribune Golf School Will Open May 4

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Fore!

The fifth annual free golf school conducted by THE TRIBUNE, which in its first four years has grown to be the largest system of group instruction in the history of the game, will open on Tuesday night, May 4, on four courses of the Chicago park district—Jackson, Columbus, Diversey in Lincoln park, and Marquette.

Alec Cunningham.

The Tribune school, founded in 1933, was the original pioneer of the mass education movement currently sweeping the country's links. Since it made its debut, professional groups, universities, school boards, civic recreation bodies, and golf manufacturers all have come to realize that the way to interest Elmer and Ella Dubb in golf is to begin at the beginning—that is, to teach them the ABC's of the game.

94,000 Enroll in Four Years.

Best testimonial to the success of the school in interesting novices is the record of a total enrollment of more than 94,000 men, women, and children in four years. The opening school in 1933 attracted 17,000, followed by 20,000 in 1934, and 23,000 in 1935. Last year, the first in which the park district coöperated, a new high of more than 34,000 was reached for the series of free lessons.

Simplicity has been the keystone of the school since its inception, and the 1937 classes will find the cur-

Kennedy Faces Tigers Today in Series Final

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

For the very good reason that there was too much mud on the premises as the result of rainfall, the White Sox and Tigers didn't get together yesterday for their second meeting of the American league season. Mr. James J. Dykes, the Sox boss, having seen most of his men soil the seats of their pants and at the same time lose, 15 to 10, under similar conditions in last Wednesday's opener at St. Louis, was responsible for the postponement.

Given suitable conditions today the Sox and Tigers will play the final game of the series. The somewhat elderly Ted Lyons was billed for the pitching assignment against the robust Detroiters yesterday, but he won't appear this afternoon. Dykes has decided to furnish Vernon Kennedy, waylaid on opening day, with another chance to register a victory. Elden Auker will start for Detroit unless Schoolboy Rowe can convince his manager he has fully recovered from recent ailments.

Dykes Stands Pat.

Although two of the Sox first three games have revealed them lacking in several particulars, Dykes is going to continue for at least another day with the same layout. A lot of their trouble thus far has been centered around the pitching, a condition which arises at one time or another with the best of teams.

But there is a noticeable hitting deficiency in center field and Dykes refuses to act on the matter. Larry Rosenthal didn't hit during the training trip and is still in the same fix. Some of the ball writers have besieged Dykes daily with queries as to when he is going to make a change. Dykes humors the impetuous scribes by withholding a reply.

Dykes appreciates that Rosenthal isn't hitting and that Mike Kreevich might do better. But he's keeping Rosenthal in there on the hunch that

EUROPE'S RINGS: WHERE NATIONAL HONOR IS UPHELD

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, April 24.—An intensely nationalistic spirit is the chief characteristic of European boxing which we have observed on a tour of Europe's chief boxing centers. Victory is considered imperative. As a consequence, the European boxing tournament which starts May 5 at Milan is certain to develop into a terrific battle.

As an added incentive the winners will be rewarded with a trip to Chicago to fight the Golden Gloves team on May 28.

Even in Ireland, England, Sweden, and France, where boxing is conducted without government aid, every effort is made to gain supremacy. Ireland is intensely proud of its international record. Its natural rivalry with England will climax in the bouts at Albert hall, in London, next Thursday.

It's a Government Matter.

Where boxing is conducted as part of a national sport program, such as in Germany and Italy, victory is of tremendous importance. The individual's national pride is heightened by the circumstances of his training and by the government's interest in his success.

Some day strict amateurism may become an issue under these circumstances, but right now the program will result in the formation of the greatest boxing team ever to cross the Atlantic.

Despite the ability of the Chicago boxers, many believe that the Golden Gloves team scarcely can win. Germany alone would be a major opponent. In addition, the outstanding stars of other nations, Sweden, Denmark, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Poland, and France must create Europe's greatest squad.

Won Title 6 Straight Years.

Willi Pietsch, German light heavyweight champion, is a splendid example of an experienced and able fighter. He is from Leipzig. He won the Saxony title six consecutive years from 1928 to 1933 and took the national championship just before his 30th birthday this year. His age is comparable to that of Dick Hearns, Ireland's 33 year old light heavyweight champion. Both are much older than any member of the American team.

Pietsch, who drives a taxi, is a member of the Marathonwesten club of Leipzig. From a description of his punching ability he is considered superior to Herman West, champion of Chicago's Golden Gloves squad.

Erich Wilke of Hanover, Germany's bantamweight champion, is a standout among the younger stars. Wilke will be 23 in June, but he has been boxing for eight years. He is an optician. He has won 140 out of 180 bouts, winning district titles in 1933, 1934, and 1936.

Will Be Tough Foe.

A champion such as Wilke is certain to furnish Chicago's Austrian born Frank Kainrath with stern competition in the international matches. Wilke still must earn the right to fight at Milan by proving himself superior to his German rival, Alfred Graaf of Hamburg.

Other outstanding bantamweights definitly entered in the Milan event are Antoni Czortek of Graudenz, Poland; Vaclav Jellnek of Prague, Czechoslovakia; Veikke Huunskonen of Helsingfors, Finland; Etter of Switzerland, and Kaebiof of Estonia. Any one of these might win at Milan.

BRYANT FADES AS FOUR RUNS SCORE IN NINTH

Durocher Fans to End Uprising.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., April 24.—Well, anyhow, the Cubs won their first game of the season and Cardinals suffered their first loss. And you have to call the 13 to 12 affair here this afternoon major league baseball — but smile when you say it.

The Cubs went into the latter half of the ninth with a five run lead. When Bill Lee struck out Capt. Leo Durocher to end the spectacle the Cards had made four runs in the ninth, had the tying run on third, and the winning run on second.

Cubs Take 4 to 1 Lead.

In the fourth inning the Chicagoans put over four runs to take a 4 to 1 lead. The score became 4 to 2 in the St. Louis fourth when Pepper Martin slammed a homer into the stands. In the first half of the fourth the Cubs made it 5 to 2, but in the home fifth the Cards chased across six runs, three off Leroy Parmelee, who went away leaving two runners on base and none out. Medwick, first up against Bryant, knocked a spurious homer past Phil Cavarretta, good for three more runs and an even half dozen without a put out. Then Bryant got the side out.

The Cubs bounced back in the sixth with five runs on four walks, a single by Frank Demaree, and doubles by Bill Jurges and Bill Herman. These doings made the score 10 to 8. The Cubs made the count 12 to 8 in the seventh on singles by Jurges and Bryant, a walk to Galan, and a single by Herman.

Here Comes That Winning Run.

With two out in the ninth the Cubs made what proved to be the winning run. Herman walked after Bryant and Galan had flied out and scored the payoff run on a triple by Cavarretta.

In the sixth, seventh, and eighth Bryant retired the Cards in order. He had perfect control, everything that should make him a great pitcher. Then came the ninth and one of those Bryant fainting spells. Clay walked two pinch batters, then pitched a double to Terry Moore which scored a run. Next he walked Stu Martin to fill the bases. This got him his recall to the shelter of the dugout. Lee went in and made Bordagaray and Medwick fly out, the process allowing one run. Lee then walked Mize to fill the bases. Pepper Martin singled to bring the score to its final status. The lick also put Mize on third with the tying run. Then Pepper stole second. A single by Capt. Durocher would have won for the Cards, but Leo didn't get the single. He struck out and everybody left the ball park.

Cavarretta Gets First Hit.

The Cubs' first inning was important to Cavarretta, if nobody else. After Galan had fanned and Herman had fouled to Ogrodowski, Phil doubled to left, his first hit of the season. The effort was wasted, for Collins was called out on strikes. The

VALUE OF SOX'S ROOKIE HUNTING SYSTEM PROVED

Minor League Tieups and Scouts Bring Results.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

J. Louis Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, now is privileged to get up and talk on the advisability of having a little system in the collecting of baseball talent in the rough.

Uncle Lou, as he is known to the scribes, is well versed on the subject. He has learned it through experience. In the few years that have elapsed since he succeeded his father, the late Charles A. Comiskey, as president of the club, J. Louis has come up with quite a layout of youngsters, all of which happened because he couldn't see any value in helter-skelter methods.

A few scouts, a few working agreements with minor league clubs and willingness to pay the price when the scouts consented, accounts for the success.

"Dug Him Up by Ourselves."

The sprightly Sox, in the first division last season for the first time since 1920, now own about ten men for whom J. Louis was directly responsible. They've all appeared in the last few years. Six of them are fellows at whom Uncle Lou can point and say, "We dug him up all by ourselves." A few of the others were salvaged from the minors after being dropped by other major league clubs, but there is no shame attached to a profit from another fellow's mistake.

During the J. Louis régime the Sox have acquired from the minors men like Zeke Bonura, John Whitehead, Monty Stratton, John Rigney, Larry Rosenthal, and Henry Steinbacher. All these come under the heading of Sox discoveries of recent date.

Vernon Kennedy, who cashed in at 21 victories last season, was released by the Athletics because of a dead arm. The Sox salvaged him from a minor. Tony Piet and Mike Kreevich were purchased after National league clubs had abandoned them to minor league careers. Rip Radcliff came back to stay after the Athletics had shunted him aside, but originally he was located by the Sox down in an obscure southern circuit. At that time Rip was a flop, but four years later he returned to the Sox a different man.

Appling Is Chief Prize.

Luke Appling, the prize of the present south side outfit, arrived just before J. Louis' ascension to the club's throne. The Atlanta club, which owned the youngster, tried to peddle him to a half dozen big league clubs before propositioning the Sox. It just happened that prior to the request for a bid on the player the Sox had received a tip on him from their scouts in the cotton belt. Appling was purchased sight unseen at a sum all out of proportion to the lad's known ability. He had just escaped from a college campus. But those who passed him up because he was an unknown probably get red necks now when somebody mentions that Appling has grown into just about the best of big league shortstops.

Except for pitchers, only four of the present Sox regulars were captured via the trade route. Jack Hayes has served at second since being obtained from Washington along with Bump Hadley and Sam Jones for Carl Reynolds and Johnny Kerr. Dykes, granted that he still is the regular third sacker despite his inclination to retire, stepped in along with Al Simmons and Mule Haas in the fall of 1932 when Uncle Lou handed $100,000 to Connie Mack. Dixie Walker, right fielder, came to the Sox early last season when Comiskey paid $7,500 to the Yanks and took a chance that the fellow's dead arm could be restored. It looks as if Comiskey didn't waste his $7,500.

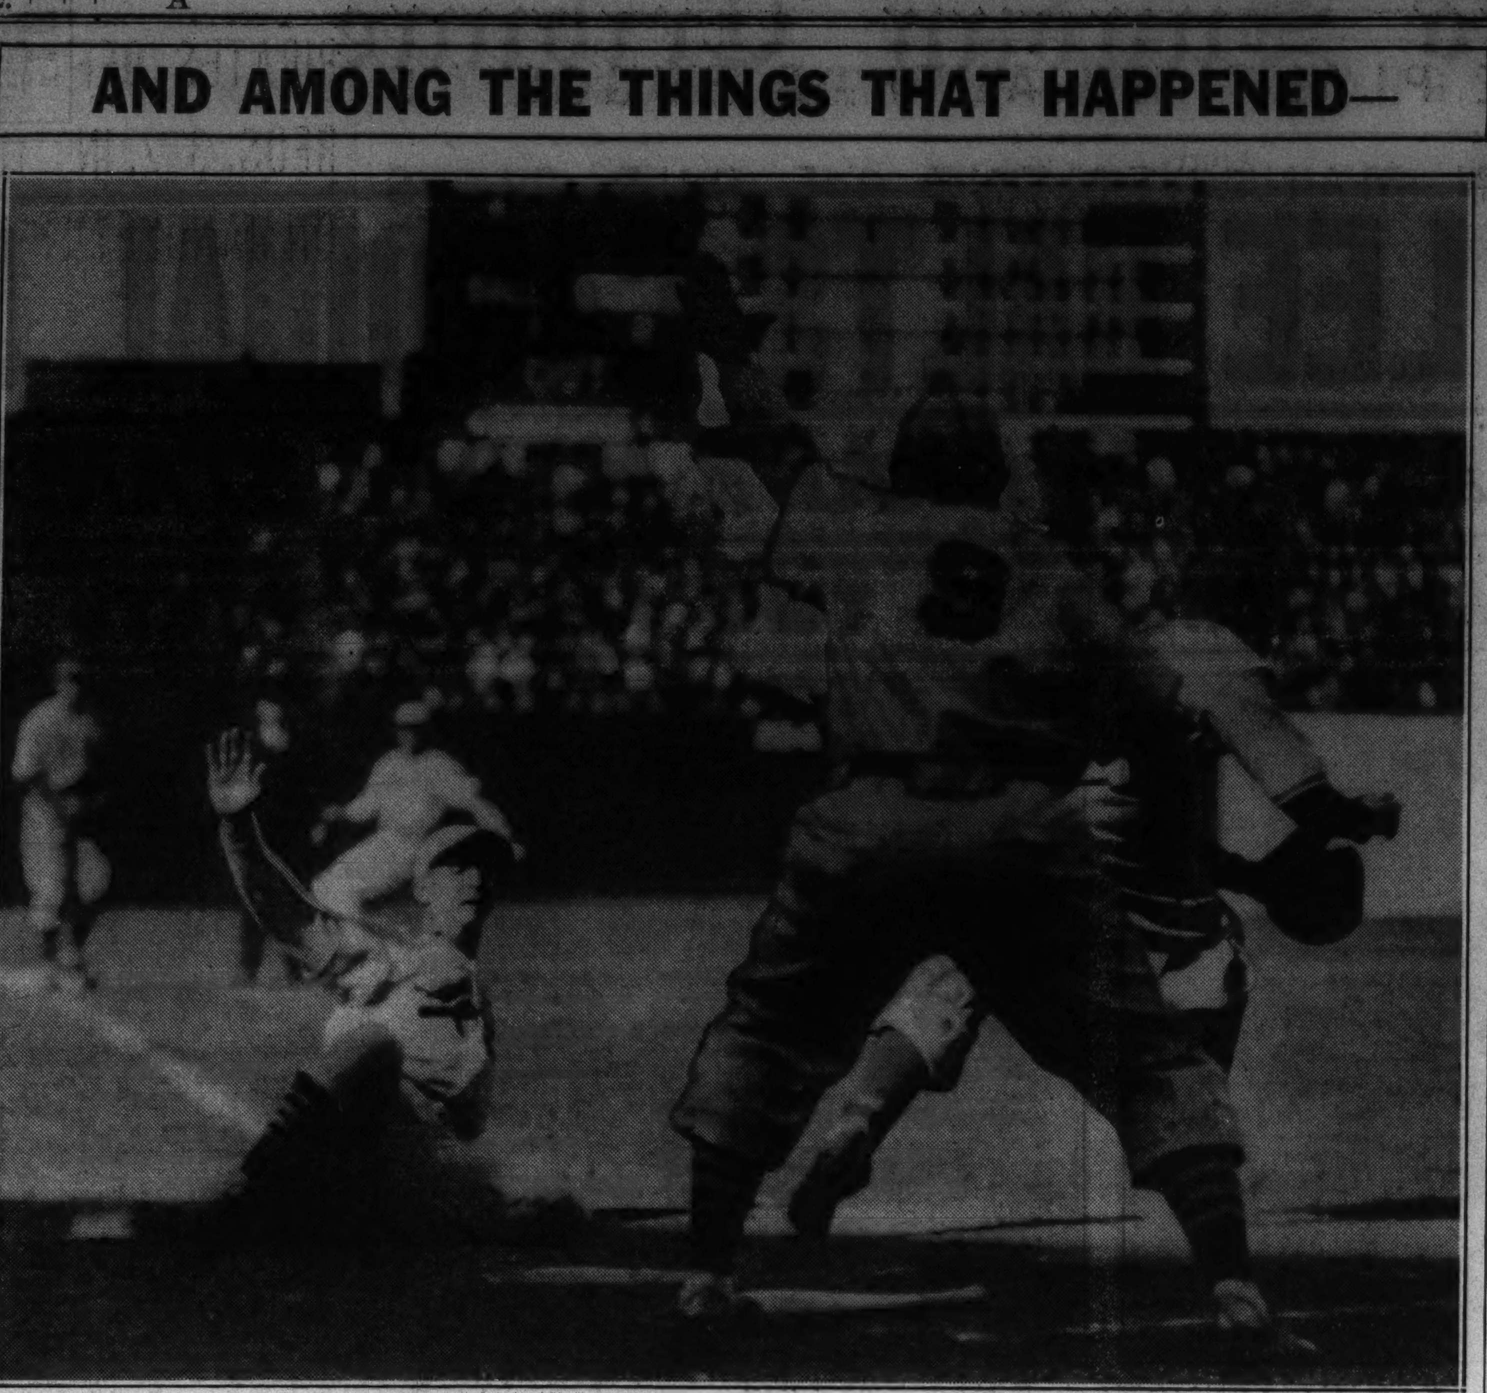
AND AMONG THE THINGS THAT HAPPENED—



Stu Martin of the Cardinals singled with the bases loaded in the fifth inning of yesterday's battle with the Cubs at St. Louis. Brusie Ogrodowski (No. 9) scores easily, but turns too late to signal Jimmy Brown, sliding in after him, to "take it easy." Catcher Ken O'Dea of the Cubs reaches for the throw to home plate. The Cardinals scored six runs in the inning, but the Cubs won, 13 to 12. [Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Cubs Defeat Cards, 13-12; First Victory

Cards went out in order in their half of the inning.

Demaree, O'Dea, and Hack supplied infield outs in the second, but the Cubs had to bear down to avert a run in the Cardinal half. Medwick opened with a double to left. Mize fanned. Then Pepper Martin grounded to Jurges and Medwick was run down, Jurges to Hack to Herman to Hack to Jurges. Martin reached second on the rundown, but Herman threw out Durocher to end the inning.

Jurges walked to start the third, but never got past second. Parmelee, Galan, and Herman failed to get the ball out of the infield.

Cards Score in Third.

The first run of the game was chalked up by the Cards in the third inning. Harrell walked with one down, paused while Moore flied to Galan, took third on Stu Martin's single to right, and scored on Bordagaray's single to center. Stu Martin, however, was out trying to reach third, Cavarretta to Hack.

In the fourth the Cubs knocked out Harrell, their first eradication of the season. Cavarretta was safe on Bordagaray's low throw and went to third on Collins' single to right. Demaree doubled to left, Cavarretta scoring the tying run and Collins stopping at third. O'Dea caromed a single off Durocher's glove, Collins scoring and Demaree holding second. Hack singled to center, Demaree scoring and O'Dea stopping at second. Johnson replaced Harrell. Ogrodowski tried to trap Hack off first and threw to right field, O'Dea reaching third. Jurges flied to Moore, O'Dea scoring. Then Parmelee lined into a double play, Stu Martin to Mize.

Pepper Whacks Home Run.

After bowling over Medwick and Mize in the home fourth, Parmelee pitched a home run ball to Pepper Martin. It was a shot into the stands in left center. Durocher fouled to Collins.

Galan beat out a bunt to get the fifth under way and reached third when Herman smashed a single off Bordagaray's shins. Augie scored while Cavarretta and Herman were going down in a double play. Collins flied to Medwick.

Here's the record of the game's second big explosion, in which the Cards made six runs before a batsman was retired in their fifth.

Ogrodowski, Pinch Batter Brown, and Moore loaded the bases on two infield singles and one wind-blown outfield single. Stu Martin then lined a real single to right, Ogrodowski and Brown scoring and Moore taking third. Bordagaray socked a wicked single to left, scoring Moore with the tying run. Bryant replaced Parmelee. Medwick drove a hit to short center and when the ball bounced past Cavarretta to the flag pole it went as a homer, Stu Martin and Bordagaray scoring ahead of Jersey Joe. Mize fouled to Hack for the first out. Pepper Martin then walked. Pepper stole second, and when he overslid the bag after being called safe he scampered to his feet and tried to run to third. He was run down for the second out. Durocher then ended the riotous situation with a fly to Galan.

Paul Dean Takes Mound.

And here's the record of explosion No. 3. Paul Dean went to pitch and the bases immediately were loaded on a single by Demaree and walks to O'Dea and Hack. P. Dean was yanked and Mike Ryba, who caught for the Cardinals against the Cubs in the last game of last season, went in to pitch. Jurges doubled, scoring O'Dea and Hack, and Bryant walked, again filling the bases. Durocher dropped Galan's popup to short left, Hack scoring. Durocher, however, recovered in time to force Jurges at third. Herman doubled to left, Bryant scoring. Cavarretta walked, filling the bases for the third time. Collins flied to Moore, Galan scoring. Demaree popped to Durocher.

Bryant had a lot of stuff in the sixth. Ogrodowski, Pinch Batter Gutteridge, and Moore couldn't get the ball out of the infield.

Cubs Add Two Off Winford.

The Cubs waited till two were out in the seventh before grabbing two runs off Winford, fourth Cardinal pitcher. After O'Dea and Hack had flied out, Jurges and Bryant singled and Galan walked to fill the bases. Herman then singled to left, scoring Jurges and Bryant. Cavarretta grounded out. The Cards again failed to get the ball out of the infield in the seventh. Stu Martin fanned, Bordagaray popped to Collins, and Medwick fouled to Collins.

The Cubs got two men on base in the eighth. With one down, Demaree beat out a bunt for his third hit of the game. O'Dea fouled to Mize and Hack walked. Then Pepper Martin went to the wall for Jurges' fly. In the Card eighth Mize flied to Galan, Pepper Martin flied to Cavarretta, and Durocher was called out on strikes.

Herman Scores on Cavarretta's Triple

After Bryant and Galan had flied out in the ninth, Herman walked and scored on Cavarretta's triple off the top of the wall in deep right center. Collins flied to Pepper Martin.

Siebert batted for Ogrodowski to start the ninth and walked. Padgett batted for Winford and walked on four pitches. Moore doubled to left, Siebert scoring and Padgett stopping at third. Stu Martin walked, filling the bases. Lee replaced Bryant. Bordagaray flied to Cavarretta, Padgett scoring and Moore taking third. Medwick flied to Galan and the runners held their bases. Mize walked, filling the bases. Pepper Martin singled to center, scoring Moore and Stu Martin and putting Mize on third with the tying run. With two strikes and one ball against Durocher, the game was suspended while ushers chased about a hundred excited school boys and girls from the field. When the game was resumed Pepper Martin stole second. Then Durocher fanned.

Grimm Nominates Bill Lee to Face Dizzy Dean Today

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Louis, Mo., April 24.—Manager Grimm of the Cubs, who always reserves the right to change his mind, today switched his pitching plans for tomorrow's game with the Cardinals. He will start Bill Lee and save Larry French for the Cincinnati opener in Chicago Monday.

Dizzy Dean, who has a 2 to 0, 10 inning decision over the Reds in his 1937 memo book to date, will seek to enter another victory when he goes against the Cubs in the series final here tomorrow.

The Cubs' tabulation of only two assists in yesterday's game was one more than the National league record. On Aug. 23, 1932, Mark Koenig, playing shortstop for the Cubs against the Giants in the eighth inning made the only Chicago assist of the game.

The weather the Cubs experienced in California may have been all right as preparatory stuff, at that. It was 43 in Chicago Thursday, 84 here yesterday, and 56 today.

Gabby Hartnett has decided to wait several more days before starting a game. No soreness remains in his ailing arm, he says, but the big fellow doesn't want to take any chances, especially in view of the fact that Ken O'Dea has been doing a good job of catching.

Illinois P. G. A. members have formed the faculties of the first four schools and all have promised to resume their chairs again on May 4.

The rules of the school are simple. Merely fill out the coupon accompanying this story with name, address, and the course at which you desire to receive instruction, whether it be Jackson, Diversey, Columbus, or Marquette.

Classes Begin at 6 P. M.

All classes will be combined this year, bringing men, women, boys, and girls together for each lesson. The first will be given on May 4, the second on Thursday, May 6; the third on Tuesday, May 11, and the fourth and final instruction on Thursday, May 13.

Each class will begin promptly at 6 p. m. Every prospective pupil is urged to appear before this time, if possible. The first half hour will be devoted to a special demonstration by several of the game's leading tournament players and outstanding teachers. Following this the headmaster of each of the four classes will begin instruction on the fundamentals, including grip, stance, backswing, downswing, and impact. This finishing phase of each class is expected to require one hour, from 6:30 to 7:30 o'clock.

Name Most Apt Pupils.

At the conclusion of the fourth lesson, each of the No. 1 professors, assisted by their colleagues, will name the most apt pupil—man, woman, boy, and girl—at each course, and those who finshed second to them. These 32 will assemble at one of the park courses on Sunday afternoon, May 16. Here the four prize students of the entire school will be judged by a jury of leading pros, after which four of the latter will play an 18 hole exhibition match.

The Tribune school bars no potential golfer, regardless of age, sex, or ability. The 80 shooter is as welcome as the greenest of duffers. Grandpa may bring his grandson, and Ma and her daughter are also eligible. The lessons are given at no cost whatsoever to the pupils, beyond the time it takes them to reach the courses, all easily accessible, and the duration of the lesson itself.

Here Are Courses for School.

The four courses at which the school will be held follow:

Columbus—Jackson boulevard and Central avenue.

Diversey—In Lincoln park, foot of Diversey boulevard and lake.

Jackson—63d street and Stony Island.

Marquette—Marquette road and Kedzie avenue.

Among the professionals who have once more offered their services as demonstrators and lecturers at the school are Horton Smith, Harry Cooper, Tommy Armour, Jimmy Thomson, Lawson Little, Johnny Revolta, Ky Laffoon, Frank Walsh, Dick Metz, Jimmy Foulis, Alec Cunningham, Joe Jemsek, Lew Waldron, Tom Walsh, and Jock Anderson. These will be aided by members of what is recognized as the ablest teaching unit in the country, the Illinois section of the P. G. A.

Each of the winners of the finals, together with those who follow them, will be rewarded with prizes by THE TRIBUNE, including clubs, bags, and balls.

HARVARD BEATS PRINCETON CREW FOR COMPTON CUP

Scores Upset in Race's Fifth Renewal.

Princeton, N. J., April 24.—(AP)—Harvard's varsity crew, starting its first season under Coach Tom Bolles, one time Washington oarsman, sounded a challenge to other eastern rivals today by beating Princeton's favored eight in the fifth annual Compton cup race.

Rowing smoothly over the mile and three quarter course on picturesque Lake Carnegie, Harvard crossed the finish line three quarters of a length ahead of Princeton. Its time was 9 minutes 7 seconds, compared with Princeton's 9:09.5. Massachusetts Institute of Technology was third in 9:25.

Ends Princeton Reign.

It was Harvard's first major sprint triumph since the Compton cup was put in competition by Dr. Karl T. Compton, Massachusetts Institute of Technology's president, in 1933. Princeton had won the four previous races.

Stroked by James F. Chace, a junior from New York City, the Harvard eight, averaging 180 pounds, pulled into the lead in the first half mile, with Princeton trailing closely as both hit a high beat. At the mile the two boats were alongside each other, rowing at 36 beats to the minute. They stayed practically even until both unleashed their final drive. Then Harvard stepped up its beat to 38, and despite Princeton's 40 was pulling away at the finish.

Tech Wins Close Race.

Harvard competed in only one other event, the junior varsity race, and won that by the same margin in 9:24. Princeton again was second, in 9:27.8, and Tech, far back, finished in 10:18.

Tech, however, won the best race of the day, the 150 pound varsity event, putting on a brilliant final spurt to nip Princeton at the finish. Only three feet separated the boats as they passed the white flags. Rowed over the Henley distance of 1 5-16 miles, Tech's time was 7:06, Princeton's 7:06.1. Princeton's lone triumph came in the opening race, the Tiger yearlings defeating M. I. T. by three lengths at 1¾ miles. The time was 9:36 to 9:50 for the Engineers.

Yachtsmen Get Ready for New Season

Hundreds of yachtsmen are busy cleaning, repainting, repairing, and refitting the 2,500 pleasure craft in Chicagoland these days. This week marks the height of the annual spring fitting out season. In another 30 days nearly all boats will be in commission.

Activity is centered in the larger yacht yards, notably the several on Navy pier, the Chicago Boat Building company, Karas' boat yard, the Keith Boat and Engine company, Dan Leander's yard, Jens Christensen's yard, and the Great Lakes Boat Building corporation, all on the Chicago river or its branches. On the near north side there also is activity at Otto Wolthe's and J. C. Baltus' yards, small boat builders.

Among the young amateur sailors doing yacht yard work is Jack Eisenschiml, who is helping to commission the cruising windjammer Marobee. He is a nephew of Dr. Otto Eisenschiml, Chicago author.

Hobelman Replaces Lake.

Announcement was made yesterday by Hal Hull, publisher of the magazine Yachtsman, that Thomas P. Lake has been replaced as editor by D. E. [Gim] Hobelman. Hobelman was associate editor of the magazine. He is secretary of the Chicago Corinthian Yacht club and an author. Mr. Lake now is associated with the National Outboard association at its headquarters here.

Harry N. Gifford, a member of the Lake Geneva Yacht club, is building a new racing yacht of the A class for competition in Wisconsin this season. He formerly owned the A boat Little Smoke II., with which he won the Inland Lake Yachting association championship in 1935. Like the other yachts in the class, Gifford's new A boat will be 38 feet long and carry a 475 square foot sloop rig.

Lake Geneva Club Opens June 19.

The Lake Geneva club will start its 64th annual season with a race for all classes on June 19, according to Ernst C. Schmidt, secretary-treasurer. A. F. Gartz Jr., who won the 1936 club championship, is the newly elected commodore.

BAER ACCEPTS GARDEN OFFER OF PASTOR BOUT

New York, April 24.—(AP)—Jimmy Johnston of Madison Square Garden today announced that Max Baer, former heavyweight champion now in London, had agreed to meet Bob Pastor, the New York boy who stayed ten rounds with Joe Louis, provided a suitable date can be arranged.

In a cable to Johnston, Ancil Hoffman, manager of Baer, said the former title holder "will gladly box Pastor provided a date can be arranged on his return to the United States."

he might start to hit any day and to bench him might shatter what little remains of the lad's confidence. If Rosenthal should get under way before the manager's patience becomes exhausted, Dykes will be around reminding the scribes of their previous questions.

Tigers Turn Down Whitehead.

Dykes, usually a man of many words, also has muffled himself against queries pertaining to John Whitehead, who since winning his first eight games in his freshman season has been neglectful of his physical condition. Dykes is supposed to have offered him to the Tigers yesterday for another pitcher, but Manager Mike Cochrane, having been trimmed in the Al Simmons purchase, is suspicious. If Dykes can't trade the indifferent Texan, there is a possibility of his sentence to a minor league club for the season.

The Sox will move to Cleveland tonight for the opener of a three game series with the Indians. After that they'll jump back here for games next Thursday and Friday with the Browns. Then, before opening up a long stay at Comiskey park, they'll go to Detroit to fill engagements May 1, 2 and 3.

FELLER FANS 11 IN SIX INNINGS, BUT BROWNS WIN, 4-3

ndians' Star Retires with Pulled Muscle.

Cleveland, O., April 24.—(AP)—Bob eller lost his first official start of the eason today to the St. Louis Browns, to 3, but maintained his record rikeout pace by fanning eleven men the six innings he pitched before a ulled muscle in his million dollar rm forced him from the game.

A first inning streak of wildness, in hich the Browns scored all their uns and two of the four hits they agged off Feller, heralded the downall of the major league strikeout king.

Bob Feller and Frank Pytlak in onference during yesterday's game. The catcher's advice must have een good, for Feller fanned eleven Browns in six innings.

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Dr. Edward B. Castle, club physiian, said the injury to the arm, which any baseball observers describe as e fastest since Walter Johnson, was ot serious. Feller himself said he ould be ready for action in a couple f days.

Browns Go Down Swinging.

The 18 year old schoolboy, although osing his 1937 American league opener fter weathering a second inning torm potentially as serious as the rst, had the Browns churning the tmosphere at a rate virtually equalg that with which he hung up the trikeout mark of 17 last season.

Feller started by walking Knickerocker. After Allen had flied to Campell, Vosmik singled. Bell drew a pass nd Manager Rogers Hornsby walked, orcing in Knickerbocker. Clift struck ut, but the schoolboy walked Davis, orcing in Vosmik, and then Hemsley apped a single over second, bringing Hornsby and Davis. Pitcher Jim Walkup, in trouble much of the game ut equal to it except in the second, truck out to end the inning.

Feller Even Gets a Hit.

Feller added a strikeout by Hornsby the second, whiffed Davis, Hemsley, nd Walkup in order in the third, got Knickerbocker in the fourth, Bell and Hemsley in the fifth, and wound up is abbreviated chore by whiffing Knickerbocker and Allen in the sixth.

The Indians pushed over their three uns in the second. Hale doubled to ight, Campbell walked, Pytlak triled to left to bring in two runs, and hen Feller surprised every one by a eat single to right, scoring Pytlak.

HAVE YOU READ THE PLAN? AN AUTHOR SUGGESTS * * * NEW DEAL SETUP IN MANAGEMENT OF OUR CUBS

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 24.—For some reason we've never been able to fathom, owner P. K. Wrigley of the Cubs never has asked us to tell him how to run his baseball business.

We are not exactly sore at Mr. Wrigley for this delay or oversight. But, frankly, we've got pretty tired of waiting for the summons.

Instead of waiting any longer, we have decided to come right out now with what we call the Burns reorganization plan. P. K. Wrigley reads THE TRIBUNE and can grab the plan without any charge whatsoever. He does not even have to run a credit line in the Chicago Cub news.

We're Not Shooting at Any Incumbents.

Now the first thing we want to make clear before unfolding the details of the Burns Reorganization Plan, hereinafter to be known simply as The Plan, is that we are not shooting at any incumbents in the Cubs' organization. They are all our pals and we have in mind retaining all, except Mr. Wrigley in his rôle of president. Not only that, all are in line for raises.

The only reason that we are going to remove Mr. Wrigley from the presidency is because he's much too busy to fiddle around with the details of running the Cubs. Multi-millionaires all are too busy to monkey around with any one problem. We've chummed around with a lot of multi-millionaires, or at least have seen them in the news reels, and most of them are preoccupied all the time. You can't run a ball club if you've got anything else on your mind and you're apt to lose your mind if you haven't got anything else except a ball club to think about. It's all that intricate.

Charles John Grimm Is New President.

So, under The Plan Mr. Wrigley stays, as chairman of the board and Charles John Grimm, manager and former vice president, is elevated to the club presidency—neither next week nor next winter, but sometime.

Charley Leo Hartnett, whom Mr. Grimm is said to favor as his successor when and if he does retire as manager for whatever cause, is to become manager.

So far, we haven't sprung any ideas that haven't been discussed rather sketchily here and there in the past. Grimm has been mentioned before as a presidential potentiality and Hartnett has been forwarded as a managerial possibility. But usually these two prospective happenings have been mentioned separately. Too many have imagined that if Hartnett were to become manager of the Cubs it would be after Grimm was given the boot or bounce.

The Burns plan calls for Grimm to be named president and to announce as his first official act HIS appointment of Hartnett as manager.

Hartnett's first official act will be to name Charley Root as coach in charge of pitchers. He will follow this announcement by running several of the present Cubs into Lake Michigan. However, we don't want to anticipate the reforms which Hartnett will make without the consent and advice of President Grimm.

Here We Give You a Sentimental Setting.

President Grimm! Manager Hartnett! Coach Root! There you have the three grand old men of the Cubs. You start out with a sentimental baseball setting, which is one of the things the Cubs need more than anything else.

But here we are with our new officers. And we haven't given you a vice president. But don't think we forgot the new vice president. Fans, we give you Otis Shepard, art director of the Wrigley company, designer of the new Cub uniforms, P. K. loyalist, and personal companion on occasion, but withal a bon vivant par excellence, raconteur extraordinaire, and despite his great industry and capacity for creative and other work, an inspiring paragon. He also sings Harry Lauder songs and sketches portraits on night club tablecloths, but you don't have to listen to or look at these unless you want to. What we mean to say is that Mr. Shepard indeed is a rollicking spirit. Of course there are others in the Wrigley setup, but Mr. Shepard is known far and wide as the Man Who Does Not Yes P. K. Wrigley Unless He Agrees with Him. You must have heard Shep referred to that way time and again in your travels.

A Truly Jolly Official Trio!

Grimm, relieved of first hand worrying without the ball club; Hartnett, loving to worry because it will be a new experience [for we're talking about baseball management, not Gabby's sore arm] and Shepard, will make as jolly an official trio as ever desecrated a glass topped mahogany desk. When they held open house in the winter time, or on off days, those who now hiss the Cub family as cold and austere would be fighting for invitations just to call and sit and listen to the rapid fire of banter and observe the rampant camaraderie. We don't mean they'd come to mooch drinks or Grimm fried hamburgers. Just to sit and relax would make everybody happy, even if he had no special love for banjo music such as Grimm plays; magic tricks like Hartnett performs or tableaux such as Shepard devises.

Of course, our trio can't be always relaxed. They could spend an hour a day [other than time spent at the ball park during playing days] which is really enough, provided Mr. Wrigley made it clear that they didn't have to tiptoe or bustle from one office to another just to make off like they were earning their dough.

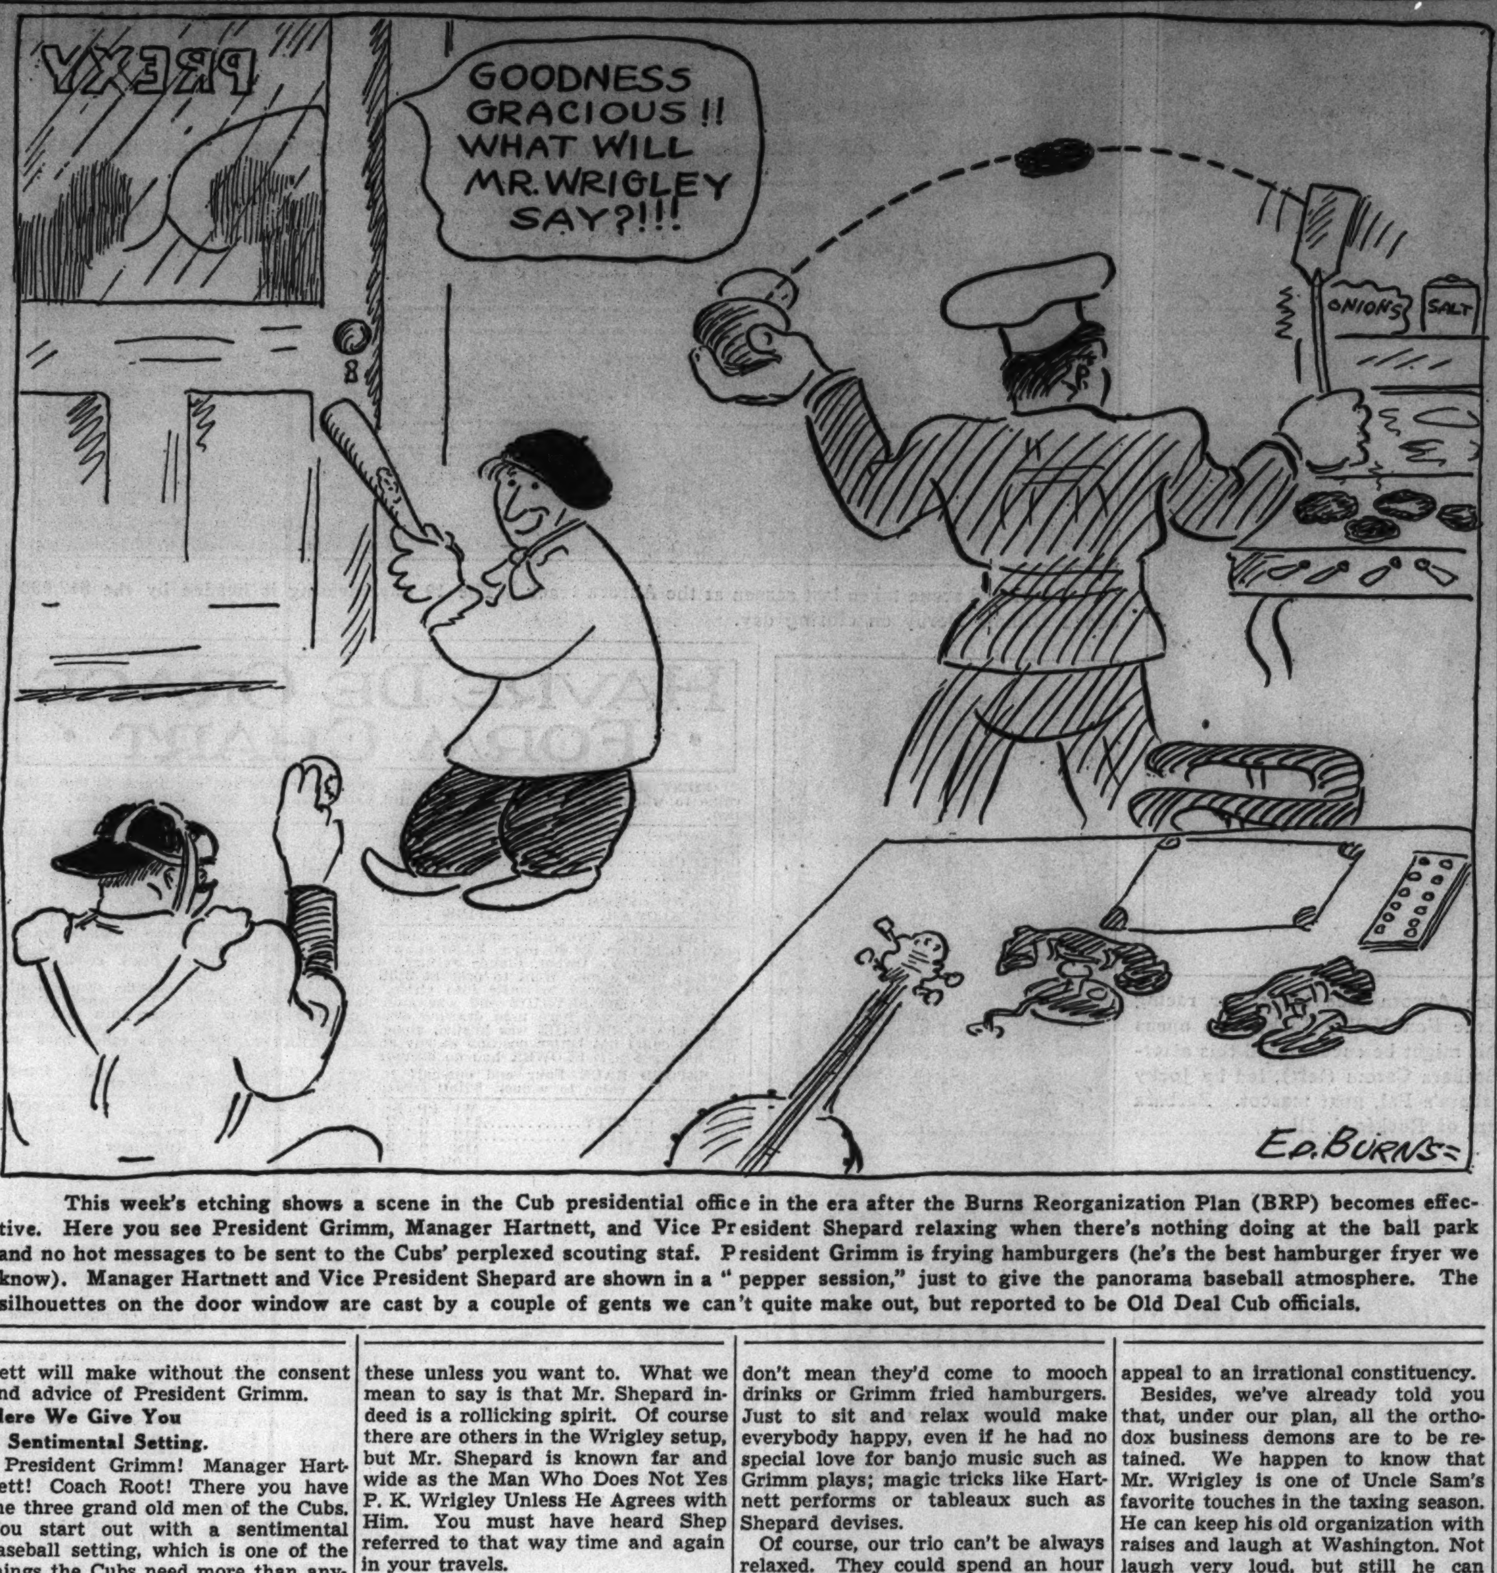
Mr. Wrigley would make it clear to officials of his other big interests that they couldn't act like Charley and Gabby and Shep. He can soon find that baseball is a screwy business and while many normal aspects of business are applicable there is always danger of becoming musclebound unless baseball is permitted to follow some of its time-honored crazy appeal to an irrational constituency.

Besides, we've already told you that, under our plan, all the orthodox business demons are to be retained. We happen to know that Mr. Wrigley is one of Uncle Sam's favorite touches in the taxing season. He can keep his old organization with raises and laugh at Washington. Not laugh very loud, but still he can laugh some.

We hope you won't think we're going back to our high school "class prophecy" days just to write a piece to go with our etching.

Don't be surprised if, before so very long, Grimm is president and names Hartnett as his manager and Gabby names Root coach. The only thing we're worrying about is that Shepard will be too busy with his paint box to accept the vice presidency.

And if Mr. Wrigley doesn't want to give those raises to our friends, John O. Seys, Boots Weber, Margaret Donahue, et al, then we will wish we had skipped the whole thing.



PREXY
GOODNESS GRACIOUS!! WHAT WILL MR. WRIGLEY SAY?!!!

ED. BURNS

This week's etching shows a scene in the Cub presidential office in the era after the Burns Reorganization Plan (BRP) becomes effective. Here you see President Grimm, Manager Hartnett, and Vice President Shepard relaxing when there's nothing doing at the ball park and no hot messages to be sent to the Cubs' perplexed scouting staf. President Grimm is frying hamburgers (he's the best hamburger fryer we know). Manager Hartnett and Vice President Shepard are shown in a "pepper session," just to give the panorama baseball atmosphere. The silhouettes on the door window are cast by a couple of gents we can't quite make out, but reported to be Old Deal Cub officials.

Mills Will Play Last Practice Contest Today

Satisfied with the work of veterans and confident of the ability of newcomers, Manager William G. Harley after directing spring training for three weeks believes the Chicago Mills will present one of the most formidable semi-pro clubs in the central states this season. The team went through a short workout yesterday afternoon and today will end preparations for its opening game next week by playing the Famous Chicagos at Mills stadium, Lake street and Kilpatrick avenue.

Elmer Olson.

Manager Harley sought to close the training period against the University of Chicago, Northwestern and Wheaton, but the collegiate nines could not find room on their heavy schedules for the west side semi-pros. The club, however, after the game with the Famous Chicagos and short drills during the week is expected to be ready for the opening double-header against the strong American Giants next Sunday.

The Famous Chicagos, a traveling semi-pro club, which is directed by Harley, will be captained by Sam Albino, while Elmer Olson, veteran semi-pro catcher, will lead the Mills. Olson next Sunday will start his second successive year as captain of the Mills. He played in only a few games last season. Olson came to the Mills from the Logan Squares and this spring has aided Manager Harley in selecting youngsters for regular positions.

Harley announced yesterday that plans have been completed for the opening day ceremonies. An American Legion band has been engaged.

COALS PRACTICE TODAY.

The Spencer Coals baseball team will start a week of intensive practice for their opening double-header of the season, a week from today, against Grover Cleveland Alexander and the Connors Empires of Springfield, with an intracamp game this afternoon at Spencer Coals' field, 4200 North Central avenue.

The Spencer squad will be split into two teams, the Reds and Blues, and a regulation nine inning contest will be played. The game will start at 3 o'clock and is open to the public free of charge.

Yanks Beat Red Sox, 6-5, in 10th for First Victory

Boston, Mass., April 24.—(AP)—The New York Yankees finally warmed up today, but it took them ten innings before Tony Lazzeri and George Selkirk bombarded the Red Sox into a 6 to 5 defeat.

Scoring the first victory in two starts in defense of their American league and world championships, the Yanks made nine hits of Lefty Grove and two other Boston hurlers. The Red Sox got 11 from Monte Pearson and Johnny Murphy.

One of the hits was the first Yankee homer for the season, a smash by Lazzeri, and another was Selkirk's triple in the tenth.

The Sox came back strong in their half of the extra inning, but with the bases loaded and only one out, could score only one run. Score:

A'S WIN IN NINTH.

Washington, D. C., April 24.—(AP)—A pinch single by Jack Rothrock off Washington's Buck Newsom gave Philadelphia a 6 to 4 victory over the Senators today.

Rothrock, batting for Pitcher Almon Williams in the last inning—with runners on second and third and Washington leading, 4 to 3—slammed a hit to left. Bill Werber accounted for the sixth and final Athletic run when he singled Rothrock home.

Newsom, in his first appearance against Philadelphia this year, went along smoothly until wildness overtook him in the ninth. Score:

M'GRATH LOST TO AUSTRALIANS FOR CUP SERIES

MEXICO CITY, April 24.—(AP)—Vivian McGrath, Australia's ranking tennis player, appeared definitly out of the Davis cup series with Mexico following the examination of his injured hand by a physician today. The matches are scheduled for April 30 and May 1-2.

The physician ordered the Australian ace not to play for several days. Clifford Sproul, nonplaying captain of the team, said it would not be known until Monday whether it will be necessary to operate in order to remove the abcess-like growth which thus far has refused to come to a head.

If the Australian champion is unable to play, Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist probably will play in the singles and doubles.

TONY CANZONERI GETS KNOCKOUT OVER JOE ZODDA

New York, April 24.—(AP)—Tony Canzoneri, former world lightweight champion, knocked out Joey Zodda of New York in 1:59 of the seventh round of their ten round bout at Ridgewood Grove tonight. It was Canzoneri's final warmup bout before meeting Lou Ambers May 7 in an effort to regain the 135 pound title. Canzoneri weighed 138 pounds and Zodda 137¾.

Iowa Loses as Michigan Stages Rally

Iowa City, Ia., April 24.—[Special.]—Michigan rallied for two runs in the eighth inning to defeat Iowa, 5 to 3, today, and to even the two game series.

Iowa got all of its runs in the first inning on Bratten's single, a walk to Kadell, and doubles by Bisenius, right fielder, and Benny Stephens, second baseman.

Michigan combined a walk, a triple, and single by Pitcher Smith to drive in the winning runs in the eighth.

Smith held Iowa to six hits. The Michigan offensive was led by First Baseman Smick, who hit a triple and two singles. Score:

PIRATES DEFEAT REDS, 3-2, IN 9TH ON HANDLEY'S HIT

Ex-Red Makes Payment for $20,000 Bonus.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 24. — (AP) — Rookie Infielder Lee Handley, who got $20,000 for signing with the Pittsburgh Pirates, delivered a ninth inning single with two out to give the home team a 3 to 2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds today. Thirteen thousand fans saw Handley hit in the ninth with the bases loaded and drive in the tying and winning runs. It was a sweet hit for Handley, who last season was shipped by the Reds to Toronto. Commissioner Landis ruled the infielder a free agent.

GIANTS WIN ON HOMERS.

New York, April 24.—(AP)—The National league champion New York Giants found the range into the short right field stands in their own Polo grounds today and topped the Boston Bees, 3 to 0, on Mel Ott's first two homers of the season and one by Dick Bartell.

While Clyde Castleman pitched six hit ball, the Giants generally were ineffective against Johnny Lanning, except for the home runs. Ott hit his in the third and fifth and Bartell drove out his four bagger in the fifth. The victory was the Giants' third straight of the campaign and their second in a row over the Bees, who helped them open the Polo grounds for the year yesterday.

With today's nine straight innings without a run, the Bees have now gone thirty-four consecutive innings without crossing the plate. They failed to score in sixteen innings against Philadelphia and eighteen against New York. They had plenty of chances today, but three double plays by the Giants stopped them. Score:

PHILS BEAT DODGERS.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 24.—(AP)—Given fine support by the opposition fielding, the Phillies defeated Van Mungo and the Brooklyn Dodgers, 7 to 3, today behind the eight hit pitching of Lefty La Master, who hurled his first complete game in the National league. Five Brooklyn errors, three by Cookie Lavagetto, just about handed the ball game to the Phillies.

Mungo pitched six innings and gave up seven hits and six runs. Three of the Dodger misplays were made while he was on the mound.

Morrie Arnovich, Phils' rookie flychaser, was the standout batter, getting three doubles and a single in four times up. Johnny Moore contributed a triple and a single. Score:

Braddock Starts Sparring in Preparation for Louis

James J. Braddock opened boxing drills at Trafton's gymnasium yesterday in preparation for his title bout with Joe Louis in Comiskey park June 22. The champion sparred three rounds, one with Charley Massare and two with Jack McCarthy. The workout was witnessed by a gathering which included Chairman Joe Triner of the Illinois boxing commission. Braddock will rest today, but will return to action tomorrow.

FANS PULL FOR SANDE TO SADDLE DERBY WINNER

Star Ex-Jocky Now Trains Sceneshifter.

BY FRENCH LANE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Earl Sande.

Louisville, Ky., April 24.—It is 8 o'clock p. m. here in the city which two weeks from this hour will be in an uproar of revelry.

Ex-Jocky Earl Sande, America's most colorful race track character, is about to go to bed. He never has [and isn't going to now] taken his eye off the main business at hand, which is that he is a trainer of a Derby candidate, and that, as such, he must be up and at 'em at the early hour of 5 tomorrow morning.

Sande's public, if given a word or two of encouragement, would be only too glad to bet its bottom dollar on him. He is training the colt Sceneshifter for the race. The odds against Sceneshifter in the future book betting suddenly have dropped from 80 to 1 to 15 to 1.

He's Kentucky Derby Hero.

With the possible exception of Col. Edward R. Bradley, Sande has been the Kentucky Derby's greatest hero.

As the only living jocky who ever has ridden three winners of the Derby he appears to sense this. He therefore is careful and measured in the statements he makes concerning his horse.

The little man sits unconcerned there on the edge of his bed at the Brown hotel in his blue pajamas and lounging robe and makes several enlightening observations.

"Most people tell me that Sceneshifter is too small to carry 126 pounds and run a mile and a quarter," he says.

His Sire a Small Horse.

"I'm not a bit worried over that. His sire, Sickle, was a small horse, yet was America's leading sire last year. Brevity, a son of Sickle and another small horse, was beaten an inch in last year's Derby, and would have won if a break in the luck had gone in his favor.

"I'm not claiming that Sceneshifter is as good a horse as Brevity, and won't even hazard a guess as to that until after the Derby is run. But I do know that since I've had him [Col. Maxwell Howard of Dayton bought the colt from Joseph E. Widener in Florida last March and turned him over to Sande to train] he's done everything I've asked him to do.

"And I further know that on the last day of the Hialeah Park meeting he ran a race that was just the kind that could win this Derby.

Shows Willingness to Run.

"Maybe he reached his peak in that effort. I don't think so, for he has shown a willingness since we brought him to Churchill Downs to run even faster and to carry his speed as far as horses run these days.

"He's 15 to 1 in the betting. Perhaps he should be 40 or 50 to 1, but if he's the kind of a horse I suspect—get me now, suspect—those odds won't stop him."

Sande was ready for bed. Fifteen hours earlier he had arrived at the stable on the Churchill Downs backstretch where Sceneshifter and the other eight horses he trains are quartered.

Alarm Clocks Hum.

Just as he poked his nose through the wide door alarm clocks began to hum in the back room. Sleepy eyed stable boys and horse attendants tumbled out of their cots and dressed on the run as they went out to greet their sandy haired little boss.

Their attitude was a mixture of respect and admiration for the fellow who was there to direct them in their morning chores.

Tall Phil Riley, philosopher and wise man among American trainers, sauntered around the corner from the other side of the barn and greeted the former jocky.

Riley seems to be taking a fatherly interest in the once famous jocky.

Judgment Proves Valuable.

Riley is a conservative horseman. Many times his judgment has proved to be valuable to persons who speculate on the steeds. He has watched all the Derby candidates quartered in Kentucky go through their paces this spring.

His only public observation, and quite a startling one at that, was: "I like that colt Sande is training." Riley seldom comments on anything he sees or hears at a race track.

Whether youthful Sande and veteran Riley are putting their heads together in the training of Sceneshifter is not known, but a morning never passes when they are not observed in earnest conversation.

Sande became a part of the Derby show back in 1919. He was the contract rider for Commander J. K. L. Ross of Canada, and, as top man in the stable, had his choice of riding either Sir Barton or Billy Kelly, both of which belonged to Ross. Sande picked Billy Kelly, but Sir Barton won the race.

Asks Hildreth to Change Mind.

Into the limelight again stepped Sande in 1923. He was top rider then for Harry F. Sinclair's big Rancocas stable. Sinclair's colt Zev had been the winter book favorite. He ran such a miserable race in the Preakness that Trainer Sam Hildreth decided not to send him to the Derby.

Sande begged Hildreth to change his mind. Hildreth finally consented, with the result that Zev got to the Derby scene, hopped out in front at the start, and Sande kept him there until the finish.

Two years later Sande, then fast growing heavy, had to beg a dozen owners for a mount in the Derby. Finally he got the job of piloting Flying Ebony. This colt was a noted mud runner, but was no bargain if the going was good.

The track was lightning fast until 20 minutes before post time for the Derby. An unexpected downpour of rain drenched the Derby throng, and it softened up the Churchill Downs racing strip to the point where it was made to order for Flying Ebony.

Sande Home in Front Again.

Home in front again came Sande and Flying Ebony.

Two years later Sande was beaten a nose on Osmond by the late Harry Payne Whitney's Whiskery. In 1930 he was aboard Gallant Fox when that great champion rolled on to victory.

That marked the end of Sande's riding career. He tried it as an owner and didn't accomplish much. The fortune he had made dwindled.

Then to the trainers' ranks he went, and if he should saddle a Derby winner so early in his training career it can only help make Sande one of America's immortals.

Who wouldn't pull for Sande?

Beloit College Track Team Beats Armour, 62⅔-54⅓

Beloit, Wis., April 24.—[Special.]—Beloit college's track team defeated Armour Tech, 62 2-3 to 54 1-3, today. Because of inclement weather Ripon withdraw from the meet which was originally scheduled as a triangular event. Armour won all the field events except the broad jump, but Beloit was far superior in the track events.

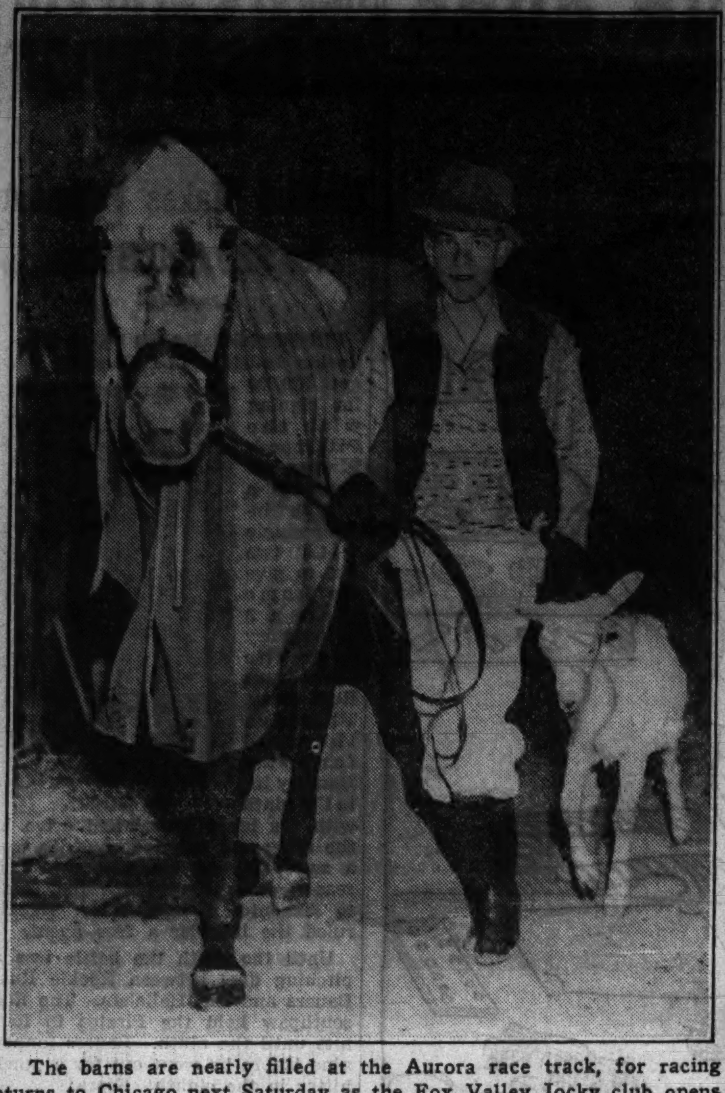
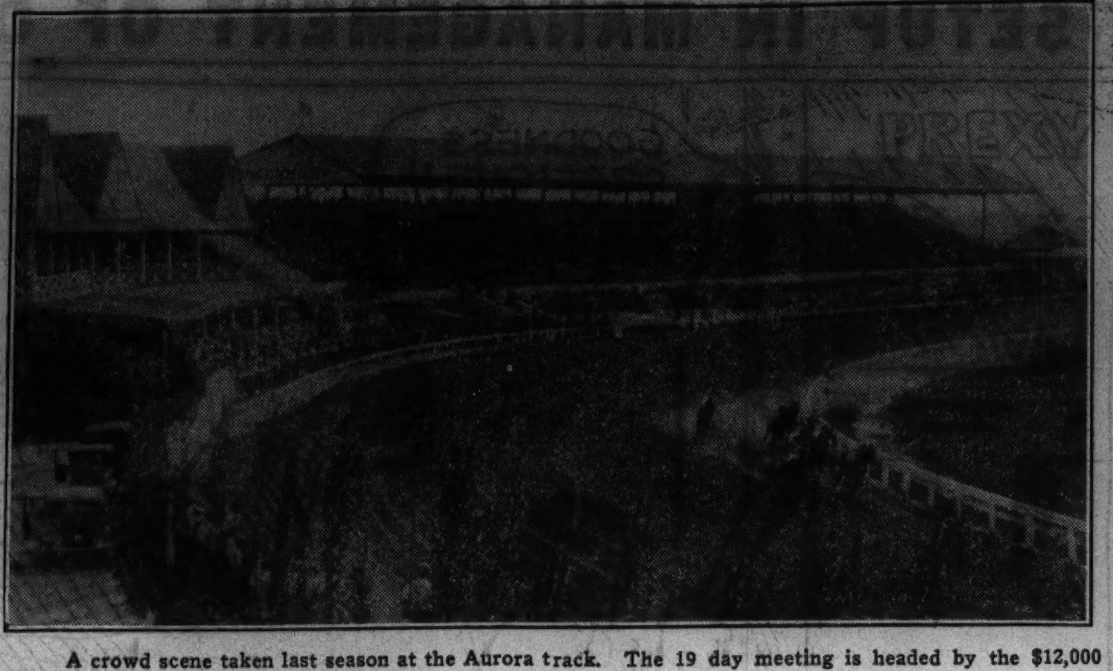
RACING COMES BACK TO AURORA ON SATURDAY



The barns are nearly filled at the Aurora race track, for racing returns to Chicago next Saturday as the Fox Valley Jocky club opens its 19 day meeting. Such a scene as this might be encountered this afternoon, open house day at the track. Barbara Carom (left), led by Jocky Roy Colosia, goes for stroll with Barbara's Pal, goat mascot. Barbara Carom races for the Chappell brothers of Rockford, Ill.



A crowd scene taken last season at the Aurora track. The 19 day meeting is headed by the $12,000 added Illinois Derby on closing day.

Hailliard, 9 year old turf veteran, will see action during the Aurora season. Hailliard still wins for the stable of R. W. Hoffman, who is pictured with the thoroughbred.

John Morrissey, son of the noted starter, Harry Morrissey, will be on the starter's platform during the Aurora meeting.

Racing Opens Saturday at Aurora Track

Six months of turf competition among the thoroughbreds opens for Chicago on Saturday, when the Fox Valley Jocky club opens the gates of the Aurora race track for a 19 day meeting.

On opening day the Fox Valley Inaugural handicap headlines the eight race bill, and on May 22, closing day, the $12,000 added Illinois Derby will prove the magnet. Illinois Derby day in 1937 is once more on Saturday and General Manager Robert S. Eddy Jr. and his associates plan to handle a record crowd.

Open House at Aurora Today.

As has been the custom, today, the Sunday before the opening, is open house at the Aurora plant, with the public invited to inspect the grounds and give its approval to the improvements which annually are made at the track. Today will be a day of activity, for more carloads of horses are due from Texas and California and a final inspection of the plant will be made.

With $125,000 to be distributed, more than has been disbursed at any previous Aurora meeting, the Fox Valley track leads off a Chicago season that is expected to set new highs for recent years both in the amount of money put up for horsemen and in the caliber of racing presented. Most tracks already have announced more pretentious meetings for the 1937 season. Aurora will start the Chicago campaign in fitting style.

Moving Picture Camera Installed.

Purses have been raised at the track, a Waite moving picture camera has been installed to call the close finishes, an announcing system of latest type has been installed with a new announcer, Don Fair, to handle the calling of the races.

MICHIGAN TEAMS GAIN PLACES IN WOMEN'S BOWLING

Rochester, N. Y., April 24.—(AP)—Twelve hours of bowling will be staged in the Women's International congress here tomorrow, with two new marks at which to shoot as the result of the performance of two Michigan teams on the late squad tonight.

Paced by Peggy Lindberg, Wolverine state match game champion, the Echardt & Becker Brewing Company five of Detroit hit a 2,577 for second place, five pins behind the Camel Sodas of St. Louis.

The Fanatorium Majors of Grand Rapids, Mich., showed consistent form to compile games of 846, 851, and 838 for 2,535 and fifth place in the team standings.

Owner, Claude Feltner. Trainer, C. M. Feltner. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:36. At post 2½ minutes.

EMVEE, allowed to settle into stride, gained steadily on the outside, disposed of GOLD CLIP and SKYRIDE and was going away at end. GOLD CLIP, rushed to the front at once, was hard used drawing clear of SKYRIDE at the far turn and was tiring at end. SKYRIDE was hustled along throughout and showed a good effort. TAKUS could not better position at any stage. HARRY'S DREAM was taken back at the break. SPUR FLOWER had no excuses.

SECOND RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Claiming. Two year olds. Purse $1,000. Net value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50.

STAGE BEAUTY, rushed up on the outside of DIARISSA to take command directly after the break, shook off repeated challenges of BUNNY BABY and was kept to pressure to the end. BUNNY BABY went up to press the pacemaker and fought it out willingly. BUSSE TRUMPET saved ground throughout. DIARISSA, first away, dropped back and raced greenly. The others were always outrun.

BLACK HIGHBROW, tiptoed into contention at once, went wide into the stretch while being challenged by DEFLATE and took a slight lead to close gamely. DEFLATE had good speed from the beginning and fought it out willingly. JOYRIDE, close up for the opening furlong, was taken back, saved much ground entering the stretch, but tired under the weight in the final sixteenth. SAGE GIRL could not threaten. CLOCKS closed full of run.

Winner, ch. h., 5, by Bright Knight-Marsh Violet. Owner, R. H. Heighe. Trainer, J. A. Boniface. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:21. At post ½ minute.

PURPLE KNIGHT, under restraint while within striking distance of the pacemaker, came through on the inside of CHANCE RAY at the far turn, disposed of LEMONT to take command and was kept to a drive to the finish. CHANCE RAY stumbled slightly at the break, was rushed to press the pace of LEMONT and tired gradually in the final eighth. ARMY AND NAVY, badly outrun to the stretch, came with a belated rush. KIEVEX closed gamely. LEMONT was used up under hustling tactics while setting the pace. JIMMIE CABANISS stopped after being forwardly placed to midstretch.

WAR ADMIRAL, off alertly, was under a slight grip while running with COURT SCANDAL to the backstretch, moved away after being challenged by COURT SCANDAL and FAIRY HILL at the far turn, opened a good lead approaching the stretch, drew far out and was being taken in hand during the final 50 yards. COURT SCANDAL, slightly bothered while in close quarters at the first turn, saved ground thereafter but could not threaten in the late stages. OVER THE TOP, rated along to the stretch, closed willingly under pressure. TEDIOUS was carried wide at the first turn, dropped back and rallied only mildly. FAIRY HILL needs racing, faltered after being in the thick of contention to the stretch turn. SIAM and SUNPHANTOM had no excuses.

SECRET VOTE entered contention on the outside approaching the stretch, circled the leaders and closed with a rush to win going away. PLAY OFF, sent into the lead going to the first turn, was rated along while setting the pace and continued willingly, but was no match for the winner. STROPHE, forwardly placed, came gamely in the final drive. CAPT. JERRY tired suddenly in the stretch after moving up to press the pace. NAVAL CADET showed a dull effort. HAPPY EASTER stopped after a half.

War Admiral Beats 4 Other Derby Hopes

Baltimore, Md., April 24.—(AP)—War Admiral, Glen Riddle farm's Kentucky Derby nominee, stretched himself out over a mile and a sixteenth route for the first time today in the Chesapeake stakes at Havre de Grace and performed so much like a champion that he was six lengths in front of the field at the finish.

Four other Derby eligibles were in the field of seven, but none showed the ability to run with the trim brown son of Man O' War. Closest to him at the finish was Townsend B. Martin's grey colt, Court Scandal.

A length farther back, in third place, was War Admiral's stablemate, Over The Top, another Man O' War offspring, eligible for the Preakness, but not for the Derby. A. G. Vanderbilt's Derby eligible, Tedious, was fourth.

Vanderbilt's Horse Fifth.

William du Pont Jr.'s chestnut gelding, Fairy Hill, second choice in the betting, did no better than fifth. Bomar stable's Siam came along sixth, and Charles S. Bromley's Sunphantom last.

War Admiral's triumph was no surprise to bettors among the crowd of 22,000, for they had backed him into odds-on favoritism. Coupled with his stablemate in the betting, he paid only $3.30 for $2 to win, $2.40 to place, and $2.60 to show. His prize money amounted to $8,250 net.

Never Headed.

Eager to race, War Admiral got away first after a delayed start and never was headed. Jocky Charlie Kurtsinger had him under slight restraint to the backstretch. When challenged by Court Scandal and Fairy Hill, he drew away, hit the home stretch with plenty of reserve, and speedily lengthened his lead.

War Admiral carried 119 pounds, the same as Fairy Hill and Court Scandal. The others had 114 each.

The winner's time of 1:45 was short of the stake record, although the track was fast.

CHICOLORADO WINS

New York, April 24.—[Special.]—Crowding home in a driving finish, the Chicle colt, Chicolorado, captured the $5,650 Stuyvesant handicap before 20,000 persons at Jamaica today and further enhanced his chances for the Kentucky Derby and other 3 year old specials ahead.

He is Mrs. Payne Whitney's main hope for victories in that age division, and earned $4,425 when he was first at 5 to 1.

As comforting to Mrs. Julia M. Loft as was the dogged finish of her Kentucky Derby eligible, Mosawtre, which finished first in a subsequent test at the same distance—six furlongs.

Mosawtre Has Best Time.

Chicolorado was timed in 1:13 and Mosawtre in a fifth of a second faster time.

To Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Field the day was one with a bad turn of racing luck. In each of the two races Field started one of his crack colts, each a Derby eligible. Each met crushing defeat.

Charing Cross came out of the Chicolorado race, his flank scraped and torn, where he had been bounced against the fence.

First Start of Year.

It was his first start of the year. Charing Cross was the 9 to 2 favorite and brought up ninth.

Into the Mosawtre race Mr. Field's Sir Damion went, a 3 to 5 choice.

He came back unscathed, but third in a field of seven, and with his prospects considerably dimmed.

TRACK SLOW, BUT NO SIR DOES 2:11 1-5 FOR DERBY ROUTE

Louisville, Ky., April 24.—(AP)—Mary Hirsch, only woman training a Kentucky Derby eligible, sent her candidate No Sir over the full Derby mile and a quarter today in 2:11 1-5.

No Sir worked out on a slow track and the time was regarded as good. It was the first time any Derby eligible here had gone the full route in training and Miss Hirsch was cheered further by the fact that at the finish No Sir had caught up with Grey Count, which was started about five lengths in front of him at the first quarter post.

No Sir was clocked at the quarter in :25, half in :52 3-5, three-quarters in 1:17 2-5, and the mile in 1:44 1-5.

By the time Earl Sande brought out his candidates, Sceneshifter and Fencing, a driving rain had started, but considering this they covered a mile in an impressive performance. Running together they were clocked at the quarter in :25, half in :50 2-5, three-quarters in 1:16 4-5 and the mile in 1:43 4-5.

TWO RANDOLPH BOWLING TEAMS NECK AND NECK

Budweisers, Mineralites Have Title Chance.

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

Few bowling leagues approach their closing day with such a tight race as has developed in the Randolph league, one of the strongest groups of pin topplers in Chicago. When the season ends Thursday evening on the Randolph alleys, either the Budweisers or the Mineralites will be crowned champions for 1936-'37.

By sweeping a regularly scheduled match with the La Palina Cigars and then repeating against the strong Mary Ann Bread lineup in a postponed series, the Mineralites last Thursday climbed to within one game of the leading Budweisers. These two teams have been alternating in first place the latter part of the season.

While the Mineralites were piling up their six victories, the Budweisers lost one of their three games to the Admiration Cigars.

In next Thursday's games the Mineralites will be paired with the Admirations and the Burlington Routes will oppose the Budweisers. The Mineralites again will present a lineup of Joe Fliger, Harry Steers, Babe Bunning, Joe Burke, and Bud Wright. The Budweisers depend upon Emil Landman, George Theel, Rudy Pehrson, Joe Wilman, and Charley Wass.

Here and There.

For the first time in weeks there was no 700 series in the Bruck Major league. High score went to Jim Handy with 682. Other leaders were Carl Caldwell, 677; George Maurer, 664; Bill Taylor, 664; John Batchelor, 663; Carl Hooge, 657; Frank Nemecek, 654, and Jim Garvey, 653. . . . Alphonse Pociask of the Alderman Rostenkowski team is awaiting an A. B. C. gold medal for his 300 game, shot in the Fauntleroy Social league on the Lewis alleys. His other games were 210 and 158, which gave him a 668 total.

The two men's and one woman's Budweiser teams honored their sponsor, A. B. Hulls, last night at a get-together at the Gold Coast Recreation. . . . Joe Sinke continued his hot pace with 259, 219, and 219, and boosted his average to 207 in the Gold Coast Major league. Other good scores: Harold Ploch, 658; Leo Webster, 657; Charlie Wass, 636; Rudy Pehrson, 626; John Macaluso, 622; Leo Logothetti, 622, and Ben Weir, 622. . . . The Neumann Tailors still are holding first place in the Chicago North Side Traveling league. High for the last session were: Frank Meyers, 624; George Hoffman, 621; Al Mute, 612, and Pat Panzek, 603. . . . A two day doubles handicap tournament will wind up at the Garden Recreation tonight.

North End League.

Eddie Kraft, with a 711 series, helped the Milfords total 3,190 in the North End Traveling league, but their only triumph was the result of a 1,123 opening game. The Richter's Sausage quintet shot 3,129 and won the other two games. Norman Hallgren's 670 topped the winners. The leading Birk Brothers rolled 3,113 for three victories and the second place Michelobs toppled 3,110, but lost one game and now trail by three games. Stack and Ryan jolted the Fox De Luxe team three times to extend the latter's losing streak to fourteen. Roy Achenback opened with 279 for the Michelobs, but faltered in his other two games to total 632. Tomorrow night's schedule:

Schambergers at the Milford, 7 o'clock; Fox De Luxe vs. Birks at the Willow, 7; Richters vs. Waggoners at the Bryn Mawr, 7; Budweisers at Samuelson's, 7; Michelobs at Stack and Ryan, 9.

Classic League.

The Classic league will bowl at the West End alleys, 3425 West 26th street, tonight at 8 o'clock. The following matches are scheduled:

Kraft O-ke Doke vs. Monarch Beer.
Oak Leaf Motors vs. Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer.
Winkler Motor Service vs. Charles H. Weber.
Prager Beer vs. Baby Ruth Candy.

STANDINGS.

	W.	L.	Avg.		W.	L.	Avg.
Pragers	61	35	997	Kraft	43	53	974
Pabst	58	38	1001	Winkler	42	54	972
BabyRuth	56	40	980	Oak Leaf	36	60	950

INDIVIDUAL AVERAGES.

Adolph Carlson, 208; Bill Lenzen, Sykes Thoma, Pete Petersen, 202; Paul Krumske, Ed Zajac, 201; Herb Freitag, 200; Herb Lange, George Notz, Wally Freitag, 198; Dominic Devito, Ed Krems, and Lloyd Strouse, 197.

BOSTON U. WINS.

Riverside, Mass., April 24.—[Special.]—The Boston university nine collected one hit with a walk and two errors in the sixth inning for a pair of runs that gave them a 3 to 2 victory over Wesleyan today.

Hold Cermak Cup Soccer Finals Today

BY OFFSIDE.

The annual series for the Cermak Memorial cup, with two games listed at Sparta stadium, heads today's soccer matches. Since these matches began, fifteen years ago, players have been from teams of different nationalities. This year the Illinois State Soccer association, which shares in the proceeds, has decided to have the two best leagues in the district, the Chicago and the International, select their strongest teams to compete.

The Chicago league team, composed mostly of Sparta, Maccabee, and Olympia players, has the best chance to win, especially with such players as Wolf, Vlcek, and Pearson of Sparta, Henney and Griffith of the Maccabees, and Keberle and Tomecek of the Olympias in the lineup.

The International league, mostly amateur players, also will put forth a strong team. Riebe, considered one of the finest goalkeepers, has returned to action after a year's layoff because of an injury. The match starts at 3 o'clock p. m., and at 1 o'clock p. m. the reserves from both leagues will play the opener.

The Magyar Juniors and the Viking Juniors will meet in the western district national cup final at Winnemac park today at 1 o'clock. Probable Cermak cup lineups:

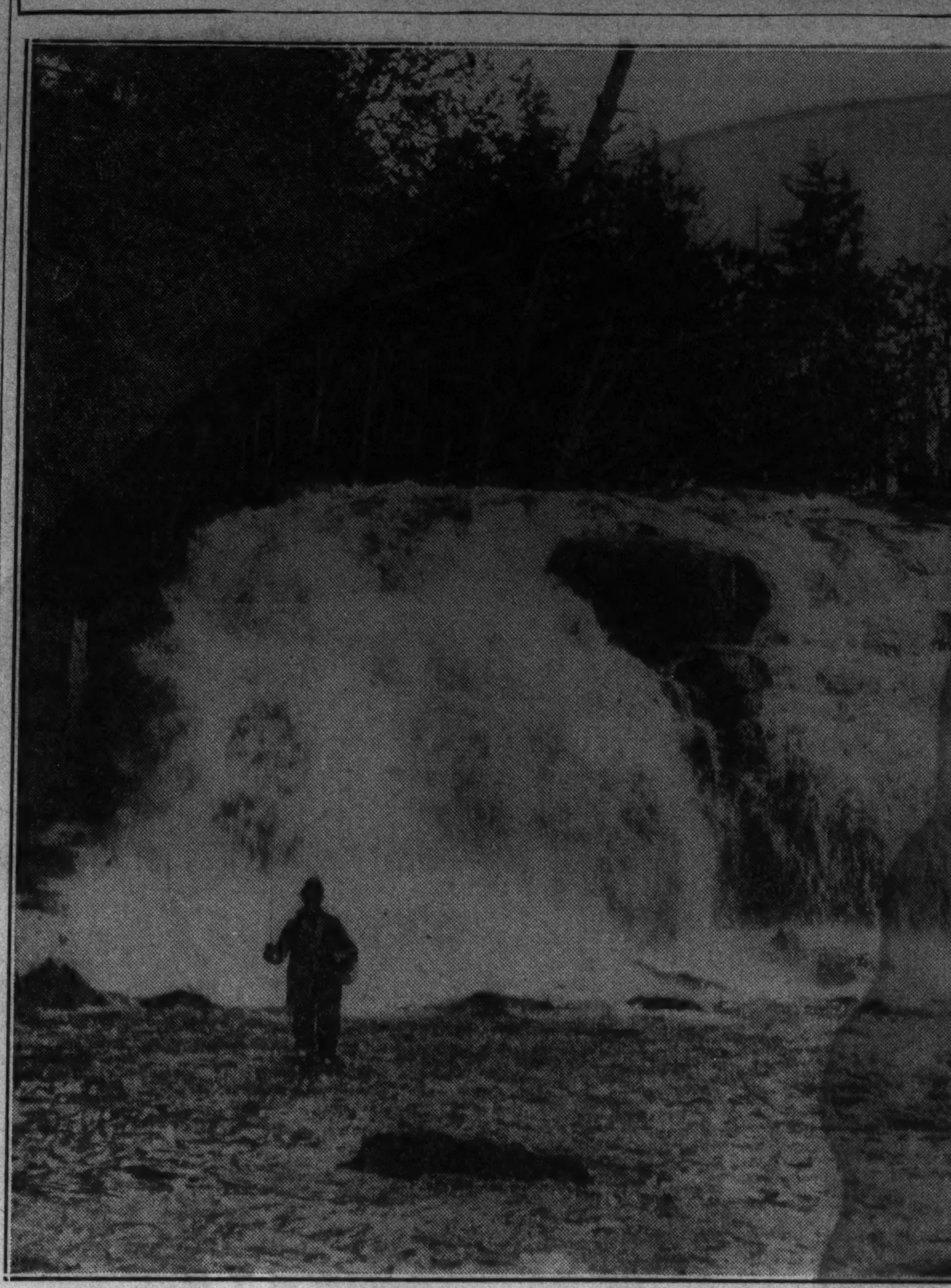
CHARLTON PLAYS JUNE 6.

Chicago soccer fans will be offered an international game following the announcement by the Illinois State Soccer Football association yesterday that the Charlton club of London, England, will appear at Stagg field on Sunday, June 6, as a sport feature of Chicago's Charter Jubilee.

IT'S FISHIN' TIME IN MICHIGAN



This fisherman has a perfect setting as he casts, with a musical waterfall behind him and good trout water in front of him. Michigan opened its trout season yesterday and anglers in that state are visiting the streams to get their first mess of fish.

Indiana Sets World 4 Mile Relay Record

Australian pursuit race as Lash built up a 300 yard advantage that left him only a fraction of a lap behind the field. He sprinted in the homestretch to turn in a 4:17.2 mile that meant a record.

The half mile relay disqualification of North Texas Teachers, winner the day before of the 440 yard title, deprived the meet of another record. The Texans were guilty twice of overstepping the relay zone in exchanging the baton. Their time of 1:26.3 was better than the record of 1:26.6 set by University of Texas a year ago.

The Indiana foursome of Ken Gunning, Ned Elliott, Malcolm Hicks, and Bob Collier, which profited by the disqualification, was beaten by eight yards and was timed in 1:27.2.

Lash Wins Easily.

The individual events were notable principally for Lash's special mile, his third eight furlongs effort of the carnival. It was a waltz all the way with Lash, Beccali, Ernie Federoff of the Millrose A. A., and Venzke loafing until the last 220. Then Lash shot away in a sprint struggle with Beccali and out raced him by seven yards as Federoff astounded every one by beating out Venzke for third place.

Eulace Peacock scored a double by winning the broad jump with a leap of 24 feet 1 inch and beating Ben Johnson of Columbia, and Marty Glickman of Syracuse in the 100 yard dash. His time was 0:09.8.

Bill Harding of Yale, took the pole vault at 13 feet 5 inches. Al Threadgill of Temple, defeated Dave Albritton of Ohio State, co-holder of the world high jump record, at 6 feet 5.

FOUR MILE RELAY — Won by Indiana [Trutt, Smith, Deckard, Lash]; Cornell, second; Penn State, third. Time, 17:16 1-10 [a new world's record; old record 17:17.2, established by Hornbostel, Venzke, San Romani, and Cunningham in 1936].

HALF MILE RELAY—Won by Indiana [Gunning, Elliott, Hicks, Collier]; Occidental, second; Georgia, third. Time, 1:27 2-10. [North Texas finished first, but due to first and third runners passing baton outside limit team was disqualified.

HAMMER THROW—Won by W. B. Lynch, Princeton, 151 ft., 4¼ in.; David Gernardt, Yale, second, 149 ft., 8¾ in.; E. G. Grace, Princeton, third, 147 ft., 1 in.; Michael Pappas, Columbia, 114 ft., 10¼ in.

JAVELIN THROW—Won by K. O. Sanborn, Army, 213 ft. 11 in.; William Guckeyson, Maryland, second, 203 ft. 8¼ in.; John Karrakash, Duke, and I. F. Fike, Navy, tied for third, 197 ft. 4¼ in.; E. Hooper, Cornell, fifth, 190 ft. 3 in.

TEACHERS COLLEGE ONE MILE RELAY—Won by Western Michigan; West Chester, second; Bloomsburg, third. Time, 3:23. [New relay record.]

CLASS B—ONE MILE COLLEGE RELAY—Won by North Texas Teachers [Stovall, E. Brown, Chrisman, D. Brown], Pittsburgh, second; Fordham, third. Time, 3.19 6-10. [New Carnival record].

TWO MILE COLLEGE RELAY—Won by Manhattan, New York university, second; Yale, third. Time, 7:53 8-10.

480 YARD SHUTTLE HURDLE RELAY—Won by Cornell; North Carolina, second; Penn Sate, third. Time—1:02.7.

POLE VAULT—Won by William Harding, Yale, 13 ft. 5 in.; Richard V. Ganslen, Columbia, 13 ft., second; R. P. Klocko, Army, 13 ft., third; Robert Clark, Penn State, 13 ft., fourth.

HIGH JUMP—Won by A. Threadgill, Temple, 6 ft. 5 in.; D. Albritton, Ohio State, 6 ft. 5 in., second; Harman, Georgia, 6 ft. 3 in., third. [First and second places were awarded on least number of tries.]

100 YARD DASH—Won by Peacock, Temple university; Johnson, Columbia, second; Glickman, Syracuse unversity, third. Time—09.8 seconds.

ONE MILE COLLEGE RELAY—Won by Manhattan; Indiana, second; Cornell, third. Time—3:20.5.

1 MILE RUN—Won by Donald Lash, Indiana; Luigi Beccali, Milan, Italy, second; Ernest Federoff, Millrose Athletic association, third; Eugene Venzke, New York Athletic club, fourth. Time, 4:24.3.

BROAD JUMP—Won by Eulace Peacock, Temple, distance 24 feet 1 inch. William W. Wilson, Princeton, 22 feet 10¾ inches, second; Palmer M. Way, Princeton, 22 feet 10¼ inches, third.

MILE RELAYS:

FIRST DIVISION — Won by Washington [Chestertown, Md.]; Gallaudet, second; Johns Hopkins, third. Time, 3:35 1-10.

SECOND DIVISION—Won by Wilberforce [O.]: Brooklyn college, second; Alfred, third Time—3:28 7-10.

THIRD DIVISION—Won by Virginia State [Petersburg, Va.]; Rensselaer Poly, second; Howard, third. Time, 3:29.

FOURTH DIVISION—Won by Wayne [Detroit, Mich.]; North Carolina, second; Tuskegee, third. Time, 3:23 4-10.

TROUT SEASON HAS EARLY START IN MICHIGAN

Anglers Open Casting for Fish Yesterday.

BY BOB BECKER.

Michigan trout fishermen are enjoying a quiet laugh at the expense of anglers in other states this week-end. Michigan opened its 1937 trout season yesterday, and while fishermen in that state are visiting the streams to get their first mess of trout the boys in other states near by have to twiddle their thumbs and wait for later opening dates.

Michigan makes it legal to fish for trout starting the last Saturday in April, which was yesterday. Why the state decided on such an early opening date doubtless is something of a puzzle to many. But there it is and anglers are enjoying a big two days of trout hunting this week-end. The daily limit on trout in Michigan is 15 and each trout must be 7 inches long to be retained.

Wisconsin Is Next.

Following this Michigan burst of fishing activity the northern part of Wisconsin will be the next to hear the tramp of booted trout fishermen and see the gangs hustle to the streams. On May 1 Ashland, Bayfield, Douglas, and Iron counties will be open to the trouters. These counties are in the extreme northern part of the state . . . those that need plenty of warm dry weather during April to make fishing streams ready for a May 1 opening. But there are some fine streams pouring their waters into cold Lake Superior in the northern extreme of the state. Included in the group is the big Brule. But not all the streams are like the Brule. There are many shorter and smaller creeks and small rivers which are easier to fish, including that group near Herbster, Wis.

Things Then Will Be Quiet.

After this May 1 trout opening in four Wisconsin counties things will be rather quiet along the fishing front except for the uprising of the white bass fishermen who doubtless will march on Oshkosh and the Wolf river to take over that territory for a few weeks. The run of white bass in May brings thousands to the lake Winnebago section.

On May 15 Wisconsin practically will declare a holiday for more trout fishing because all over the state [with the exception of the four northern counties which had a May 1 opening] the season on trout opens up. Everybody goes fishing on that day. And it's a tough day for angleworms and nightcrawlers! Inasmuch as a large majority of the opening day fishermen stick to bait unmindful of all the arguments about bait and fly fishing, many thousands of worms and nightcrawlers will go into trout streams starting May 15.

They Want Fish!

We notice that many trout fishermen perennially are greatly concerned about the practice of worm fishing for trout. Noble sentiments are forthcoming at this season of the year regarding sportsmanship and the nonethical angles of bait fishing. But coming down to the facts 'n the case this is noticeable: most of the fishermen who go out on opening day apparently want fish as well as exercise, so they go down deep with bait to get 'em.

County Fair Grounds Get Auto Racing

Carl Stockholm, promoter of big car automobile races at the Roby speedway, yesterday announced that he will change the scene of his racing enterprises when he presents his first program of the season on May 16. He has leased the Cook County Fair Grounds, River road and North avenue, where a series of five race meetings will be conducted.

Enthusiastic over his new racing plant, which will provide covered seats for 8,000 and accommodate more than 10,000 spectators, Stockholm said the American Automobile association had assured him that he will have available many of the stars who will compete in the annual 500 mile race at Indianapolis on Memorial day.

The Fair Grounds track is a half mile oval with wide banked turns that will permit the drivers to speed around the bends. The racing surface will be treated with calcium to overcome dust hazards.

The opening race on May 16 will precede by two weeks the Indianapolis grind. Stockholm's second meeting, on June 6, will be one week later than the Hoosier event and the promoter expects to present at least the first four finishers. His other dates are July 18, two weeks after the Roosevelt speedway race on Long Island, Aug. 22 and Sept. 19.

SPRINGFIELD K. C. DEFEATED TWICE IN VOLLEY BALL

The Knights of Columbus team of Springfield, Ill., was eliminated from the central states open volley ball tournament yesterday at the Duncan Y. M. C. A. when it lost in the double elimination to the Greensburg, Ind., Y. M. C. A., 16-14, 15-1, and to Fort Wayne, Ind., Y. M. C. A., 15-3, 16-14. Summaries:

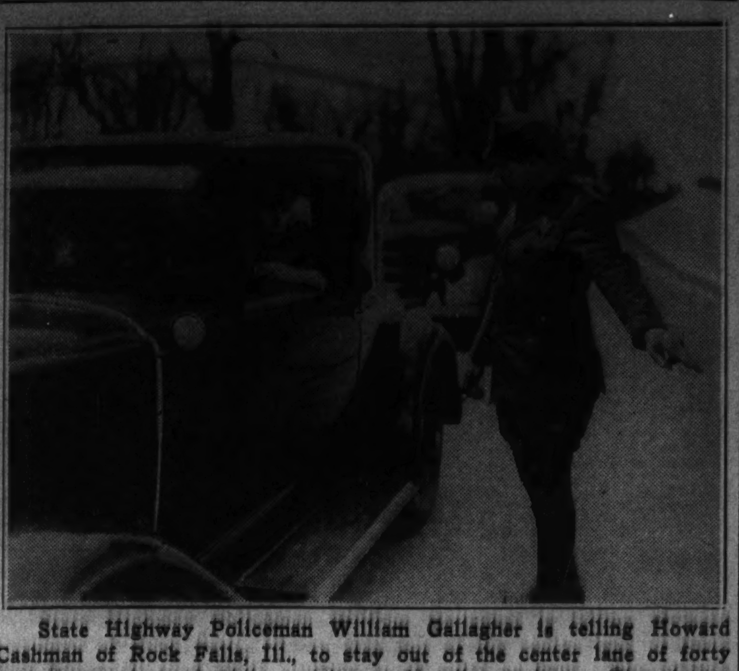
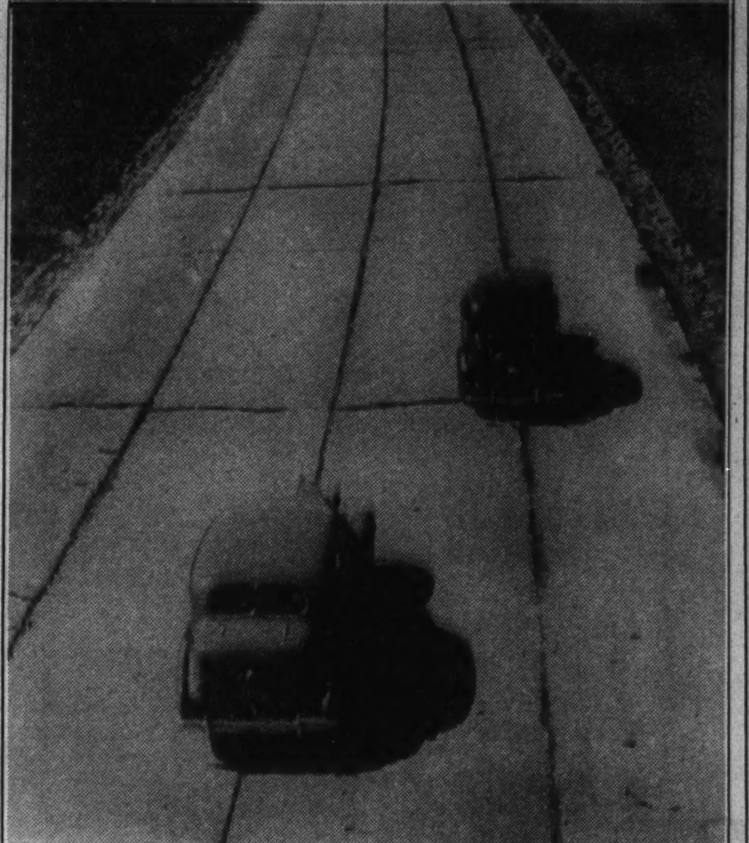
MOTORS—TRAFIC—HIGHWAYS

"YOU SEE THAT LANE, BUDDY?—"



State Highway Policeman William Gallagher is telling Howard Cashman of Rock Falls, Ill., to stay out of the center lane of forty foot Roosevelt road while cruising at 35 miles an hour. The picture was taken west of Wheaton, Ill., last Sunday while the troopers were trying to educate metropolitan area trafic to drive in the extreme right lane of the wide roads except while passing.



The car in the lead, loitering at thirty miles an hour, is blocking both of the northbound lanes on the busy Northwest highway at the Dundee road grade separation. The driver in the rear, his patience exhausted, has to swing to the left of the center line to pass, and he's about to do so. The leader in this picture is a road hog. The overtaking driver is a gambler, risking the chance of a head-on collision.

• VOICE OF TRAFIC

PARKING HOGS.

Chicago, April 7.—I have been waiting for years to see a few words in THE TRIBUNE about the morons who plow into a line of parked cars and after pushing a few automobiles forward sufficiently to squeeze in, then set their emergency brakes or leave their gears engaged. I have watched these imbeciles time and again and have never failed to marvel at the blitheness with which they lock their doors and saunter away with no shame for the rotten trick they have perpetrated.

Will you kindly do something to help all decent car owners? In Milwaukee you get a ticket if you park closer than three feet from another car. And in Milwaukee a ticket means a fine for any one and every one.

EDWARD LINCOLN QUINN.

ANOTHER ARIZONA COMPLAINT.

Chicago, March 30.—Last Jan. 20 I sold my auto in Tucson, Ariz., and to complete the transaction went with the purchaser to the state highway department office there. A state highway police officer removed my 1937 Illinois plates from my car, took my 1937 registration card and my Illinois certificate of title.

I asked him to return my plates and registration card, explaining to him that the plates are transferable in Illinois and that I would need these when I bought a new car on my return to Chicago. He said that could not be done as the Arizona law required him to destroy the plates and that the registration card would become part of his files.

It seems to me that my property rights were disregarded. FRED BENDER.

THE SUNSHINE STATES.

Chicago, March 30.—Your article in today's TRIBUNE headed "Advise Autoists to Avoid Arizona and New Mexico"—them, my friend, is harsh words!

Have crossed New Mexico, Arizona, and California a half hundred times in my own car, which bore at various times license from California, Illinois, or Arizona—and once crossed with a new car and no license at all. At no time have I ever had to stop more than once to each state—always found courteous state inspectors—and consider it no bother for an honest man with nothing to hide to stand inspection.

In my opinion an honest man need not fear to cross the borders of any of the states mentioned at any time—he will find friendly people—gorgeous scenery—healthful sunshine, beauty and pleasure. ADRIAN HARBIN.

LIGHTS BLOCK TRAFIC.

Chicago, March 23.—On Ashland avenue from Madison to Cermak, are a series of about twelve stoplights, all nicely timed to let the motorist go about one block before the light ahead turns red. This constitutes about the most asinine laxness on the part of trafic engineers that is possible to imagine.

NEWS AND VIEWS

With 10,000 retail deliveries reported by Nash dealers for March, stories of the breaking of sales records in many important markets of the country are pouring in to the sales department, according to C. H. Bliss, vice president of sales.

Doubling national retail sales for the same month a year ago, March saw new records set in many distributor territories. In the Milwaukee area the wholesale operation was the greatest in the history of the Nash company. The Chicago area likewise reported a great increase in sales, with the early April demand continuing at an even more rapid pace.

Sales of 3,770 passenger cars and trucks during the first ten days of this month were reported by George D. Keller, vice president in charge of sales of the Studebaker corporation. This is an increase of 22 per cent over the same period of April, 1936, when 3,088 units were sold. Mr. Keller stated that the total sales for the year to date is 30,118 units as compared with 24,290 to date last year, an increase of 24 per cent.

Sales of Buick motor cars during March showed substantial increases over this month a year ago and indicated continued heavy gains in retail volume for the remaining spring months, according to W. F. Hufstader, general sales manager.

Buick domestic retail deliveries totaled 20,951 units, Mr. Hufstader said, compared with 15,107 in March a year ago, a gain of 5,844 cars or 38.6 per cent. Deliveries during the last 10 days of the month were 8,677 units, compared with 6,856 in the previous 10 days and 7,238 in the corresponding 1936 period.

More cars were produced by Packard in March and more delivered to purchasers than in any other month in the entire history of the company, it is announced by M. M. Gilman, Packard vice president and general manager. Still further increases are indicated by the present higher rate of production and by delivery reports from the selling field for the first ten days of April, he added. Production for the first three months this year, Mr. Gilman said, exceeded that for the first quarter of 1936 by 131 per cent.

More new Pontiac cars were delivered by dealers in the United States during March than in any other month of the company's history, according to C. P. Simpson, general sales manager. The month's total was 25,609 units, compared to 23,750 for the next highest month's deliveries of Pontiacs, which was in April, 1929. Also, this figure is almost three times larger than February deliveries were this year.

GLASGOW, April 24.—(AP)—Celtic won the Scottish football cup for the fifteenth time today by defeating Aberdeen, 2 to 1, at Hampden park.

COUNCIL TURNS TO PROBLEM OF TOO MANY CABS

BY HAL FOUST.

A city council committee has been appointed to investigate Chicago's taxicab problem. In the taxi drivers' strike of several weeks ago the public got a taste of street trafic free of cruising cabs, and the public liked it. Since the strike settlement, the annoyances from Yellows and Checkers have been conspicuous by contrast.

Leslie Sorenson, city trafic engineer, in a survey of loop conditions as they were without taxicabs during the strike, found that private automobiles, buses, and street cars were able to move with more dispatch. Pedestrians enjoyed a freedom from cruising cabs cutting across their paths at street intersections. Downtown department stores found that their business benefited rather than suffered from the tax strike.

Mr. Sorenson merely reported conditions and passed to the aldermen the problem of drawing conclusions and recommendations. None in the council favors abolishing all taxicabs. They are an essential part of public utilities. They are of particular value to out of town visitors.

Consider Slow Driving Ban.

Aldermen are, however, considering proposals for off street parking, for reducing the number of licensed cabs, or for strict enforcement of the motor vehicle code that prohibits any-one from driving so slowly as to impede a reasonable use of the right of way.

The demand for taxicabs in Chicago has dropped sharply in the last fifteen years. Downtown parking facilities in Grant park and in vacant lots have been developed so that an increased use of private automobiles has cut taxi patronage. In 1922 there were 7,000 cabs in Chicago. Today 4,106 taxi licenses have been issued for 1937, and competent authorities agree that this is too many. There are two many vacant cabs on the streets.

In looking for suggestions the councilmen have not been able to find any valuable example in New York, where conditions are as bad as in Chicago. A European survey is covered in the following report prepared for THE TRIBUNE by H. A. Inness Brown of Taxi Weekly, a trade paper published in Manhattan:

Cab Stands in Street's Center.

"Taxicab stands similar to those that we have in America do not exist in the capitals of Europe. Instead these cities, in some respects more advanced than even our larger cities such as New York and Chicago, have always placed their taxicab parking space in the centers of the streets. This is true even in the narrower thoroughfares of the capitals.

"The argument back of this plan is to allow the flow of trafic on either side of the street while at the same time permitting the driver to view both sides of the street and thereby get a better opportunity for a call from either side without interfering with flowing trafic.

"On such large boulevards as the Champs Elysées and the Rue de la Paix in Paris this practice has been in existence since before 1914. In Berlin and Copenhagen, and the once prosperous taxicab city of Petrograd, this method of taxicab parking has been accepted as a matter of course.

"While our American system of using street corners has its advantage, as it enables prospective passengers on one side of the street to get in the cab without difficulty, it makes it much more difficult for the pedestrians on the other side to get a cab. Also this method of parking is the cause of many accident hazards in that the trafic must turn out to the center trafic lane in order to pass the parked taxicab.

Wall Street Is Example.

"While undoubtedly the European method of taxi stands is impractical in some of our more traveled streets because of their narrowness and the intensity of the trafic, it is apt to be more efficient than our own where the streets are wide enough to permit such center parking of cabs.

"An example of this type of parking in the United States has been used in Wall street, where center parking has been in existence since the war. A study of the flow of trafic and the convenience of this method of parking will show that it is fair both to the riding public and to automobile owners. One of the great advantages of it from the standpoint of the taxicab owner is that the stand is not invaded by automobile parkers and permits the regulation of taxicabs in such a way that it is always possible on the part of the police to keep a close check on such vehicles."

50 LAP MIDGET RACE TONIGHT BEARS ON TITLE

Midget auto racing drivers here to compete for the national indoor championship at 100 laps next Sunday night will provide action tonight in the 50 lap feature event at the 124th Field Artillery armory, 5200 Cottage Grove avenue.

Added interest is given the card, which provides for nine events, since the winner of the season championship may be determined. In point standings the decision lies with Shorty Sorenson, Harry MacQuinn, and Jimmy Snyder, who are placed in that order in the percentage column.

The 50 lap event tonight will be the fourth of the series in the preliminaries for the national title. The first was won by Sorenson, the second by Snyder, and the third by MacQuinn. The latter was successful last Sunday night, but failed to equal the record time set by Snyder for the grind the preceding Sunday at 10:23.

Forty cars are listed for the time trials tonight.

BANKS' DEPOSIT LOSS IS PLACED AT 78 MILLIONS

Closed Institutions May Pay 44 Pct.

BY JOHN FISHER.

An eventual loss of at least 78 million dollars, or approximately 56 per cent on their deposits, is indicated for depositors in the 142 closed state banks in Cook county.

This would allow the depositors an aggregate return of slightly more than 61 million dollars, or 44 per cent, on the 139 millions in the total deposit liability for these institutions. The total deposit liability is after certain offsets by reason of claims against depositors.

The latest statement of condition for these banks, issued by State Auditor Edward J. Barrett as of March 31, 1937, shows that a total of $40,341,889 has been repaid on deposits to date. This represents 29 per cent of total deposits.

Further Payments Indicated.

Based upon official estimates of maximum recovery on deposits for 125 of the 142 banks, the average return of 44 per cent would indicate that an additional 15 per cent, or nearly 21 million dollars, will be paid.

The following table shows the status of deposits based upon official reports and estimates of eventual returns:

	Amount.	Per cent of total.
Total deposit liability..	$139,100,000	100
Deposits paid..........	40,300,000	29
Deposits due...........	98,800,000	71
Prospective payments....	20,900,000	15
Estimated total return.	61,200,000	44
Estimated total loss....	77,900,000	56

In the first quarter of 1937 a total return of $759,997 was made on deposits and in the year ended March 31, 1937, deposit repayments amounted to $5,516,708.

Book Value of Assets Excessive.

While the remaining resources for the 142 banks have a book value of more than 135 million dollars, against a remaining deposit liability of nearly 99 million, the actual value of such resources is far below the stated value. In most cases the cream of the assets has been skimmed off and those remaining are rather pale in comparison.

The return on deposits for individual banks among the 142 varies greatly—ranging from less than 5 to 100 per cent on the total.

[Individual reports on 20 of these closed banks, first of a series providing details and best available estimates of ultimate liquidation values, appear in the Metropolitan section of today's Sunday Tribune].

LABOR RELATIONS BIG PROBLEM OF TRADE MEETING

Washington, D. C., April 24.—(AP)—The problem of industry's relations with labor unions assumed a growing importance tonight on the agenda of the United States Chamber of Commerce, which begins its annual meeting here Monday. Delegates arriving for the convention found that a half dozen proposals already were on the program for their attention. The question was given added urgency by the recent Supreme court decision upholding the Wagner labor relations act and the recurrence of strikes.

Among the suggestions already advanced by local chambers is that "legal responsibility" of labor organizations be fixed. One chamber unit recommended federal legislation to make unions responsible parties to agreements and require them to incorporate.

The Portland, Ore., chamber proposed a study of what it termed "coercive methods used by radical labor leaders to obtain membership," and the Whittier, Cal., unit urged that the federal government "withhold financial assistance to striking employés."

INDUSTRY INDEX APPROACHES HIGH LEVEL FOR YEAR

New York, April 24.—(AP)—The Associated Press index of industry rose to near the year's high mark in the last week. The index reached 105.8 per cent of the 1929-'30 average from 104.9 last week and 85.8 a year ago. The current pace was 23 per cent above the 1936 rate.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted components, based on 1929-'30 as 100 and using the latest available statistics, compared as follows:

	Latest week.	Previous week.	Year ago.

Taxes Eating Away Rogers' Oil Fortune

New York, April 24.—[Special.]—How one of the great Standard Oil fortunes has been eaten away by state and federal taxes was disclosed here last week, when executors of the estate of the late Col. Henry H. Rogers filed their accounting in the Suffolk county court. Col. Rogers' father was one of the top executives of the early Standard Oil company, in which he made his fortune.

Col. H. H. Rogers.

The executors' report showed that the $16,355,040 principal of the estate left by Col. Rogers upon his death in 1935 has shrunk to $3,589,392. Most of the shrinkage represents what the federal and state tax collectors have taken in inheritance and estate levies.

Pay Over 11 Millions.

During the 15 months from Oct. 25, 1935, to Jan. 31, 1937, a total of $11,612,328 was paid on account to the federal and state governments, the executors reported. A portion of this amount, it was explained, will be refunded to the estate from a trust fund of $9,100,000 established by Rogers' father.

Additional payments out of capital during the period amounted to approximately $1,000,000. The executors reported a profit of $2,971,384 had been realized by the sale of securities; $984,840 had been received in net proceeds on the sale of real estate, and $1,010,922 was received from Col. Rogers' estate in England.

Widow's Claim Presented.

The executors asked the court to determine the validity of a personal claim of $9,875 filed against the estate by Mrs. Pauline V. Rogers, widow of Col. Rogers. Mrs. Rogers claims this amount to cover her expenditures for apparel from July 26, 1935, to Feb. 18, 1936. These expenses, she maintained, should properly be included in funeral expenses. The itemized expenditures listed by Rogers' widow included $1,116 for 419 pairs of stockings; $8 for one pair of shorts; several dozen handkerchiefs, most of which cost $3.50 each, and $21 for three bathing suits.

The court also was asked to pass on two claims of $5,000 each made by P. L. Behrendt, Rogers' secretary, and the Suffolk Economic council.

Loans to Family Shown.

The accounting showed that Mrs. Rogers owed the estate $49,474 on loans advanced to her. Other loans made by Rogers before his death included $24,816 to his son, Henry H. Rogers Jr., and $9,000 to Arture Ramos, a former son-in-law who was the second husband of Millicent Rogers Salm Ramos Balcom.

The executors requested that the court determine the ownership of certain jewels now in possession of the widow, which she claims were gifts from her husband. These include an emerald ring for which Rogers paid $42,000; an emerald diamond bracelet costing $85,000, and a diamond ring worth $95,000.

BILL TO REMODEL BANKRUPTCY ACT BEFORE CONGRESS

Washington, D. C., April 24.—(AP)—Legislation to give the bankruptcy law its first general remodeling since 1898 is before congress with an early hearing in prospect.

Representative Chandler [D., Tenn.], chairman of a house judiciary subcommittee which handles such subjects, said the bill would bring the Securities and Exchange commission into big business reorganizations for the first time.

The bill is designed to consolidate and make permanent new practices to permit "cleaning up" rather than "cleaning out" distressed firms in hopeful circumstances, he said. It would give labor unions a voice in reorganization plans and let wage earners have federal court protection in liquidating debts in small payments.

Section 77-B, now governing corporate reorganizations, and related sections would be repealed and their provisions included in a new section, including subsections on arrangements [settlement by scaling down debts], corporate reorganizations, real property arrangements by unincorporated persons, and amortization of the debts of wage earners [persons earning up to $3,600].

The existing law affecting debt ridden farmers, railroads, and municipalities would not be disturbed.

ALUMINUM CO. SHARES BREAK 10 MORE POINTS

New York, April 24.—[Special.]—Aluminum Company of America shares broke 10 points on the New York Curb exchange today as selling continued as a result of the filing of a government anti-trust suit against the company.

The stock was hammered down 16 points to 134 on a turnover of 10,000 shares, but supporting buying later brought the stock back to 140. The stock broke 7 points yesterday.

Midwest Group Expected to Bid for Rail Control

New York, April 24.—(AP)—Midwestern interests are expected to renew their quest for control of George A. Ball's holdings of Midamerica corporation with resumption of negotiations for sale of control of the former Van Sweringen railroad empire, it was said today in usually well informed Wall street circles. The recent withdrawal of the bid entered by the group headed by Donaldson Brown, General Motors executive, was believed to have cleared the field of prospective buyers, but financial quarters regarded it as certain that some new bidders would be heard from soon.

Stocks Break Again; Many at 1937 Lows

New York, April 24.—[Special.]—Stocks tumbled again today in the most active Saturday market session in six weeks. Leading issues lost fractions to 3 points and many issues were swept to new 1937 low prices.

The market break did not begin until trading had been under way for more than thirty minutes. Stocks opened strong and prices were maintained for about a half hour. Then another wave of selling swept over the market knocking prices down in all sections of the list.

After the first burst of selling the market quieted but many issues continued to lose ground until the close of trading. A number of factors taken together, rather than any immediate news development, were credited with causing the further market break.

Political Factors Disquieting.

The recurring discussion of a possible reduction in the American gold price has resulted in a severe shock to the confidence of speculators. Denials from government officials, from President Roosevelt down, have not succeeded in restoring the aplomb of the speculative trade. Tied up with this factor is the belief that the administration may soon be forced to take some step to shut off the heavy flow of gold from abroad.

The labor question and the business outlook generally are also factors in the immediate market breakdown.

There is a widespread belief that industry will not be able to push up the prices of its manufactured goods fast enough to protect its profit margin, which is endangered by rising costs and wages.

Motors, Steels Resist Selling.

The motor and steel shares showed greater resistance to today's selling than most stocks.

The steel shares showed minor losses. United States Steel broke to 109⅛ but recovered to 110½. Republic lost a half point and Bethlehem was down nearly a point.

In the amusement list Paramount was under selling pressure and dropped more than a point but recovered slightly in the late trading. Conspicuous weak spots were Union Bag and Paper, which lost 4 points; Norfolk and Western, down 5⅝; National Supply, off 5; Minneapolis Honeywell, down 3¼, and Coca-Cola, which fell 3½. International Business Machines plummeted 3 points and S. H. Kress dropped 5.

Westinghouse Electric was a target of concerted selling and lost 3 points before it made a partial recovery. It closed at 137½, off 2½. Westinghouse preferred fell nearly 4 points.

Former Otis & Co. Sues Pierce for $1,075,000

Cleveland, O., April 24.—(AP)—The old partnership of Otis & Co. filed suit today against E. A. Pierce & Co., seeking $1,075,00 as payment for the partnership's brokerage business which, it said, E. A. Pierce & Co. acquired in 1931. The petition said the Pierce concren has paid nothing for the business. The present Otis & Co., corporate successor to the partnership's investment business, announced it was not involved in the action.

MANY CONCERNS EXPERIMENT IN PROFIT SHARING

New Plans Give Set Percentages.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

American industry is experimenting with various schemes for sharing profits with employés as a means of stabilizing employment and promoting harmonious labor relations. In recent months a number of concerns have adopted various profit sharing systems, many of them based on the principle of turning over to the workers a fixed percentage of the profits of the business. Though already widely practiced the movement is still admittedly in the experimental stage.

Among the large companies which maintain profit sharing systems are General Electric, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing, Procter and Gamble, Sears-Roebuck, Fairbanks Morse, and Eastman Kodak.

Share Varies with Profits.

A distinguishing feature of the plans recently adopted is that the amount of money appropriated for workers is not a fixed amount, but varies with the profits of the business. Under such an arrangement the worker has a direct interest in the company's progress.

The proponents of the new system of profit sharing believe that it brings home to the workers more forcefully how closely their welfare is bound up with that of their employers. Under the older systems of profit sharing the funds appropriated for the workers were not designated in advance as a fixed share of profits, but usually represented what the management believed from time to time could be properly distributed.

Advantages of Old System.

This principle is still followed by many concerns and it is by no means certain that it will be discarded in favor of the newer method. Many observers believe that it has many advantages over the newer plan. One of the points emphasized in the older system is that the company is under no obligation to workers to turn over to them a share of the profits when the business might demand that the surplus earnings be used in other directions which in the long run would be more beneficial both to the workers and the owners.

All companies which have used the older system have attempted to discourage the idea that the bonus or profit distributions represent supplemental income to which the employé is entitled by right. They have explained that the distributions represent a gift to the workers over and above the compensation for which they have agreed to work.

Straight Profit Sharing Systems.

The Westinghouse and Fairbanks Morse systems incorporate the straight profit sharing principle. The companies' net incomes for three consecutive months determine the supplemental compensation which the employés receive during the succeeding month.

Under the Fairbanks-Morse plan the workers get a fixed percentage of profits at a rate which increases as profits expand. Seven per cent is first deducted from "net profits" as return on capital. Workers get 15 per cent of the first half million dollars earned in excess of the 7 per cent return; 20 per cent of the next half million and 25 per cent of anything in excess of 1 million.

Many of the bonus plans now in operation have been criticized on the grounds that the money expended could have been more profitably used in the interest of both workers and the company in other ways. It is argued that the profit sharing distribution systems should not be hastily improvised without consideration of other possible benefits to be given employés.

COMFORT IN A CABOOSE

This is the way trainmen ride comfortably in the Milwaukee road's modernized "bay window" cabooses. They are replete with facilities for personal comforts. In the lower left corner can be seen the end of one of the six foot lether upholstered seats which are convertible into beds.

Ye Olde Tyme Rail Caboose Goes 'Sissy'

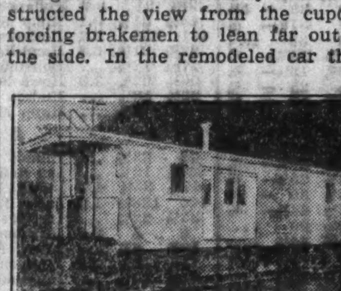
BY WILLIAM YATES.

The old railroad caboose has gone "sissy." No more will envying youngsters watch freight trains go by and wave to brakemen comfortably seated in a tiny cupola atop the caboose, scanning the operation of a long line of freight cars snaking ahead. For modernization has caught up with this piece of equipment whose architecture has not been altered for the last quarter century.

In the Milwaukee, Wis., shops of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad the company's 900 cabooses are undergoing face lifting operations. The cupola's are being removed and nice, comfortable bay windows are being grafted on each side.

Bay Windows for Brakemen.

Higher box cars lately have obstructed the view from the cupola, forcing brakemen to lean far out to the side. In the remodeled car they will be seated in the bay where they can more easily inspect a train for binding brake shoes or dragging truck parts.



Gone is the cupola on this rejuvenated caboose. In its stead are "bay windows" on each side of the car, permitting free observation of the operations of the train ahead. The pipe on top is a stove chimney—not a periscope.

Also, they can readily detect hot journals since the odor arising from burning oil-soaked waste, used for lubricating the revolving axles, usually hangs close to the ground. And the trainmen are safer for they no longer need climb in and out of their bird cage when the engineer is taking up the slack on 80 or 90 cars, a decidedly hazardous position.

Just Like a Nice Club.

The remodeled cars are roomier and airier. They have modern safety stoves which permit cooking of meals, brilliant oil lamps, built in refrigerator, tool locker, lether upholstered side seats six feet in length which can be converted into beds, standard type coach seats in the bays permitting trainmen to sit comfortably while watching the operation of the train, toilet facilities, wash stand and water supply, and clothing lockers.

The exterior color has been changed from brick red to aluminum; the running gear, platforms, handles and ladders are finished in black. The contrast of black against aluminum is an added safety feature since it tends to set off the caboose against the headlight rays of oncoming locomotives.

No provision has been made as yet for flower boxes or venetian blinds in the bay windows.

MINNESOTA'S LAST BIG LUMBER 'DRIVE' STARTS DOWN RIVER

Loman, Minn., April 24.—(AP)—Minnesota's final large lumber drive—for some time to come, at least—started near here today with the skidding of the first logs of a 15,000,000 foot cut into the Little Fork river.

About 200 river men had awaited opening of the frozen river before starting the drive that will send the logs down the winding Little Fork and eventually to International Falls for conversion into lumber, wallboard, and paper.

Much of the timber for the drive was cut on the Nett Lake Indian reservation in northern Minnesota under supervision of the Indian service and includes, besides the 15,000,000 feet of saw logs of white and Norway pine, about 25,000 cords of pulpwood.

River men today began rolling the logs, piled along the Little Fork banks by lumberjacks during the winter's cut, into the river. At every bend along the stream's route nimble footed river men are posted to loosen key logs with their peavies should jams occur.

MARCH BUILDING IS 87.2 PER CENT ABOVE YEAR AGO

Washington, D. C., April 24.—(AP)—The labor department's monthly survey of building activity in 1,523 cities disclosed today that the value of new residential construction in March was 87.2 per cent larger than in March, 1936. The report showed notable residential building activity in the middle Atlantic states, the east, north central states and on the Pacific coast. March residential building was estimated at $84,882,867, a 36.5 per cent advance over the February total of $62,188,632.

In the first quarter of this year as compared with the same period of 1936, New York city building jumped from $40,560,851 to $81,795,839; Boston building from $1,900,011 to $8,563,062; Detroit's from $5,993,351 to $12,143,714; Chicago from $3,946,258 to $8,276,260; Los Angeles from $10,868,266 to $21,014,284 and Philadelphia from $3,213,469 to $10,913,151.

Milwaukee's volume dropped from $10,635,334 to $2,448,180 in the same period, Dallas from $4,861,959 to $1,975,219, Houston from $7,093,249 to $5,198,430 and Miami from $3,150,328 to $2,614,673.

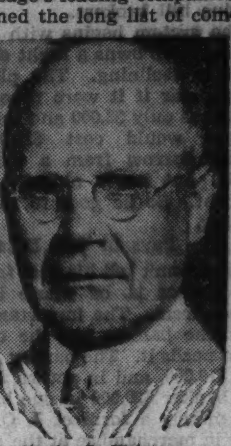
WALGREEN CO. AND BURLINGTON REPORT GAINS

Profit Best in Years; Others Improve.

Two of Chicago's leading companies yesterday joined the long list of companies reporting sharply higher earnings for 1937 as compared with recent years. The Walgreen company, in the six months ended March 31, had the largest profit since semi-annual reports were first issued in 1931, and the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad company had the best first quarter profit since 1931.



Charles R. Walgreen.

On a national basis, a tabulation of the first 132 industrial concerns to report for the March quarter of 1937 showed aggregate net income of $137,697,451, an increase of 47 per cent over the $93,391,854 earned in the first quarter of 1936.

Nets 87 Cents a Share.

Walgreen company, a leading drug store chain, reported net profit of $1,260,719, for the six months ended March 31, compared with $1,190,738 in the first half of the preceding fiscal year. This was equal to 87 cents a share on the common stock, compared with 82 cents on the same number of shares a year earlier, but $1.28 a share on the smaller number of shares outstanding on March 31, 1936.

Net sales for the six months were $34,214,223, compared with $30,837,162 in the first half of last year.

In issuing the report Charles R. Walgreen, president, announced that the company has decided to divest itself entirely of a separately managed subsidiary engaged in the wholesale liquor business.

Wages Highest in History.

"Wage payments are at the highest level in the history of the business," Walgreen said. "Working conditions are the best in my experience. The first part of 1929 is popularly regarded as the period of the peak of prosperity.

"Our total sales are currently running about 55 per cent ahead of a comparable 1929 period, total wages about 70 per cent more. Prices are lower, rents are lower in proportion to sales, taxes are higher, rate of profit on sales is lower. It is evident that in this industry our customers, employés, and taxing authorities are at present securing the major share of the benefits of recovery."

Walgreen also said that the company will continue to open a reasonable number of new stores. Openings were heavy in March and by the close of that month the company had 513 in operation.

CONTROL DESTINY OF 10 LOW PRICED COMMON STOCKS
Tomorrow's market will ride on the wheels of commodity prices.
This is a different situation from the 1929 bull market when commodities were soft. Today many obscure stocks will come forward because they are loaded with an inventory whose rise in price will multiply their profits enormously.
10 of these are shown in our Bulletin 205C

HERE'S PERFECT LOAN SYSTEM—EVERY ONE GAINS

Due Bill Finance Plan Thrives in New York.

New York, April 24.—(AP)—New York has an "underground" banking system that makes some transactions of Wall street look like child's play.

It operates without much cash. It has no tellers, no vaults, nor even any banks, but it does a thriving business with a select clientele at a profit. The men who run it are mysterious folk known to customers as due bill brokers.

The system begins with John Doe. Maybe John owns a night club. Business is declining. The place might be popular if it were renovated, but John has only $3,000 and the improvements would cost $10,000. John would borrow from a bank if he could, but he is already too much in debt. So he goes to the due bill banker.

Pays in Due Bills.

John won't tell his best friends who the banker is, or where his money comes from. The important thing is that the banker has the cash when John needs it. The banker gives John the $10,000, and in return John gives the banker $20,000 in due bills, which are merely a form of I. O. U.'s payable in merchandise at the night club.

When this transaction is complete the banker parcels out the due bills among a number of brokers, selling them at 60 per cent of their face value. Thus the banker collects 20 per cent profit on his investment.

The broker then peddles the due bills to persons who wish to go to the night club. His price is 66⅔ per cent of the face value, and his profit is nearly 12 per cent.

By the time the night club goer gets the due bill it is in the form of a check made out, perhaps, in the sum of $20. It can purchase only food or pay cover charges. It is not good for liquor. But what it does buy the customer gets at one-third less than the listed price.

All Seem to Profit.

Suppose the customer spends $10. Before he leaves the club, that amount, the date, and the customer's name are marked on the back of the check, along with the balance of the due bill's value. Next day the customer takes the due bill back to the broker, pays $6.67 for his $10 worth of entertainment, and the broker peddles the remainder of the due bill to someone else.

The night club customer saved money, the broker made money, the banker made money. At first glance it appears that the night club owner foots a heavy bill, but he gets the money he needs to improve his business and he repays the loan not in cash, but in food he sells at a profit. He figures he had an even break and got the improvements.

MOST CHICAGO BANK STOCKS SAG DURING WEEK

Local bank stocks lost ground last week in sympathy with other security markets. Declines ranged up to $15 a share—in Northern Trust at $790 to $805. First National lost $14 to $323 bid, $327 asked.

Continental Illinois dropped $8 a share to close at $145 bid, $147 asked, after high sales early in the week at $156. Merchandise Bank and Trust was off $10 a share at $285 to $295. Harris Trust and Savings ran contrary to the trend by rising $5 to $485 bid, $495 asked. Lake Shore Trust and Savings was off $5 at $90 to $100. Terminal National was unchanged at $39 to $41, and Chicago Title was up $4 at $219 to $223.

SILVER FUTURES.

MONTREAL, Que., April 24.—(AP)—SILVER—Futures closed steady, 13 points higher to 17 points lower. Sales, none. Closing bids in cents per ounce follow: May, 44.75c; July, 44.65c; September, 44.60c.

BUTTER, EGGS, POTATOES

Butter futures closed ⅛ to ¼ cent higher yesterday on the Mercantile exchange with November at 31¼ cents a pound. Sales were 3 cars, the smallest trade in many weeks. Firmness in the cash market was a factor.

A decline of ¼ to ½ cent a dozen in fresh eggs had some effect on futures with the latter unchanged to ⅛ cent lower, October closing at 24½ cents a dozen. Hatcheries were reported as shutting down in parts of Illinois and Iowa owing to a slow demand for baby chicks. The latter is said to reflect the unfavorable ratio between egg and feed prices. Sales of futures were 60 cars.

Potatoes closed 7 cents higher to 3 cents lower, with May at $2.40 per 100 pounds. Sales, 14 cars. Range of prices on futures follow:

WALGREEN CO. AND BURLINGTON REPORT GAINS

Profits Are Best in Years; Others Improve.

of 1937 had net income of $1,182,611 after charges. Of this amount $978,160 was contributed by March operations. The first quarter profit was equal to about 65 cents a share and compared with $932,350, or 55 cents a share, in the first quarter of 1936.

In the first quarters of recent years the carrier's reports were: 1935, loss of $1,183,093; 1934, profit of $1,028,662; 1933, a loss of $1,506,424; 1932, a profit of $1,072,364; 1931, a profit of $4,084,167.

Total operating revenue in March was $8,720,612, against $7,702,639 a year ago, and net railway operating income amounted to $1,705,178, against $1,195,207.

Coal Trafic Heavy.

Ralph Budd, president of the Burlington, explained that March operations were unusually good because of heavy movements of stored coal. Coal trafic was about 25 per cent above a year earlier. The April showing has not been as favorable because the coal movement was considerably lighter, he said.

Other earnings news yesterday included an estimate by analysts that Jones and Laughlin Steel corporation would show a net profit of nearly $2,000,000 for the quarter ended March 31, compared with a loss of $933,279 in the corresponding quarter of last year.

This would place earnings for the quarter between $1.50 and $1.60 a common share after preferred dividends. Cold weather and flood conditions adversely affected earnings in the first quarter of 1936, and floods also hampered operations in the first two months of 1937. Indications are that a considerable improvement in production and earnings will continue in the second quarter, especially as there are no signs of serious interruption to output and shipments in the next two months, the analysis said.

View on Prospects.

Another favorable report on the steel industry was given in a statement at New York yesterday by Charles R. Hook, president of the American Rolling Mill company, before sailing for Europe.

"The outlook in this country is very good all around," said Hook. "There have been no cancellations of orders and no indications anywhere of a slackening of demand."

He said his company's plants are operating at capacity and that second quarter profits will exceed the estimated $2,300,000 for the first quarter.

Cutler-Hammer, Inc., reported net income of $450,784, or $1.36 a share, for the March quarter, against $232,343, or 70 cents a share, for the corresponding period of 1936.

Curtis Publishing company reported March quarter net profit of $1,513,740, or $1.75 a share on the $7 cumulative preferred. This compared with revised net profit of $1,572,540 for the first quarter of last year.

DIAMONDS FLASH ONCE MORE IN OLD PROSPERITY ROLE

Business Gains, Inflation Threats Aid Market.

The diamond and precious stone business, like the durable goods industries, is again prospering. Diamonds and precious stones are durable goods in the literal sense of the phrase, and the prosperity curve of this world-wide industry follows in a general way the trend in those industries which produce steel, machinery, and other heavy goods.

Diamond prices are rising and dealers expect a further advance this year. In fact, the outlook in the trade is regarded as the most favorable in nearly a decade, although prices are still well under the level existing ten years ago.

The British coronation, investment, and speculative buying, and the normal increase in demand which results from improving economic conditions are the basis of the current bull market in diamonds.

Predicts Further Advance.

Frederick M. Gottlieb, Chicago importer, who has just returned from one of his frequent European trips, said yesterday that the present demand for diamonds in Europe and the United States promises to result in a further advance in prices this year of at least 30 per cent. They have moved up 10 to 20 per cent, he said, in the last two months.

Englishmen are buying diamonds in preparation for the coronation. Frenchmen are buying, among other reasons, as insurance against further depreciation in the value of their currency, and Americans are buying for reasons similar to those that motivate the Englishmen and the Frenchmen.

Many Buy for Investment.

The wives of prosperous Americans are getting more diamonds than they have had since the collapse of the stock market in 1929, according to Gottlieb. A good deal of the American buying, perhaps 15 to 20 per cent, he says, is outright investment buying by persons who are seeking means of preserving capital in a period of monetary instability. Some men who rejected the pleas of their wives for new diamond bracelets or other costly adornments a few years ago, now believe that such purchases may prove sounder investments than the dollars they have in gilt edged bonds, it is said.

How many of the diamond buyers are motivated by the desire to hedge against monetary uncertainty is difficult to guess, Gottlieb said, but he believes that it is the chief motive of some, and at least a secondary influence with many others.

Market Strongly Controled.

The market for diamonds is more effectively controled than the market for any other commodity. The London diamond syndicate dominates the price situation and determines what Americans, who buy 60 per cent of the world's output, shall pay for their stones.

In Amsterdam 3,500 diamond cutters are employed as compared with only 500 a year ago. In Antwerp 7,500 cutters are at work. In those cities and surrounding communities practically all the rough diamonds produced are cut and prepared for the world's market. Ninety-five per cent of the world's production comes from the South African fields.

The part that investment and speculative buying in diamonds is playing in the present market is one of the aspects of the widespread desire of people to protect their capital and savings against rising prices and the declining value of money. Some are buying stocks, some real estate, others have put money in commodities.

"Hard Money" Increases.

In the last year the circulation of "hard money" in the United States has increased. People cannot get gold coin but silver coin in circulation has increased $27,264,043. The circulation of paper money has also grown with the expansion in commercial activity. All types of money outstanding on March 31 aggregated about a half billion more than a year earlier.

The suggestion that the increase in silver coin is the result of hoarding arising from a distrust of paper money is scoffed at by treasury officials. They point out that silver can be bought in the open market for less than 40 per cent of its monetary value.

BUSINESS BITS

David A. Noyes & Co., brokers, have moved their office from the 7th floor at 208 South La Salle street to larger quarters on the 4th floor.

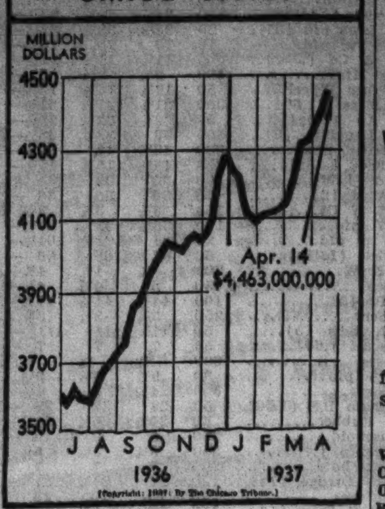
Samuel M. Hastings of the International Business Machines corporation, and B. C. Heacock of Peoria, president of the Caterpillar Tractor company and president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, will head a delegation of seventeen members of the association leaving Chicago today for Washington, D. C., to attend the annual convention of the chamber of commerce. The convention will begin tomorrow and continue through Thursday.

W. M. Henderson of Pittsburgh has been elected a director of the Big Lake Oil company to succeed the late J. G. Farquar.

John A. Patton has been made manager of the group department of the Equitable Life Assurance society.

Carl W. Dipman, editor of the Progressive Grocer, and Godfrey M. Lebhar, editor of the Chain Store Age, will address a dinner meeting of the Chicago chapter, American Marketing association, in the Palmer house next Wednesday evening. Dipman will discuss current developments in merchandising among independent dealers and Lebhar will analyze the problems and progress of chain stores.

Commercial Loans of Reporting Member Banks in the United States



The above chart shows the expansion in total commercial loans made by banks in large and medium sized cities. "Reporting member banks" are banks belonging to the federal reserve system in 101 principal cities. All the large banks and most of the smaller banks in these 101 cities belong to the federal reserve system. After several years of steady decline commercial loans in 1936 began to expand substantially. There has been an increase of nearly one billion dollars since January, 1936. The trend has been even more sharply upward during the last few weeks as business concerns have sought additional bank loans to accommodate their rising sales and bigger dollar volume of inventories. The latter has been partly due to increased prices for raw materials. The letters at the bottom of the chart refer to months of the year.

GRAIN MARKETS MOVE NARROWLY IN QUIET TRADE

Wheat Prices Firmer, but Corn Declines.

CHICAGO GRAIN PRICES

Yesterday's closing prices on grain for delivery in July, with comparisons, follow:

	Yesterday.	Friday.	Week ago.	Month ago.
Wheat	$1.18⅝	$1.18¼	$1.19⅞	$1.29
Corn	1.15⅝	1.16¼	1.16⅝	1.12⅝
Oats	.44	.44	.45⅝	.45⅝
Rye	1.02⅝	1.02¼	1.03⅝	1.08¼
Soy beans	1.72⅝	1.76⅝	1.71	1.59

Speculative interest in the grain markets yesterday was the smallest in some time. Wheat futures fluctuated erratically within a moderate range, with closing prices showing only fractional net changes for the day.

Corn was firmer early, but weakened later on scattered commission house liquidation and closed ⅝ to 1⅝ cents a bushel lower, with the May delivery leading the decline. Oats and rye were irregular. Soy beans declined 4 cents a bushel, the maximum permitted for one day under exchange regulations.

Liverpool Market Higher.

Strength in the Liverpool market, where wheat futures closed 1 to 1½ cents a bushel higher, and reports that Germany would be in the market for liberal quantities of Canadian wheat this week were responsible for a slightly higher opening in North American markets.

Buying was not enthusiastic, however, and the upturn was quickly lost. There was some selling later on reports indicating that there had been fairly general moisture over the American spring wheat belt. Short covering caused a rally from the low point. Traders paid little attention to unfavorable crop comments, which, however, were less in evidence than recently. There were some reports of dust storms from Texas and Oklahoma.

International Trade Slow.

International trade in cash wheat was relatively slow. Sales of Canadian grain were placed at 500,000 bushels, while some new crop winter wheat was sold for deferred shipment to Rotterdam via Baltimore.

Local receipts of cash wheat yesterday were 73 cars, part of which represented grain recently bought at Kansas City for shipment here. There were 125,000 bushels sold to go into storage in local public elevators.

Longs in May corn was disposed to liquidate their holdings yesterday, despite continued small country offerings to arrive and reports that 1,000,000 bushels of Argentine corn en route to the United States had been diverted to Germany. That country has been a rather persistent buyer of corn during the last week.

CASH GRAIN

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 74 cars; corn, 35 cars; oats, 38 cars; rye, 2 cars; barley, 12 cars; soy beans, 1 car. Range of cash grain prices per bushel in leading markets:

CHECK ACCOUNT DEBITS INDICATE RISE IN BUSINESS

City's, Nation's Totals Show Increase.

A sharp increase in business activity throughout the nation was indicated in banking statistics issued yesterday covering the week ended April 21. Debits to individual deposit account by banks reporting to the twelve federal reserve banks amounted to $9,405,758,000, compared with $8,848,935,000 in the preceding week and $8,747,106,000 in the week ended April 22, 1936.

Debits represents withdrawals of money by check and usually account for 90 per cent of all business transacted.

Rise in Chicago Area.

In the 7th reserve district, the Chicago area, the total last week amounted to $1,336,603,000, compared with $1,216,279,000 in the preceding week and $1,114,394,000 in the same 1936 period.

Debits in Chicago totaled $754,842,000, against $683,373,000 a week earlier and $642,945,000 last year. Detroit reported $263,305,000, against $226,195,000; Des Moines $22,019,000, compared with $20,133,000 and $19,718,000; Indianapolis $52,693,000, against $46,285,000 and $38,390,000, and Milwaukee $67,137,000, against $71,362,000 and $60,142,000.

Bank Clearings Lower.

Bank clearings by members of the Chicago Clearing House association in the week ended yesterday totaled $328,200,000, compared with $359,000,000 a week ago and $294,400,00 in the same week of 1936. Clearings by days follow:

	Clearings.	Balances.
Monday	$ 49,000,000	$ 4,700,000
Tuesday	59,600,000	6,800,000

Total for wk.	$328,200,000	$37,100,000
Correspond. last yr.	$294,400,000	$42,900,000

The New York Clearing House association reported clearings of $3,253,879,368 for the week, compared with $3,693,640,327 in the preceding week. Total surplus and undivided profits were unchanged at $884,780,100; average net demand deposits decreased $35,475,000, and average time deposits increased $4,675,000.

COMMODITY LIST MOSTLY STEADY TO SHADE HIGHER

Prices of international commodities yesterday were mostly steady to slightly higher. Speculative interest was at low ebb, a normal occurrence on Saturday, and the volume of trading was unusually small.

Metal markets were dull. Export copper was unchanged at 14.40 to 14.60 cents a pound, domestic copper held steady at 14½ cents, futures eased .04 to .11 cent, and no change was recorded in prices in the unofficial London market.

Closing prices of principal commodities, and comparisons with final quotations a week ago, follow:

Everyday Economics

In response to requests from readers for simple explanations of financial terms and brief analyses of factors affecting business and finance, The Tribune presents "Everyday Economics." Letters addressed to "Editor, Everyday Economics," telling him what you would like to see discussed here will be welcomed.

Lard.

Lard prices are influenced by the prices of cottonseed oil, hogs, and corn. Because either lard or cottonseed oil may be used in many products the action of one commodity influences the other. Because farmers find it more profitable at times to feed their corn to hogs and derive their income from the sale of the fattened hog, instead of selling corn directly into the market, the action of the grain market is important.

This ratio between the price of corn and hogs is watched carefully. Theoretically, when the price of hogs is 10 times that of corn—that is, when hogs are selling at $10 a hundred pounds and corn at $1 a bushel—a profit can be made from feeding corn to hogs, rather than selling the corn directly. The average hog yields about 35 pounds of lard.

The highest price for lard in recent years was 17¼ cents in August, 1935. The recent low was 3.57½ cents in the middle of 1932.

Lard futures are traded on the Chicago Board of Trade. The unit of trading is 50,000 pounds of standard prime steam lard. Prices are quoted in cents per pound and the minimum fluctuation is 2½ cents per 100 pounds, or $12.50 per contract of 50,000 pounds.

In 1935 the United States produced 662,060,000 pounds of lard and consumed 630,090,000 pounds.

Tomorrow: Factoring.

LATINS WELCOME ALL 'HOT' MONEY OF EUROPEANS

Foreign Funds Invested in Bonds and Stocks.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, April 24.—European funds are flowing into South America, especially Argentina, according to official admissions, and the money is not considered so "hot" as in the United States. There is plenty of evidence that the authorities are hoping that the remittances will increase.

However embarrassed Uncle Sam may be by the inflow, South Americans are pleased because the money has started to come their way. Reports from Argentina revealed foreign investors are taking up millions in internal bonds, while in other states the tendency is to buy national industrial stock.

Britons are said to be well in the lead, but continentals, especially Germans and Italians, also seem to be smuggling their funds to this continent on a large scale despite the strict exchange laws in their countries.

Far from European Turmoil.

The reason for the capital flight was said in every case to be the uncertain political outlook in Europe. South America, far from European turmoil, is seen to be the safest spot for investment, after the United States.

This money is not considered "hot" in South America. This is because practically every state has its exchange restriction laws, which preclude any sudden liquidation of invested funds for transfer. The pounds, francs, marks, and lire that are remitted here come to stay. They are used immediately in payment of purchases of machinery and products which this continent does not possess.

In this sense South America is benefiting from a true influx of capital which will contribute to the development of its countries. European money in the United States is "hot" because there is a free market and sudden liquidation and transfer could upset the market.

Argentina Experiencing Boom.

The flow of capital to Argentina is occurring at a time when that country is experiencing a major boom. The government has officially admitted that conditions are "amazingly prosperous." Exports are headed for an all-time high.

Agitation is proceeding for revision of the immigration laws, as the advantage of fresh capital will be largely nullified by lack of labor. It is estimated Argentina could absorb half a million workers immediately.

Conservatives object to resumption of unrestricted immigration from Europe, fearing importation of extremism. Liberals scoff at these fears, arguing that the prosperity of the new lands, with work and food for all, will soon cure the European "isms" born in hunger and insecurity.

COTTON

Cotton futures held within narrow price limits yesterday. Speculative interest was light. Closing trades on futures in Chicago were .08 cent lower to .03 cent higher. Other American markets were unchanged to .06 cent a pound higher. There was fair selling of May cotton futures attributed to longs who were evening up.

Tenders of spot cotton on May contracts will be made on April 27. Spot cotton closed .05 cent higher with New Orleans 13.55 cents, New York 13.85 cents and Galveston and Houston at 13.45 cents a pound. Prices in cents per pound follow:

U. S., INDUSTRIAL BONDS ADVANCE; RAILS ISSUES SAG

Changes for Day Small; Trading Dull.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 24.—High grade corporation bonds and obligations of the United States government moved higher on the listed market today while railroad liens continued to work downward. Trends were rather indecisive, however, and volume of trading was again small, total transactions amounting to $5,483,000, par value, against $5,330,000 a week ago.

Although gains in the federal list were moderate they served to check the steady decline which has been underway all week since the President presented his budget message to congress. Losses in many instances were reduced to less than $10 per $1,000 bond for the week.

Guaranteed Issues Rise.

Treasury 2¾s of 1954 and 1959, Farm Mortgage 3¼s of 1964 and Home Owners 3s of 1952 were among the group to shave losses below the $10 level. Gains for the day for the federal group as a whole ranged from $3.43¾ per bond to $8.12½.

Losers in the carrier group included Great Western 4s, which declined $15 to $452.50; Canadian Pacific 4s, down $10 to $945; Baltimore and Ohio 4½s, off $6.25 to $757.50, and St. Paul 5s of 1975, off $6.25 to $306.25. New York Central convertible 6s fell $20 to $1,202.50.

Fear Rail Clerk Strike.

Some observers attributed the continued weakness in rails to threats of a strike by clerks, freight handlers, and station employés. While some traders held that the threat was too local, others feared it might become national.

The foreign list was extremely dull and price movements were narrow and meaningless.

LARD

Scattered liquidation by holders of May lard contracts and hedging sales carried prices off 5 to 7½ cents yesterday with the close at the bottom. Trade reports indicate that there has been a further accumulation in local supplies of cash lard. Clear bellies [salt pork] closed unchanged to 7½ cents higher. Cash lard was quoted at $11.60; loose, $10.97½; leaf, $10.87½ and clear bellies at $16.12½ per 100 pounds. Prices per 100 pounds follow:

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Sunday, April 25, 1937.

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Progress.

One of the most important words in the business dictionary is progress, and yet most of us know little about the progress that is in the making.

When the automobile and the airplane were invented, the general public preferred to sit on the sidelines—where it really belonged, until science had completed its painstaking work of turning out products which were commercially practicable. It takes a born speculator or a person with unusual faith in the men developing a new product to put money into it.

In the laboratories and workshops of hundreds of companies and research organizations are thousands of men devoting their lives to producing things which will make life more comfortable and enjoyable.

Several examples of the sort of thing that has been done recently or is now in process of development are pointed out in a current bulletin of Arthur D. Little, Inc., chemists and engineers.

In the textile field, for instance, laboratories are developing rayons of greater elasticity and strength which will open the field to many new uses. Improvements are expected to make possible substantially lower prices within the next year or two.

A man used to buy his shirt a size large and gamble on how much it would shrink. Sanford Cluett could not see the sense in this, and hit on a simple sounding solution. Under the new processes the cloth is mechanically crimped by the amount that tests show it will shrink when laundered. The process is particularly suited to cotton, but efforts now are being made to meet with similar efficiency the special problems presented by woolens.

Totally different, but fully as intriguing are experiments with concrete. We already have "Aerocrete," made so full of bubbles that it floats on water yet has strength for many purposes. Now comes "Vacuum Concrete," said to reduce road costs as much as $5,000 a mile. Excess water and air are sucked out, strength is increased, and drying is so rapid that it can be walked on 20 minutes after being poured. In using this concrete to build a house recently it was found possible to remove forms soon after pouring to apply a coat of stucco that became an integral part of the concrete walls. The whole job was done in a day.

SMALL SECURITY ISSUES WILL BE SOLD THIS WEEK

Most of New Offerings to Be Stocks.

Only a few small security issues will become eligible for public offering this week, completing the required twenty days since registration with the Securities and Exchange commission.

These include $250,000 in Laclede Packing company, St. Louis, Mo., bonds bearing 4½ per cent interest, due in 1947. Proceeds will be used to retire preferred stock and for working capital. The offering price will be 100; underwriting discount amounts to 4 per cent and the dealer discount up to 1 per cent. The Metropolitan St. Louis company is the underwriter.

Neisner Stock Issue.

A larger issue, but which will be offered to present stockholders, consists of 25,000 shares of Neisner Brothers, Inc., 4¾ per cent convertible preferred, $100 par. The company operates a chain of merchandise stores and is headed by J. M. Neisner. The statement filed with the SEC also covers an undisclosed number of common shares reserved for conversion of the preferred.

The new preferred will be offered in exchange to holders of 7 per cent convertible preferred, of which the unexchanged portion will be called for redemption. Underwriters are headed by Lehman Brothers.

Will Convert Preferred Stock.

The Pennsylvania Glass Sand corporation of Lewiston, Pa., will also qualify to issue 133,535 shares of no par common for conversion of preferred stock outstanding. Any portion unissued through conversion will be offered to common stock holders at $24 a share after June 21.

The Solar Aircraft company, San Diego, Cal., plans to issue 75,000 shares of $1 par common, of which 67,500 will be offered publicly at $3 a share and the remainder to officers and employés at $2.50 to $3 a share. Proceeds will be used in paying debts, purchasing equipment, and for working capital.

Other Stock Issues Planned.

The United States Realty and Improvement corporation will qualify to issue 63,000 shares of no par common, with proceeds to be used to retire 6 per cent notes of 1938 and for working capital and equipment. The offering price will be $20 a share and Harris Upham & Co. have been mentioned as one of the likely underwriters.

The Strouss-Hirshberg company of Youngstown, O., department store operators, plan to issue 33,155 shares of $5 par common stock. Proceeds would be used for construction and working capital. Prospective underwriters are headed by Maynard H. Murch & Co.

SELLING WAVE SENDS CHICAGO STOCKS LOWER

A selling wave depressed Chicago stock prices yesterday. Heaviest trading was in Chicago Corporation common, which closed ⅛ lower at 4⅞, equaling the low mark for the year. Middle West declined ⅜, Borg-Warner was off ¼, and Electric Household dipped 1 point. Kerlyn Oil and Utah Radio rose ⅛ each.

The division of securities for the state of Ohio notified the exchange that securities listed on the local exchange now are exempt from qualification under the securities act of the state.

Volume for the week was 254,000 shares, compared with 267,000 in the preceding week and 305,000 in the corresponding week of last year. During the period 189 issues were traded, of which two were new issues. There were 44 advances, 102 declines, and 43 unchanged.

HOGS DIP, OTHER LIVE STOCK ENDS WEEK WITH GAIN

Large Receipts and Ham Imports Hit Swine.

The market for hogs slumped sharply late last week, finishing lower than a week earlier, while all other live stock closed higher for the week. The largest receipts since early in March, unloaded by farmers due to unsatisfactory ratio between the price of corn and hogs, as well as the record influx of foreign pork at New York, caused the break in hogs.

So serious has become the flood of pork from other countries that representatives of farmers in various parts of the country are going to Washington in protest to the crop tinkers there. They call attention to the existing disparity in the tarif rates on canned hams, which make up the bulk of the pork imports, and the rates on other canned meats.

Duty Lower on Hams.

Canned hams are being imported over a duty of 3¼ cents per pound, whereas the tarif on other canned meats is 6 cents. Two years ago only three countries were exporting hams to the United States. Now there are fifteen.

Last week's ham imports from all countries at New York totaled 1,334,979 pounds and set a new all-time record. They compared with 789,760 pounds the same week last year and 37,649 pounds two years ago. From Jan. 1 to April 17, New York received 12,752,853 pounds of ham, equal to the hams of 625,000 hogs weighing 200 pounds alive. It is estimated imports of canned ham are now about equal to the total production of canned ham in the United States.

Packers Blame Foreign Competition.

Packers attribute the relatively low level of hogs and pork to the competition from abroad. With beef and lamb about the highest in seven or eight years, pork consumers evidently are getting a "break."

Closing wholesale meat prices indicated that the various cuts of pork were moving to butcher shops from $1 to $2 per hundred pounds lower than a year ago, the most decline in hams, while cuts of beef and lamb meat were wholesaled $1 to $9 higher, gains in lamb amounting to 4 to 27 per cent and in beef to 1 to 28 per cent over 1936.

Lambs and Cattle Advance.

The average price of live lambs at the stock yards last week at $12.90 was highest since January, 1930, showing a rise of 55 cents over the preceding week. Advances of 25 to 50 cents were general in steers, yearlings, cows, and hefers. Calves closed steady to 25 cents higher. The week's steer average at $10.90 showed a rise of 25 cents. Final hog sales were fully 25 cents under the week's high spot.

Practically all live stock yesterday was billed direct to packers, not sufficient stock being on the open market to test quotations.

Why Trains Go Faster

On January 2, 1935, a group of business men boarded a train in Chicago bound for St. Paul, Minnesota, 400 miles distant.

Four hundred minutes later, the train arrived in St. Paul after the fastest rail trip on record between the two cities.

The train was the now celebrated "400"; the occasion, its inaugural run.

Crack train of the Chicago and North Western Railway, the "400" has been a spectacular success from the start. Shuttling between Chicago and the Twin Cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis, it frequently departs in several sections. For December, 1936, its revenue-record showed a gain of 100% over that of December, 1935.

When competing carriers saw the public flocking to the "400," they started making plans to speed up their own schedules. The Milwaukee road built the streamlined "Hiawatha." The Burlington's answer was the Diesel-engined streamliners, "Twin Zephyrs."

All these fast new trains have achieved notable success. Each created its own patronage. Each carries capacity loads and does so without reducing trafic on the road's standard service.

Credit for this progressive step in American railroading is given to the Chicago Tribune. Said President Fred W. Sargent of the North Western: "The '400' is the Tribune's train. The Tribune furnished the demand. We furnished the equipment."

In November, 1933, twenty-six months before the "400" made its initial run, the Tribune added to its editorial platform for America a new plank: "SPEED UP RAILWAY PASSENGER SERVICE." Editorials pointed out that the migration from rails to highway was being fostered by the railroads' own lack of aggressiveness.

Later editorials made specific recommendations. To the road which would place in service a mile-a-minute train between Chicago and the Twin Cities, the Tribune pledged full publicity.

The North Western acted immediately. It devoted the entire year of 1934 to preparation of its roadbed and equipment. The rest is history.

Not only has the Chicago territory benefited by this new spirit in railroading, but the entire country as well. Since the Tribune first started hammering for speedier rail-service, drastic time-reductions have been made in runs between Chicago and New York, Washington, New Orleans, Montreal, Jacksonville and other important points.

This successful drive illustrates the aggressive policy with which the Chicago Tribune fosters the interests of the community and the territory which it serves.

It demonstrates anew the influence which the Tribune commands as a result of publishing a newspaper which prints the news—an influence which manifests itself also in the greater returns enjoyed by advertisers in the Tribune columns.

TOWN OFFICIALS MAP PROGRAMS FOR NEW TERMS

Problem of Water Arises Again.

Water and transportation, the two bugaboos of northwest side suburbs, are emerging again to face reelected and newly elected administrations, now that the village and town elections are past and officials are mapping programs for their coming four year terms.

Arthur L. Jones, Park Ridge.

According to Charles Ziese, reelected Schiller Park president, his administration will make every effort to obtain Chicago water for Schiller Park residents. He said the proposed water project, estimated to cost approximately $51,000, has been approved by PWA authorities and is now waiting for appropriation of adequate funds by congress. The project would include a $24,000 PWA grant.

Mayor Arthur L. Jones, reëlected Park Ridge head, states that his administration will proceed with water reservoir construction already started. "We are carrying on a survey of water leaks under a project to rehabilitate water mains in order to improve our water supply," Jones said.

Projects in Progress.

J. D. Flentie, reëlected Arlington Heights president, says his administration has several small sewer and water pipe improvement projects in progress and that a request has been made for PWA aid on a road improvement project. "We expect to build a municipal building for machinery and equipment storage," he said.

J. D. Flentie, Arlington Heights.

John A. Cullerton, reëlected president of Elmwood Park on the Nonpartisan ticket, stated that one of the first steps his administration will take will be to petition the Illinois Commerce Commission for transportation connecting Elmwood Park with Chicago transportation systems. "Feeder buses to Chicago Surface Lines would be ideal," he said.

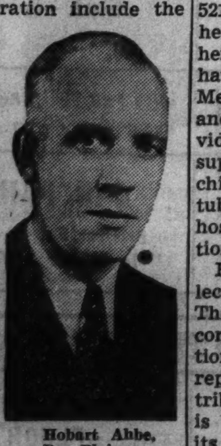
Barney Reeves, reëlected Franklin Park president on the Nonpartisan ticket, said the village has already applied for WPA work on a street signs, planting, and street grading project.

John A. Cullerton, Elmwood Park.

Martin L. Enger, reëlected River Grove president on the People's party ticket, stated that work will start shortly on a project to widen and pave streets.

Hobart Ahbe, mayor elect of Des Plaines, who defeated Mayor George W. Kinder by a vote of 2,224 to 1,871, said that one of the most important steps his administration will take will be to promote the construction of an adequate storm sewer to eliminate basement flooding during storms.

Other projects to be supported by the new administration include the restoration of "adequate lighting"; protection of hazardous railroad crossing; free collection of ashes from all homes and restoration of municipal credit.



Hobart Ahbe, Des Plaines.

Hans Schmidt, reëlected president of Wheeling, has announced that his administration will continue to give the voters the same type of government it has furnished during the past few years. He will name village board committees at the first meeting of the new board on May 3.

Michael Dider, reëlected president of Niles, says that the village administration will coöperate with neighboring villages and the Cook county administration in all mutual projects.

Alumni of Olivet College Will Meet Next Saturday

Chicagoland alumni of Olivet college, Olivet, Mich., will hold their annual spring meeting Saturday noon in the NBC studios, Merchandise Mart. They will hear the annual concert of the Olivet College Symphony orchestra, broadcast from Detroit.

Women's Clubs Take 'How Are You' Seriously

[This is the fourteenth of a series of articles explaining the work of the departments that are included in the 7th district of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs. Another department will be explained in next Sunday's issue.]

BY MILDRED WILDS.

Medicine is losing its mystery. Since the public, through the microscope, saw eye to eye with the typhosus, the tubercle bacillus, and similar high sounding "bugs," it has become a case of man against microbe.

Dr. Alice Conklin.

According to Dr. Alice Conklin, 2910 Logan boulevard, public health department chairman of the Seventh district of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, the fight is just beginning. The knowledge gained through years of practice as a Chicago surgeon, she is giving out voluntarily to the thousands of northwest side women in whose hands is the health record of this and succeeding generations. The public health department as a "pain chaser" is one of the most popular exercises in the women's club set-up.

Through 25 local clubs, Dr. Conklin is spreading medical knowledge as ammunition against the bugbears of the modern home. Through charts, lectures, and motion pictures, the health department is glorifying the carrot and the orange and is spreading spinach propaganda.

Campaign Against Syphilis.

Every year a campaign is made by this department to educate the women concerning the cause, cure, and effects of a widespread disease. "Because statistics show that one out of every ten persons in this country have syphilitic infection," explains Dr. Conklin, "because this disease affects the second and third generation either physically or mentally, the seventh district chose this disease as the major topic of the year."

All articles written recently on the subject were obtained from the Illinois State Medical association headquarters and read in local club meetings. Motion pictures were shown of the methods of giving intervenous injections and of the necessity of the Wasserman test for all expectant mothers before they had passed the fourth month of pregnancy. Lectures of prominent medical specialist were given at the recent district meeting.

"There are no closed subjects for women interested in humanity's health and happiness," says Dr. Conklin. The day is passed, she says, when adults forbid themselves "truth" for the sake of a disease tinctured morality.

Doctors Give Lectures.

There can be no guess work in the activities of the public health department. Only doctors are invited to present lectures at the monthly state health meetings which are usually attended by as many as 500 women. Subjects cover everything from the preparation of antitoxin to the baking of bread. A feeding experiment with white rats, actually carried on in the classroom, demonstrates the food value of milk as compared with coffee and candy. Scenes are shown at meetings of the diagnostic laboratory of the Illinois State department of public health.

Social hygiene pamphlets circulated through the clubs cover such topics as "Dividends from Venereal Disease Control" and "The Need for Sex Education." Instructions are given for sterilizing water, cisterns and springs. Explanations are made of the Illinois public sewer systems and sewage plants.

Public Health Work Outlined.

The outline for public health work prepared by Dr. Clara G. Gottschalk, 5217 Magnolia avenue, asks that each health chairman make a survey of her district to learn of every agency having any sort of health activity. Members visit infant welfare stations and coöperate with the nurses in providing cod liver oil and medicinal supplies. They visit day nurseries, child guidance centers, municipal tuberculosis sanitorium dispensaries, hospital clinics, visiting nurse associations, and juvenile courts.

Each club has its yearly health lecture and district health day. Throughout the year the members contribute to the "General Federation Cancer Control fund." This represents individual ten cent contributions from club women and it is used by the state federation for its cancer education projects.

PARK RIDGE M. E. MEN TO TRADE FISHING STORIES

A "Fishermen's Awakening" meeting will be held by the men's club of the First Methodist church of Park Ridge next Wednesday evening. Fishing films will be shown by Walter A. Stickler, proprietor of Camp Idlewild, Itasca county, Minn., and will picture Bob Becker of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and Walter Grove, casting expert of the Shannon Spinner company. Silver loving cups will be awarded to the man and woman telling the best fish stories. The program will begin with a dinner.

Lend Aid to Junior Clubs' Fine Arts Festival

A member of the Junior auxiliary of the Irving Park Catholic Woman's club, Miss Ruth Smutny, 4434 North Kostner avenue, is interested in the music masters. She will assist in the interpretation of the harmony that is Bach and Beethoven. Miss Beatrice Dyer is district music chairman and will present one part of the program at the Junior meeting.
[Gibson Studios.]

Harmony will hold court in three different spheres at the fine arts festival of all the junior auxiliaries of the 7th district of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs at 8 o'clock tomorrow night in the Independence Park bungalow, 3900 North Hamlin avenue. Harmony in poetry, color, and music will be keyed to springtime by the past presidents and district chairmen who will be in charge. Miss Nedra Kidder, 6882 Overhill avenue, literature chairman (above), will tell of bards and ballads as her part in the festival. Miss Kidder is also president of the Edison Park Young Woman's club.

Miss Wilma Gene Douglas, 4326 North Kilbourn avenue, who is a member of the Mayfair Woman's club and is interested in the harmony of fashions. Tomorrow night she will assist in the fashion revue of the arts festival of which Miss Harriet Anderson is chairman. Fashion enters the art field this spring with high color notes and a tempo that suggests life and the pursuit of happiness. Miss Douglas will assist the models.

SEVEN TEACHERS IN HIGH SCHOOLS GIVEN TRANSFERS

Add Principal's Aid to Washburne Staf.

Seven northwest side high school teachers were ordered transferred to new assignments on the north, northwest, and south sides last week by the board of education. The teachers, with their old and new schools, are: Louise French, Kelvyn Park to Senn; Benjamin Majors, Steinmetz to Calumet; Adelaide Pearce, Foreman to Schurz; Thomas Perry, Foreman to Schurz; Erma Quirk, Steinmetz to Schurz, and Helen Unseth, Von Steuben to Amundsen.

Miss Mae K. Callaham, Steinmetz High school teacher, was named assistant principal at the Washburne Trade school. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, told the school board it was desirable to add a woman teacher to the Washburne school staf to perfect the instruction of girls attending the school.

Other Transfers Made.

North and northwest side elementary school teachers transferred were: Grace Clark, Beidler to Crerar; Winifred Erickson, Irving to Van Vlissingen; Catherin Johnson, Haugan to Phil Sheridan; Florence Kletzing, Murphy to Kilmer; Muriel LaChapelle, McPherson to Henry; Hilda McConnell, Henry to Swift; Florence Samuelson, Irving to Nettelhorst, and Evangeline Millen, Burbank to Byford.

Mrs. Ethel Harrington, principal of Ogden and J. A. Sexton elementary schools, was named principal of the Marquette elementary school to replace William Hedges, retired. Mrs. Harrington will assume her new position May 3.

Three Teachers Resign.

The board accepted the resignations of Margaret Gallagher, Arnold elementary school; Oscar Graham, Lane Technical High school, and Alwiene Lehmann, Von Humboldt elementary school.

Maretta Eastman, Belding; Olive MacBride, Linne, and Anna McLaughlin, La Salle elementary schools, were ordered retired in May under the 65 year compulsory retirement law.

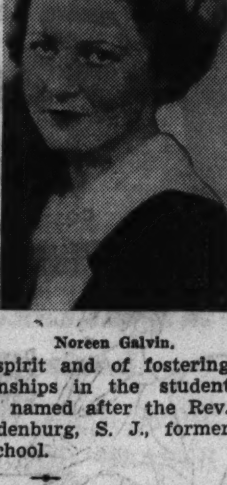
Sodality to Dance.

The Children of Mary sodality of Our Lady of Grace church, 2455 North Hamlin avenue, will hold a spring dance Friday night in the Gold room of the Congress hotel. A card game will open at 8 o'clock, followed by a 9 o'clock dance.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

FRANCIS M. McCARTHY, 2541 Logan boulevard, recently elected president of the Frederic Seidenburg guild of Loyola university, is the first man to be elected to the office since the founding of the guild in 1932. Miss Noreen Galvin, 5158 Le Moyne avenue, was named a member of the governing board. The Frederic Seidenburg guild was founded by students of the Loyola university school of social work as a means of developing a professional spirit and of fostering social relationships in the student body. It was named after the Rev. Frederic Seidenburg, S. J., former dean of the school.



Noreen Galvin.

Dr. and Mrs. Harry M. Harnick announce the bar mitzvah of their son, Sheldon Mayer, will take place next Saturday morning at Beth Hillel synagogue, 4710 Irving Park boulevard. The Harnicks will be at home, 4130 North Lawler avenue, Saturday afternoon and evening.

Our Town boasts achievement by a pair of its collegiate swimmers, Robert Freeberg of Des Plaines, who was instrumental in organizing the University of Kentucky swimming team in 1934, which was state champion in 1936, and George Stembridge of Park Ridge, who was recently awarded his second varsity swimming letter at Northwestern university. Stembridge was on the championship water polo team last year, and competes in the 100 yard free style and relay events. Freeberg, back stroke star of the Kentucky team, is in the college of education majoring in commerce, while Stembridge is enrolled in the Northwestern college of commerce. Freeberg is treasurer of the Kentucky chapter of Delta Tau Delta social fraternity.

FRANKLIN R. LINDQUIST, English instructor at Maine Township High school, has been engaged to conduct a course in Boy Scouting at Illinois State Normal university this summer. In the Evanston Scout council Mr. Lindquist has served as a scoutmaster for eight years. He is now serving as field scout commissioner. Mr. Lindquist received his B. A. and M. A. degrees from Northwestern university. He was president of Phi Delta Kappa, professional educational fraternity, and has taught English at Maine since 1930.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Meyer, 2723 West North avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Fay Sharon, to Barney L. Sterling of 4031 North Kenmore avenue. The wedding will take place in the late fall.

OELEN KIEST, one of the highest ranking scholars of the North Park college junior class, was recently rewarded for her scholastic achievements by being selected to represent the North Park chapter of Phi Theta Kappa at the annual convention in Little Rock, Ark. Miss Kiest is secretary of the North Park chapter of Phi Theta Kappa, which is an honorary scholastic fraternity.

Three Our Towners are members of committees arranging the fourth annual business exposition of the Rotary Club of Chicago, which will be held from Tuesday through Friday this week at the Hotel Sherman. They are Max H. Hurd, Barrington Court farms, Barrington; Edward C. Poehler, 4140 Le Claire avenue, and Paul H. Metzger, 6024 Navarre avenue.

MRS. S. W. WEISCHEL, 232 Liberty street, Elgin, who is concluding her second winter in Porto Rico, will return to her home in Elgin soon, stopping en route to visit a niece, Miss Jessie Deck, in Philadelphia, and a nephew and niece, Carl Deck and Mrs. William Wolle, in Allentown, Pa. Mrs. Weischel has been the guest in San Juan of her daughter, Mrs. Caesar Rondinelli.

Miss Jo Ann Horack, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred P. Horack of 922 Rose avenue, Des Plaines, recently became the bride of Edwin Moser, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Moser of 1467 Oakton street, Des Plaines. After their honeymoon the newlyweds will make their home at 5549 Farragut avenue.

U. S. ORCHESTRA LISTS EIGHT FROM NORTHWEST SIDE

The roster of the National Youth orchestra, which is giving concerts under the auspices of the Federal Music project, contains the names of eight young northwest side musicians.

They are Joseph Battaglia, 4831 Cortez street; Orlando Nardulli, 4900 Kammerling avenue; Jack Gertz, 4706 Bernard street; Arthur Millman, 3546 Lincoln avenue; Thomas Bejrowski, 3047 North Spaulding avenue; Bernard Puck, 3045 Sunnyside avenue; Harold Dessent, 3835 North Sawyer avenue, and Seymour Ochsenhorn, 4825 North Albany avenue.

The group was organized a year ago by Herbert Pyne. He has given concerts in Arabia, Java, Japan, China, and other eastern countries.

JOB'S DAUGHTERS TO GIVE COMEDY IN PARK RIDGE

Park Ridge Bethel 23, Order of Jobs' Daughters, will present a three act comedy, "The Perils of Pearl Ella," at 8 o'clock next Thursday evening in the Park Ridge Masonic temple, 115 Northwest highway, Park Ridge. The cast, under the direction of Vernon Watts of Edison Park, consists of Geraldine Meyers, Audrey Pfeifer, June Matthiesen, Marjorie Siegwart, Edith Kautz, Marjory Henderson, Virginia Schuelke, Muriel Starke, Ruth Hoffman, Jane Smith, Lucille Edgren, and Helen Andrews. Mrs. Helen Starke, musical director of the Bethel, has been assisting in the production.

NORWEGIAN GLEE CLUB TO GIVE 48TH ANNUAL CONCERT THIS EVENING

The Norwegian Glee club, comprising sixty voices under the direction of Knut Hansen, will present its forty-eighth annual concert this evening in the Humboldt Park Commandery temple, 2410 North Kedzie avenue. The chorus will be assisted by the Bjornstierne Bjornson orchestra, conducted by Siegvart Hoffland. Henry Andersen, 72 year old bass soloist, will sing the solo to Oscar Borg's cantata, "Leif Erikson," and Alf Haugan will sing the robust solo introduction to Frieberg's "Vikingarne." The Glee club's officers are Berger Sande, president; Ole S. Olsen, vice president; Magnus Petersen, treasurer; Finn Hammer, recording secretary; Charles Svensen, financial secretary, and Erling Johnson, corresponding secretary.

Madelles Club to Present Two Act Play on May 9

A two act play, "Minnie Breezer," will be presented by the Madelles club at the Fullerton temple, 3135 West Fullerton avenue, on Sunday, May 9. Members of the cast, under the direction of Dr. Sylvia Molay Walder, are Miriam Kaplan, Lillian Goldstein, Joe Glasberg, Bessie Ronen, Ben Rosofsky, Ethel Stern, and Adele Glasberg. Officers of the club are Miss Ronen, president; Dorothy Miller, vice president; Tillie Minsky, secretary, and Miss Glasberg, treasurer.

Repayments Likely Later in Year.

BY EDWARD WILSON.

Accumulation of funds to clear Reconstruction Finance corporation loans and provide for future repayments to depositors, wherever possible, is the program cut out this year for north and northwest side closed state banks, according to State Auditor Edward J. Barrett's report for the first quarter of this year.

Edward J. Barrett.

The state auditor's report covers 142 closed Cook county state banks. Out of 40 banks included in the first release of the report, 11 are located on the north and northwest sides. The Arlington Heights State bank and the Armitage State bank or expected to make additional repayments to depositors in the near future according to C. H. Albers, general receiver of the banks.

Individual reports of the 11 banks, together with best available estimates of the ultimate liquidation follows. Unless otherwise specified all figures given refer to the full period of receivership:

Arlington Heights State bank—Total receipts, $242,889 with $5,047 collected last quarter; paid on prior claims, $118,055; paid depositors, $51,542 or 15 per cent. Costs: receivers, $6,547; legal, $5,702; clerical, $23,315; interest, $8,196; advanced to protect assets, $25,327 with $20,167 refunded. Cash, $4,204. Liquidation has been slow but pending commitments for real estate, if completed, will make an early 5 per cent repayment possible. Depositors may eventually receive 15 per cent more.

Armitage State bank—Total receipts, $219,775; paid prior claims, $100,454; paid on $28,134 RFC loan, $3,738; paid depositors, $17,154, or 5 per cent. Costs: receiver, $4,067; legal, $14,538; clerical, $30,256; interest, $1,444; advanced to protect assets, $37.645 with $27,081 refunded. Cash, $10.490. About $8,500 is available for repayments and with funds expected from stockholders' liability the receiver hopes to make an early 5 per cent repayment. Such repayment would be subject to RFC approval because of $24,000 still due the government group on a previous loan.

Belmont-Sheffield Trust and Savings bank—Total receipts, $344,453; paid prior claims, $35,257; paid $83,498 RFC loan in full; paid depositors, $163,859 or 100 per cent. Costs: receivers, $320; legal, $7,231; clerical, $25,824; interest, $3,972; advanced to protect assets, $20,112 with the same amount listed as a refund. Cash, $4,380. The bank was removed from receivership some time ago under a plan satisfactory to creditors and depositors.

Builders and Merchants Bank and Trust company—Total receipts, $2,942,119; paid prior claims, $958,651; paid depositors, $1,148,888 or 40 per cent. Costs: receivers, $34,169; legal, $125,033; clerical, $149,660; interest, $1,871; advanced to protect assets, $445,618, with $426,930 refunded. Cash, $78,229. With $150,000 necessary for another 5 per cent repayment such a disbursement is not expected before the end of the year. Ten to 15 per cent additional may eventually be repaid depositors.

Chicago Bank of Commerce—Total receipts, $3,999,651 with $325,000 collected last quarter; paid prior claims, $769,656; paid depositors, $1,078,700 or 25 per cent. Costs: Receivers, $22,119; legal, $306,457; clerical, $303,442; interest, $5,739; advanced to protect assets, $1,197,405, with $850,448 refunded. Liquidation is rapid and is expected to continue at a good pace, but with funds being reserved for preferred and trust claims it is difficult to estimate the ultimate return to depositors. Some further repayment is expected to be made this year if liquidation continues at its present rate.

Citizens State Bank of Chicago—Total receipts, $2,312,738; paid prior claims, $1,222,002; no repayments to depositors. Costs: receivers, $10,490; legal, $46,250; clerical, $107,330; interest, $146,257; advanced to protect assets, $703,147, with $416,334 refunded. Cash, $77,262. This bank is involved in unadjudicated preferred and trust claims and owes approximately $455,000 on bills secured by the pledge of the bank's assets. Eventual repayment to depositors is still estimated to be small.

Citizens State Bank of Glencoe—Total receipts, $65,323; paid prior claims, $11,818; paid depositors, $34,248, or 46 per cent. Costs: receivers, $1,636; legal, $5,428; clerical, $9,939; interest, $11.45; advanced to protect assets, $1,528, with $1,423 refunded. Cash, $725. This bank has made four repayments and may eventually repay 10 per cent more. Nothing expected in the immediate future.

City State Bank of Chicago—Total receipts, $2,150,819, with $172,988 col-

STENSON CHOSEN SCOUTMASTER OF JAMBOREE TROOP

Will Head Northwest Suburban Group.

Scoutmaster of Troop 15 of Niles Center Boy Scouts for more than seven years, S. A. Stenson has been chosen as the scoutmaster of the Northwset Suburban council Jamboree troop which will attend the National Jamboree in Washington this summer. Harland Roden, Field Scout commissioner of Des Plaines, will serve as assistant scoutmaster in charge of activities and programs. Mr. Roden, an Eagle Scout, will handle the troop's participation which includes campfires, sight seeing trips, and special excursions, the big arena show, and the camp theater. He attended the 1929 World Scout Jamboree in England.

In addition to the leaders directly responsible for the troop, Field Scout Commissioner E. J. Anderson of Des Plaines will attend the jamboree with a group of Scouts who will attend the World Jamboree to be held in Holland in August. Scout executive Donald E. Kyger will serve as a member of the sectional staf, of which this council's troop will be a part.

First to Register.

Star Scout Jack Ryan is the first scout in the Northwest Suburban Council to register for the National Jamboree as he has been selected by troop 24 to represent it at the national encampment to be held in Washington.

A court of honor will be held at the Des Plaines Junior High school at 8 o'clock next Wednesday evening. Opening and closing ceremonies will be in charge of troop 23 of Mount Prospect, and will include selections by the Scout-Cub Drum and Bugle corps of troop 23 and pack 223. In addition to the presentation of awards, moving pictures will be shown by Field Commissioner Anderson of the World Jamboree and of his recent trip to Washington, D. C. Members of the court of honor committee of the central district are Charles L. Walp, chairman; Harry Dooley, chairman of the board of review; W. L. Fabian, chairman of the central district, all of Des Plaines; and L. A. Moodie of Arlington Heights, vice chairman of the district, and S. H. Rosenthal of Des Plaines, district commissioner.

Will Conduct Training Course.

In coöperation with the North Shore area council and the Evanston council, the Northwest Suburban council will conduct a training course for scout leaders the week-end of May 8 and 9, at Camp Evanbosco, Evanston's week-end camp at Deer Grove forest preserve. Three courses will be offered: the elements of scout leadership, the principles of scout leadership, and a specialization course in "camporee" technique. The training course will include demonstrations in the use of camp equipment, in camp and hike activities, and will provide opportunity for discussion. The leadership training committee of the Northwest Suburban council includes Earle R. Henderson, Niles Center, chairman; Lee R. Foster of Des Plaines, and J. W. Langdale of Barrington.

At the last court of honor conducted by the eastern district of the Northwest Suburban council at the First Methodist church of Park Ridge, 30 scouts and leaders received advancement. The opening and closing ceremonies were conducted by scouts of troop 1 of the Methodist church under the leadership of Scoutmaster Merritt Kreuzinger. The awards were presented by the following members of the court of honor committee: Charles Passmore, C. V. Baker, and Frank Potter.

MAINE HIGH BOY FINISHES THIRD IN U. OF C. TEST

Donald Fabian Wins Full Scholarship.

Donald Fabian.

Winning one of ten full $300 scholarships to the University of Chicago against a field of 486 contestants of high scholastic ranking, Donald Fabian, senior at Maine Township High school, had the third best individual score following his examination in Latin, Spanish, and English in the University of Chicago's twenty-fifth annual scholarship examination held recently.

Fabian, son of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Fabian, 906 Greenview avenue, Des Plaines, has been among the leaders in every honor roll released at Maine since his entry. He was recently inducted into the new Honor society at Maine. At present serving as editor in chief of the year book, The Lens, Fabian last year won the D. A. R. award for being the best student of American history at the high school. For the last two years he has written a weekly article on world events, "Behind the Headlines," for a town paper.

Half scholarships were awarded to four northwest side students. They are Norman Greenman, 3518 Palmer street, and Alex Morin, 1626 Humboldt boulevard, both seniors at Kelvyn Park High school, and Joshua Holland, 5001 North Central Park avenue, and Walter Rockler, 4951 North Albany avenue, both of Von Steuben High school.

St. Angela Isabellans.

St. Angela circle, No. 502, of the Daughters of Isabella will have a social meeting tomorrow evening at the La Follette park fieldhouse, 1333 North Laramie avenue. Mrs. Catherine Mashell will be hostess.

WIN 'STAR STUDENT' HONORS

C. DONALD PETERSON.

MISS ROBERTA RACINE.

[Sallman Studio Photos.]

Miss Roberta Racine and C. Donald Peterson of North Park college were victors in the recent "Star Student" contest sponsored by the North Park College News. Mr. Peterson won the state oratorical contest in 1935 and is a member of the debate team at North Park. He is president of the student council, a member of the Men's Glee club and of the Festival chorus, and was recently elected to Phi Theta Kappa fraternity. Miss Racine, elected most popular North Park girl, is interested in dramatics, teaching the subject in private classes and in Y. W. C. A. clubs. She entered North Park in 1936, having previously attended Northwestern. Miss Racine maintains better than a "B" average in studies, and is secretary-treasurer of the Journalism club of the college.

TRIP TO CAPITAL TO REWARD BEST PATROL YOUTHS

Sixty-six schoolboy safety patrol members in the territory sponsored by the Chicago Motor club, northern Illinois and Indiana, will be candidates for a free trip to the nation's capital during the national conference of patrol boys on May 22. The outstanding members of the northwest side's safety patrols will be selected by school authorities aided by the Northwest Area council of the motor club. Members of the area council committee who will aid in the selection of candidates are George J. Eckhoff, Norwood Park Chamber of Commerce; John H. Kerr, Norwood Park Citizens association; A. F. Jensen, Triangle Lions club, and Bernard S. Molay, Portage Park Chamber of Commerce.

ZARIA TO GIVE ANNUAL PROGRAM SUNDAY EVENING

The Russian-American club, "Zaria," will hold its annual meeting for the presentation of music, art, drama, and dance at 8 o'clock next Sunday evening in the Louis XVI. room of the Hotel Sherman. The production, "Money Isn't All," will be presented and staged by the playwright, Elizabeth Natansen.

Others on the program will include Miss Lillian Pado, soprano, who will sing, accompanied by Sylvio Insani; Olga Valentine and Robert Baker, opera ballet dancers, and Miss Lea Herbert, impersonator.

The Zaria club is composed of 300 Russian-Americans who organized members for musical, cultural, and social projects. The proceeds of the meeting will be given to charitable institutions.

MRS. C. A. CLAUSS RE-ELECTED P.-T. DISTRICT LEADER

Four Groups Win Honors for Press Books.

The director of district 23 of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, Mrs. Charles A. Clauss, 2517 North Central Park avenue, was reëlected for another term at the 38th annual convention of the congress at Bloomington. Last year through Mrs. Clauss' work the district obtained eight new units which meant an addition of 2,867 members.

The new units include the King, Lloyd, McCormick, Penn, Lowell, Gary, Lafayette and Montefiore Special school. The total membership of district 23 which includes the high school, the midwest and the west side councils is 13,452 persons.

Excellent ratings were awarded at the convention to the following northwest side groups for their publicity books: district 23, the midwest council, the Laughlin Falconer and the Linne grammar school units.

The Ebinger P.-T. A. is sponsoring the presentation, "Out of the Woods," by the Edison Park Drama club. The comedy will be given Friday evening, May 7, at the Ebinger school. Ed Gavin is the author and director of the play. The cast includes Jack Gibson, Bob Hagerup, Miss Elizabeth Sweazey, Miss Ariel Greener, Charles Emrick, Miss Christabel Ferren, Mrs. O. T. Riecke, Miss Jean Bryson, John Rein, David Chenault, Jim Somerville, and David Allen.

A minstrel show will be presented by the Laughlin Falconer P.-T. A. at 8 o'clock, Friday evening, May 7, in the school assembly room. The cast will include 46 professional singers and dancers. Proceeds will be used for the purchase of a new stage curtain for the school.

The Hitch P.-T. A. will tour the County hospital tomorrow. Mrs. Fred J. Lange, chairman, asks members to meet at 1 o'clock at Harrison and Wood streets. Another tour will be held at 10:30 o'clock, Thursday morning when the group will visit a fur company at 36 South State street.

Northwest council is introducing a national parent-teacher study course in order to train leaders for the organization. The class will be directed by Mrs. A. K. Thompson, president, and will begin at 9:45 a'clock, Monday, May 3, at the Belding school, 4257 North Tripp avenue. This will be the first of five meetings. Local units are asked to enroll with Mrs. W. R. Walker.

A new P.-T. A. unit was established at the Lowell school by Miss Catherine A. Ryan, principal, and Mrs. Clauss, district 23 director. The next meeting will be held at 1 o'clock, Monday, May 10, in the school assembly hall. The following officers were elected: Mrs. Frances Petersen, president; Mrs. Ellen Carlson, vice president; Mrs. Mildred Goldberg, secretary, and Mrs. Ethyl Cohn, treasurer.

An executive board meeting of the Onahan P.-T. A. will be held at 1 o'clock in the school assembly hall. Mrs. Maxwell Beth, chairman of the homemaking department, was awarded a blue ribbon for her department's exhibit at the recent spring conference of the council.

PLAYERS

MISS ELIZABETH SWEAZEY.

MISS CHRISTABEL FERREN.

MISS JEAN BRYSON.

"Out of the Woods," a mystery comedy in three acts involving two argumentative college professors, will be presented Friday evening, May 7, by the Edison Park Drama club at the Ebinger school, 7350 Pratt avenue. In the leading feminine rôles will be Miss Elizabeth Sweazey, 6826 Olcott avenue; Miss Christobel Ferren, 6803 Oriole avenue, and Miss Jean Bryson, 6855 Ottawa avenue. Miss Bryson will play the part of a shy ingenue and the play cast lineup lists the rôle of Miss Ferren as "a haughty dame of contrary moods." The Ebinger P.T. A. is sponsoring the presentation.

Kelvyn Park Eastern Stars to Present 3 Act Comedy

The Kelvyn Park chapter of the Order of Eastern Star will present a three act comedy "Clubbing a Husband" at 8:15 o'clock Friday evening in the auditorium of the La Follette park fieldhouse, 1333 North Laramie avenue. Mrs. Sarah Catlin Weeg is the director. The cast includes Mrs. Myrtle Zahn, Mrs. Myrtle Linton, Miss Betty Tieken, Mrs. Eleanore Monkman, Mrs. Violet Jantsch, Mrs. Loretta Rockwood, Mrs. Alma Klein, Mrs. Elsie Enrath, Mrs. Lillian Geisthart, Mrs. Irene Roer, Mrs. Betty Strandberg, and Mrs. Judith Johnson.

CLOSED BANKS SEEK TO CLEAR FEDERAL LOANS

lected last quarter. Paid prior claims, $729,005; paid depositors, $915,057 or 32 per cent. Costs: receivers, $60,000; legal, $71,858; clerical, $87,289; interest, $4,184; advanced to protect assets, $257,100, with $236,674 refunded. Cash, $26,326. An examination of the remaining assets here indicates little more will be repaid depositors. There are unpaid expenses totaling approximately $45,000 covering the last few years.

Columbia State Savings bank—Total receipts, $931,427; paid prior claims, $124,211; paid on $35,253 RFC loan, $22,916; paid depositors, $466,013 or 37½ per cent. Costs: receivers, $16,227; legal, $29,987; clerical, $72,623; interest, $922; advanced to protect assets $158,928, with $138,547 refunded. Cash, $39,600. Recent disbursements in this bank have consisted mainly of advancements to protect the bank's assets. The bank may eventually repay a total of from 50 to 55 per cent.

Cosmopolitan State bank—Total receipts, $3,388,646; paid prior claims, $1,406,872; paid on $1,019,269 RFC loan, $133,002; paid depositors, $527,031 or 40 per cent. Costs: receivers, $1,196; legal, $56,559; clerical, $105,315; interest, $154,781; advanced to protect assets, $976,554, with $811,136 refunded. Cash, $27,335. Most depositors of this bank have been paid in full and the bank is now indebted to the RFC for $885,000 which must be repaid before further consideration can be given holders of assigned accounts.

Cragin State bank—Total receipts, $422,291; paid prior claims, $152,107; paid depositors, $98,535 or 22½ per cent. Costs: receivers, $23,201; legal, $31,302; clerical, $42,892; interest, $4,915; advanced to protect assets, $54,858, with $53,650 refunded. Cash, $14,482. Indications are depositors may eventually receive a total of from 35 to 40 per cent. Liquidation expenses during the last quarter have been 5 per cent of the total receipts.

Tabor Church Men's Club Will Give Benefit Show

The Men's club of the Tabor Evangelical church will sponsor a radio review in the church auditorium, Bellen Plaine and LeClaire avenues, at 8:15 o'clock Thursday evening. The performance will benefit the Bensenville Orphan and Old People's home. C. H. Duckgeischel is president of the Men's club, and Frederick W. Schroeder pastor of the church.

Miss Mary Katherine Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Wright, 6907 Owen avenue, is a member of the publicity committee for the annual honor tuition scholarship card party and fashion show which will be held at St. Mary-of-the-Woods college, Terre Haute, Ind., Thursday. Miss Wright, a freshman, is treasurer of the Catholic Student Mission crusade, a member of De Sales Press club, the Spanish club, Athletic association and the Sodality of Our Lady. She also played a prominent part in the comedy, "If I Were a Marchioness," which was given recently by the Spanish department of the college.

CHICAGOANS LEAD POLISH-AMERICAN POET ANTHOLOGY

Northwest Siders Find Place in Book.

There are more poets from Chicago represented in the Anthology of Polish-American poetry recently published by the Polish Arts club than from any other city in the country according to the list of the 53 authors named in the book. At a meeting of the northwest side section of the club held last week the authors were introduced to the members and autographed copies of the book.

The anthology is edited by Dr. Tadeusz Mitana, lecturer of Polish language and literature of Northwestern university. It is the first of its type to be published in the United States and contains Polish-American poetry of the last two decades. Its aim is to present the best poetry in both languages so as to emphasize the contribution of the Polish people to the cultural life of America.

The book consisting of 240 pages cotains two prefaces by Dr. Mitana, one in Polish and one in English. The following northwest side authors are included in the anthology: P. T. Bona, Jadwiga Karlowicz, Bronislawa Wolnik, Irene Stopa, Jadwiga Baran, Wanda Bednarska, Barbara Kostrzewska, Aniela Mikulowana, Theodore Pawelski, Walery Fronczak, Mieczyslaw Haiman, Bronislaw Mroz, M. A. Niedzwiecki, Jan F. Nissen-Nizinski, Jan Pukanty, Jan Sass, Z. L. Snopczynski, Henry Setmeyer, Witold Trawinski, Czeslaw Warchalowski, and Joseph Wiewiora.

The music section of the Polish arts club will sponsor a piano recital for Miss Alice Baran, a club member, on Sunday afternoon, May 23 at the Polish Women's Alliance hall.

Sanatorium League Will Hold Luncheon Saturday

As part of the membership drive of the Save a Life League of the Los Angeles Sanatorium, whose midwest office is in Chicago, a special luncheon will be served to members at 1 o'clock next Saturday afternoon in the River park fieldhouse, Francisco and Foster avenues.

CHICAGO POLISH SOCIETY TO HAVE 25TH YEAR FETE

Three Day Program to Open Saturday.

The Chicago society of the Polish National Alliance will celebrate its 25th anniversary with a three day program of activities beginning Saturday at the Congress hotel. Coöperating with the society, which represents Chicago business and professional men of Polish extraction, will be the Chicago Society auxiliary, the Polish Physicians and Dentists association, the Polish Lawyers association, and the Polish Arts club.

The program will begin Saturday with a luncheon for women visitors and an afternoon men's conference which will include out of town representatives. Guests are expected from New York, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, South Bend, Grand Rapids, Milwaukee, and St. Louis. Saturday evening an old fashioned Polish "Biba" will be held at the Polish Women's alliance hall, 1309 North Ashland avenue.

Next Sunday activities will shift to Humboldt park, where all the Chicago Polish societies will participate in ceremonies at the Kosciuszko monument at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. At 6:30 o'clock next Sunday evening the anniversary dinner will be held at the Congress hotel. After the dinner there will be silver anniversary ceremonies, entertainment, and dancing.

Monday, May 3, the program will include sightseeing trips to various industrial plants, the parks, and boulevards of Chicago and the Polish sections of the city. There will be a luncheon at noon and a farewell dinner in the evening.

F. Phil Garbark is chairman of the anniversary committee and Marion G. Kudlick is vice chairman. Others on the committee are August J. Kowalski, president of the Chicago society; Mrs. Frank Gordon, president of the Chicago Society auxiliary; Dr. S. S. Gorny, president of the Polish Physicians and Dentists association; Martin Gorski, president of the Polish Lawyers association, and Myron Steczynski, chairman of the Polish Arts club.

The Chicago Society of the Polish National alliance carries on a program of social and civic functions designed to develop its people politically, professionally, and in business. It also helps support the Polish Welfare association and other charitable groups.

PRE-CORONATION FEATURES FILL THE AIR LANES

But the Real Deluge Will Come on May 12.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The coronation still is several weeks away—and yet we are getting a half dozen broadcasts or so about this high flown affair every day. And that is only the beginning. NBC has scheduled 60 pickups from London between now and the royal assumption. And Mutual and Columbia won't be far behind.

The American networks will air everything that the British Broadcasting company serves up and do lots of special things of their own. Network representatives are now leaving for Britain in droves. Rudy Vallee and Lowell Thomas are among the commercial broadcasters who are moving their programs right to the scene for a fortnight.

On top of that every commentator in the country is busy these days telling you about every possible angle of the coronation—from the time of Beowulf on down. And if there is one American listner by May 12 who can't give a complete description of the crown jewels and execute a courtly curtsy it will be nobody's fault but his own.

Chicago's Coronation Program.

Even Chicago is originating special coronation broadcasts. The NBC Symphonic hour for Friday, May 7, is to be given over to coronation music including that from "Boris Godounoff," Carleton Smith and Roy Shield are mapping the details.

[Aside to Carleton Smith: Why not have Baritone Edward Davies, who was born in Wales, sing the Welsh anthem, "God Save the Prince of Wales?"]

It's funny how the coronation has got under the skin of American broadcasters. After all, a Presidential inauguration is good for only a few preliminaries and full attention for only a few hours even on the very day. But on coronation day American broadcasters will chase out their engineers to transmitters at 4 a. m. [daylight time] and from then on it will be "Here Come the British" until far into the night.

Expect Biggest Audience.

It seems likely that the coronation programs will have an even bigger audience than Edward's swan song broadcast for which was claimed the greatest audience to date. And that, after all, ran only six minutes. The British are already claiming a possible 500,000,000, that's a half billion listeners, for the affair.

The terrific interest may owe in part to the fact that this will be the first coronation put on the air. Not only the oath but the entire ceremonial dialogue between the king-emperor and the archbishop of Canterbury are to be aired by radio. It runs about like this:

"Will you solemnly promise and swear to govern the people of this United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the dominions thereto belonging according to the statues in parliament agreed on and the respective laws and customs of the same?"

To this question the new king will answer simply: "I solemnly promise so to do."

Ancient Ritual Used.

Then the prelate will continue in the archaic language of the ancient ritual: "Will you to the utmost of your power cause law and justice, in mercy, to be executed in all your judgments?"

"I will," the king will reply.

"Will you," the archbishop will proceed, "to the utmost of your power maintain the laws of God, the true profession of the gospel, and the Protestant Reformed religion established by law? And will you maintain and preserve inviolably the settlement of the church of England and the doctrine, worship, discipline, and government thereof, as by law established in England? And will you preserve unto the bishops and clergy of England and to the churches therein all such rights and privileges as by law do or shall appertain to them, or any of them."

"All this," the king will say, "I promise to do."

And Then the Oath Taking.

But this dialog will have been but the preface to the actual oath taking by which the king will, by law and right, possess his crown and throne. At this moment George VI. will lay his hand on the holy gospels. And he will say:

"The things which I have herebefore promised I will perform and keep, so help me God."

Then he will kiss the Bible. He will be king.

A notion has somehow got around that the king has never spoken on the air. He hasn't as king, but has been broadcasting since 1924. Those who have heard him say that he does not show any impediment in his speech—that he speaks deliberately and with clear enunciation in the usual British style.

Romance Melodies.

Songs of romance will be offered by Gale Page, contralto; Charles Sears, tenor, and an orchestra under Roy Shield's direction, at 3 p. m. today over WMAQ and the NBC-Red network. Gale will sing "September in the Rain," "That Foolish Feeling," and "Hands Across the Table."

Pioneering Pickards on W-G-N

Former Court Clown on 'We, the People' Today

Ed Jerome, dramatic actor and onetime court clown for the former King Alfonso of Spain, Chester R. Bell, a victim of agoraphobia, which is a fear of open places; Prof. Pope R. Hill of the University of Georgia, a scientific penny flipper, and J. P. Witherspoon of Chicago, who took an airplane trip to a spot he did not want to visit, will be among Phillips Lord's guests on the We, the People program at 4 p. m. today over WENR and the NBC-Blue network.

California Concert on WENR-NBC at 9 Tonight

An orchestra under Ernest Gill's direction, Sarah Kreindler, violinist; John Teel, lyric baritone, and Zarova, Russian soprano, will be heard during the California concert at 9 tonight, over WENR and NBC. Orchestral numbers will include Saint-Saens' "Marche Militaire," Schubert's "Moment Musicale," and "Jota," by Grandados. Zarova will sing Rubinstein's "Romance," and Miss Kreidler will offer a Gill arrangement of Spanish dance numbers.

OLIVET BAPTIST CHOIR TO SING ON WEDNESDAY

Choral Group Scheduled on Fireside Theater.

One of Chicago's best known choral groups, Olivet Baptist church choir, will be presented on the Fireside theater broadcast from W-G-N's main studio at 9:30 p. m. Wednesday. Under the direction of William Henry Smith, the group of 100 voices will present a program of spirituals. Co-featured with the choir will be the Warmelin clarinet group, a quartet of famous instrumentalists, and Adrian and his orchestra.

Esther Tarler, radio mimic who got her start on Quin Ryan's amateur show over W-G-N, will be a guest on Harold Stokes' "Melodies from the Skies" at 9 o'clock tonight. Miss Tarler will do impersonations of outstanding radio and screen personalities. Arthur Wright, tenor; Edna O'Dell, songstress; Joe Johnson, swing violinist; the Three Graces, the Swing Sextet, and the Four Shades of Blue also will be featured with the dance orchestra.

Other public broadcasts this week:

6:30 tonight—The final Evensong concert of the season with the St. Lawrence Catholic church choir.

9:45 p. m. Monday—The Pageant of Melody, with the concert orchestra, directed by Henry Weber, Kathryn Witwer, soprano; William Miller, tenor, and Theo Yeschke, flutist.

9:30 p. m. Tuesday—The Northerners octet and string orchestra, with Berenice Rickman, lyric soprano, as guest soloist.

9:30 p. m. Friday—Charles P. Hughes will present "Behind the Camera Lines," starring Bret Morrison and June Meredith in "You Are Dear to My Heart," a radio play by Laura Standish.

Block and Sully to Be Guests of Benny Today

Jack Benny and Mary Livingstone will welcome two old friends, Jesse Block and Eve Scully, popular comedy team of radio, stage and screen, on their broadcast over WMAQ-NBC at 6 p. m. today.

U. S. WATCHWORD TRACED TO ALLEN AT TICONDEROGA

Fortress Taken at Dawn Without a Shot.

[This is the third story in a series of dramatic episodes in the lives of American military and naval heroes. Another article will appear next Sunday.]

A small farmhouse squatted forlornly on the rolling countryside of Connecticut, a short distance from Litchfield. The naked trees shivered against the house in the January wind. Inside the house Mary Allen forgot pain in her exhaustion and slept. She had just borne her first son as the light of that day in 1737 died from her window. They would name him Ethan Allen after his paternal great-grandfather. This was his beginning.

Past the middle of the 19th century the legislature of Vermont erected a monument over a grave at Burlington. A Tuscan column of granite with four plates of marble at its base was unveiled to a crowd of attentive patriots. After the fanfare of the band and the eloquent message of an army general of the day, a crowd impressed to silence read the words written there: "Vermont to Ethan Allen—born in Litchfield, Conn., 10th January, 1737—died in Burlington, Ver., 12th February, 1789—and buried near the site of this monument. The leader of the Green Mountain boys—in the surprise and capture of Ticonderoga." This was his destiny.

Time of Stirring Events.

The 52 years intervening in the birth and death of Ethan Allen, the years between his obscurity and national fame, saw a spattering of gun fire ignite a whole people to arms, saw the beginning of America's fight for liberty, saw a country expand across the Alleghanies and reach the Mississippi. Between those two dates the Ohio Land company built its fort at the junction of the Allegheny and the Monongehela rivers, young Maj. Washington trekked through the wilderness to warn the French to keep hands off, and the French and Indian war became a chapter in history.

Within that half century a man named Ben Franklin suggested a plan for a colony union and in England George III. and his prime minister, Grenville, laid down a heavy yoke of stamp acts, Townsend acts, and tea tax. Then an army marched, a declaration of independence was signed, and in 1789, the year Ethan Allen's career ended with death, his commander, Gen. George Washington, became President of a United States.

Saw England's Dungeons.

Ethan Allen's part in that 50 years took him through the Vermont mountains, made him the hero of Ticonderoga, and sent him to the dungeons of England for seven weeks as a beaten, starved prisoner of war.

Of all this he is best known for the capture of Ticonderoga. The leader of the mountain boys who had tied "scoundrels" to the trees of Vermont and with a lash had changed their minds about settling on occupied territory, was called for service soon after the battle of Lexington.

Allen had long been a gruff defender of personal rights. When his home and his neighbors' property in the New Hampshire grants, now the state of Vermont, was threatened by surveyors from New York, he had called out his "boys." The Vermont territory had been given by the British crown to both New Hampshire and New York. The Green Mountaineers with their birch rods whipped into the New Yorkers who came to dispossess the first settlers and applied the "beech seal" until screeches of agony were heard in the forests for miles around.

Fortress Threatens Army.

The first guns of the revolution were echoing in the mind of a new born country when the general assembly of Connecticut enlisted the Green Mountain boys to take the British fortress at Ticonderoga at the lower end of Lake Champlain.

Within three weeks after the war began, Allen stood at Castleton with an old friend, Gershom Beach of Rutland, a blacksmith. More men were needed. Beach volunteered to go the sixty miles across Otter creek, to West Creek and on to Leicester and Middlebury river to tell the Green Mountain boys of the call to arms. Men hastened to the rendezvous with their chief.

In the gray of the morning of May 10, 1775, after a march from Bennington, Vt., the mountaineers assembled at the lake opposite the fort. Allen, with 83 men, proceeded in the boats they had stolen where and when they could. When they landed at the base of the fort the boats were sent back for the rear guard. But dawn came too soon. The British sentries had seen them.

Shot Goes Wild.

Quickly Allen gave orders for his men to draw up in three ranks with flintlocks poised. A sentry shot at Allen. He missed. The sleeping fort awoke to shouts as men swarmed up and into the barracks. While the shouting soldiers encountered the half dressed British who streamed from the fort, Allen searched for the captain.

Then Capt. La Place came down the barracks stairs, a candle clutched in his hands, his underdrawers in the other. His nightshirt flapped at his knees.

"I come, sir, to demand the immediate surrender of this fortress," said Allen.

"By what authority do you make this bold demand of his majesty's fort, sir?" Capt. La Place mumbled at the man in front of him.

"By what authority!" thundered Allen, "I demand it, sir, in the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental congress."

Thus without firing a shot, an American victory was won by a band of men who carried no flag and who crept out of the night to found an American stronghold. The military force of the British upon Lake Champlain was thus destroyed and the cause of the patriots was strengthened. And the words spoken there by Ethan Allen were to be repeated time and again through an eight year war for liberty and through centuries to come.

GEN. D. T. MERRILL TO AWARD COLORS AT CADET REVIEW

Two R.O.T.C. Units to Receive Flags.

BY JEAN DE BERG.

Brig. Gen. Dana T. Merrill.

Plans for the second annual all Chicago R. O. T. C. review on Friday afternoon, May 21, at Soldiers' field, moved forward last week with the acceptance of Brig. Gen. Dana T. Merrill, commanding general of Fort Sheridan, of THE TRIBUNE'S invitation to present two stands of national and school colors to Chicago units rating highest in the annual inspection of the R.O.T.C. by the war department.

"I am very much interested in R. O. T. C. work," said Gen. Merrill, who joined other prominent military and civic officials in lauding the purpose of the review, "and I shall be very happy to present the colors on the occasion."

The flags, which are given by THE TRIBUNE each year in accordance with its program of rewarding achievement in R. O. T. C. training, will be presented to the old and new units rated highest in the federal survey of progress in theoretical and practical phases of R. O. T. C. instruction, immediately following the massing of the 8,000 cadets before the reviewing stand.

Distinction between the 17 "old" and 10 "new" units in the Chicago cadet brigade was made necessary last year by the introduction of military training in additional schools. As the course of R. O. T. C. training covers a three year period, the newer units have not yet had time for their senior members to complete their prescribed instruction. The St. Mel parochial cadet corps has been established two years.

Other events on the program include a variety of demonstration drills by squads, platoons, companies, and a battalion of freshman cadets from Lane high school, rifle calisthentics, exhibitions by crack teams, bands, and drum and bugle corps, culminating in a review of the entire corps. The entertainment, sponsored by THE TRIBUNE in coöperation with the board of education, will be free.

Twenty-seven public high schools units, 18 military bands, two drum and bugle corps, school bands from Bowen and Tilden high schools, and the St. Mel high school R. O. T. C. will participate in the exhibition.

Schurz Purple and Gold Alumni Will Give Party

The Purple and Gold, alumni association of Carl Schurz High school, will give a splash party next Saturday evening in the Lincoln-Belmont Y. M. C. A., 3333 North Marshfield avenue. The evening will be devoted to swimming, card playing, and dancing.

MILTON AND MARY MYERS RECALL 64 YEARS TOGETHER

Reunion Begins Romance in Post-War Days.

All the love stories ever told are told again in the story of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Myers of Park Ridge, for did they not, like all lucky lovers, meet, marry and live happily ever after?

The happy-ever-after part of the story is 64 years long. He is 95 years old and she is 84 and last week when she celebrated her birthday he bought her a box of candy, the 65th time he remembered.

The scene for their first meeting was in Shelby, O., when he was a young man of 21 and a schoolmaster and she was a ten year old girl with pigtails and a pert nose. She sat on his knee and he read her a story. Then he said good-by, for she had to grow up.

Three Years of War.

Between the time of the meeting and the marriage a Shelby school teacher saw war fever break out in every city and village. Men talked on street corners, and, in Ohio, troops wearing blue marched toward the south, and the southern school teachers and cotton planters and country gentlemen wearing gray marched north. There was a civil war and Milton Myer liked peace. To save it, he volunteered for battle. In the spring of 1862 Mr. Myers left off pedagogy to enlist in the 84th Ohio infantry for a three month term.

He thought the war would be over by then and he would be back in the schoolroom a little brushed up on his geography. The drums kept on beating, however, and the war became a matter of years. Mr. Myers left off teaching history and helped for three years more with the 110th Ohio volunteers. He stepped up the ranks from private to first lieutenant. He was in the Wilderness campaign and fought at Maryland Heights and was stopped in his march when a bullet caught him in the leg when he fought at Cold Harbor.

Holdout for $50 a Month.

"Wanderlust gets a man after war fever—it's a part of recuperation," says Mr. Myers, "so I went out to Missouri to teach school but I asked too high a salary and they couldn't pay it. You see, I wanted $50 a month." Thus Mr. Myers became a paper hanger and a painter by trade.

One day in the Methodist church in Wellesville, Mr. Myers saw his little girl friend, now grown tall. She was about 20 then and looked strangely like some one he had seen before. Her pigtails were transformed into fetching curls and she had the same pert nose. They walked together, reminiscing of their former acquaintanceship and talked of the new President Grant and a country's recovery and incidentally the rising price of food and cotton.

And so they were married. It was in 1873, in the spring, and the era of the "carpet baggers." The country was shot up with bullets and jobs were hard to get. Mary Cutler became Mary Myers in a ceremony in front of a cook stove, and and "I haven't been much away from it in these 64 years," she says.

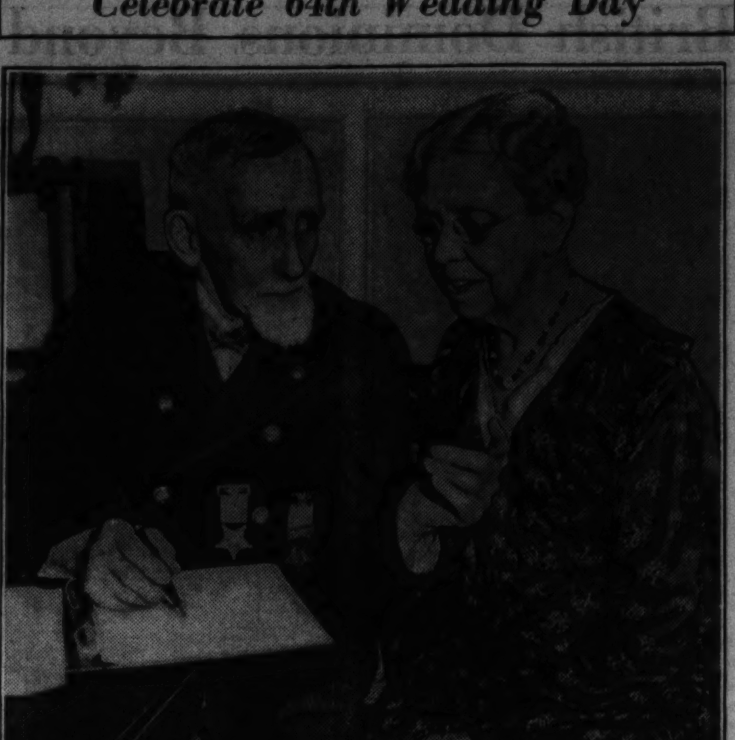
Leaves Brush for Boat.

Mr. Myers had another fling at adventure when he abandoned the paint brush for a river boat and hauled produce down the Mississippi for shipping at St. Louis.

Now they sit and read together. They might talk about their arguments over the Tilden-Hayes campaign and depressions—"they come most every so often, don't they, Mary?" he says. They remember their sons' graduations and the wedding trip they made to the west coast 40 years after their wedding day. They remember birth and death and planting petunias in the back porch box.

Being happy ever after for 64 years takes a lot of grinning and bearing, the Myers agree. The story's denouement filled with memories is their reward. A little white house at 918 Crescent street set back from the street is their home.. Spring is bringing buds to the vines that have climbed up over the front porch. A man with white hair talks and looks at his wife for acquiescence—it's a long habit, having her agree.

Celebrate 64th Wedding Day



Mr. and Mrs. Milton Myers, 918 Crescent avenue, recently celebrated their sixty-fourth wedding anniversary, and last week Mrs. Myers had her 84th birthday. Mr. Myers was 95 years old last November. The Myerses have lived in Park Ridge since 1920 and in Chicago suburbs since the Columbian exposition.

German Club.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the German club of Chicago will be held Tuesday evening at the Atlantic hotel. Al W. Weinberger is president.

PALMER LEGION AUXILIARY WILL GIVE DANCE MAY 2

The auxiliary of Palmer post, American Legion, will hold its second annual dance May 2 at St. Stanislaus B. M. hall, 2318 North Lorel avenue. Members of the arrangements committee are Mrs. Mae Wojciechowski, chairman; Mrs. Margaret Zanadzki, Mrs. Mary Rambert, Mrs. Marie Koczowski, and Mrs. Agnes Brzozoski. Mrs. Lucia Lackowski is president of the unit.

I. R. Benston recently completed fifteen years as service officer for the department of Illinois, American Legion. The enormous amount of work handled by the department is indicated by the fact that there are 86,000 disabled veterans in the state, who have claims for compensation with the United States Veterans' bureau. There also are 5,500 disabled veterans in hospitals, being cared for by the federal government and the state. The American Legion service department is also handling more than 11,000 death claims, arising from the deaths of world war veterans.

The Last Man's club of the Seventh Illinois volunteer infantry Spanish war veterans will celebrate the 39th anniversary of its mustering into the service this afternoon at the American Legion headquarters, 6412 Cottage Grove avenue. Officers of the club are C. S. Kelly, president; David Ransford, secretary; M. F. Kelly Sr., J. P. Moore, William F. Hammond Sr., C. J. Berkley, C. J. Faulkner, J. T. McCormick, and B. H. Dickerhoff, directors.

Library Puppet Show.

Story hour activities at the Hild Regional branch of the Chicago public library, 4536 Lincoln avenue, will close Saturday morning with a 10:30 o'clock puppet show given by Miss Ida May Hoffman and Miss Helen Gentz.

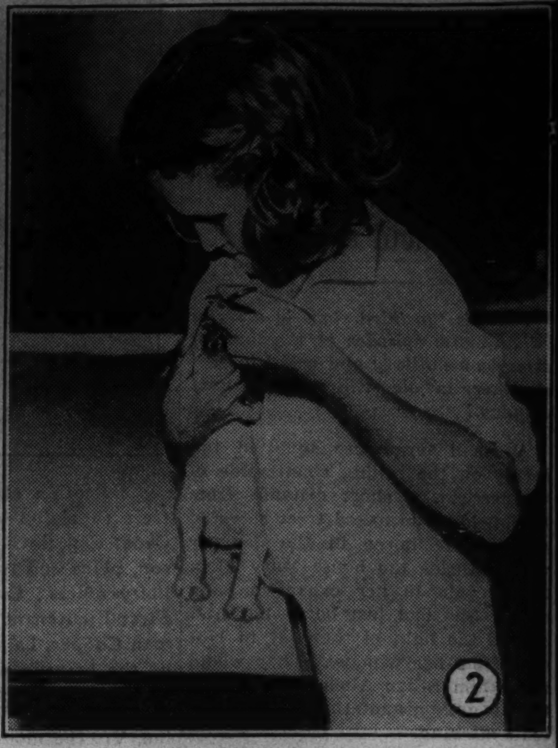
Girl Is Keen Student of Veterinary at 12 Years

Virginia Knowles, age 12, is a youthful student of veterinary, having studied for the last six years in her father's pet hospital in Miami, Fla. She uses a microscope to examine bacteria. [Acme Photos.]



When her patient, a dog this time, is stubborn, Virginia takes a firm grip. Then she takes a pill shooter and squirts a pill into the young animal's mouth.

Virginia has spent her childhood among pets, and she has helped at her father's animal hospital since she was 6 years old. Here she assists Dr. Knowles in giving ether to a sick dog before an operation. Visitors to the institution are amazed by the girl's knowledge of animal ailments.

Beauties

OF THE YOUNGER BRITISH ARISTOCRACY—

CARE FOR THEIR DELICATE SKIN WITH POND'S

ALL in their twenties—leading the traditional brilliant social life and active outdoor life of Britain's young aristocrats.

At Coronation dances, dinners, receptions, these young beauties will be admired, most of all for the smooth delicacy of their skin.

They follow the Pond's method of skin care:—

Every night, smooth on Pond's Cold Cream. As it softens and releases dirt and make-up—wipe them all off. Now pat in more Pond's Cold Cream—briskly, till the circulation stirs. Your skin feels invigorated.

Every morning—(and before make-up) repeat . . . Your skin is smooth for powder—fresh, vital looking!

Begin to give your skin this same care. See your skin grow clearer, smoother, finer.

Send for SPECIAL 9-TREATMENT TUBE and 3 other Pond's Beauty Aids

Pond's, Dept. CP-155, Clinton, Conn. Rush special tube of Pond's Cold Cream, enough for 9 treatments, with generous samples of 2 other Pond's Creams and 5 different shades of Pond's Face Powder. I enclose 10c to cover postage and packing.

IRIUM SETS MILLIONS TALKING OF NEW EXCITING LUSTER ON TEETH

PEPSODENT alone of tooth powders contains IRIUM . . . amazing gift of science for adding new sparkle to teeth

BECAUSE OF IRIUM . . . Pepsodent requires NO SOAP. Contains NO GRIT . . . NO PUMICE. —Safe!

BECAUSE OF IRIUM . . . Pepsodent gently floats film away—restores natural luster. —Thorough!

BECAUSE OF IRIUM . . . Pepsodent Powder leaves your mouth feeling clean and wholesome. —Refreshing!

THE QUICKEST way to safely win new luster on teeth is with Pepsodent, containing IRIUM, amazing new luster discovery.

So do as millions are doing—change to Pepsodent Powder containing IRIUM. Use it twice a day and you'll bid goodbye to dull, coated, film-stained enamel.

It seems the whole nation is taking this advice! Already people have bought over 10,000,000 cans of Pepsodent—the only tooth powder containing the amazing dental ingredient, IRIUM.

IRIUM makes Pepsodent a remarkably effective tooth powder. One that responds instantly to your brush. So effective is IRIUM that a single brushing leaves your enamel cleaner, more radiant than you have ever before experienced.

For IRIUM is a totally new kind of foaming ingredient. It speedily loosens the glue-like film on teeth. Then floats it away like magic . . . safely restoring flashing luster!

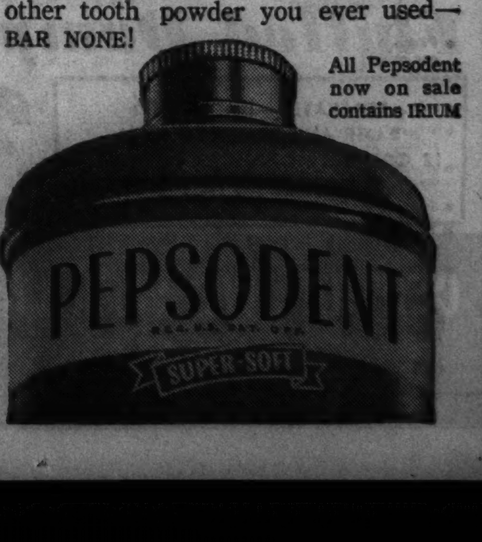
That's why teeth look whiter, feel clean so much longer after using Pepsodent Powder containing IRIUM. Enamel sparkles as it never did with old-fashioned, laborious methods.

Yet Pepsodent Powder is SAFE, because it contains NO GRIT, NO PUMICE.

And it's so refreshing that a wholesome tingle rejuvenates your mouth, your sense of taste, with every brushing.

Try it and see! You'll notice a thrilling difference from the moment you start using Pepsodent Powder containing IRIUM. See how it shows up any other tooth powder you ever used—BAR NONE!

All Pepsodent now on sale contains IRIUM

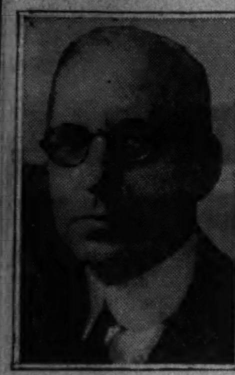


USE PEPSODENT POWDER! . . . it alone contains IRIUM—for thrilling luster on teeth!

8 FAITHS CLAIM VAST MAJORITY IN U. S. CHURCHES

Biennial Survey Shows 506 Groups Active.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.



Dr. Weber.

Chicago ministers are now receiving the 1937 edition of the Yearbook of American Churches, a record of religious activities in the United States for 1935 and 1936. This biennial survey of vital statistics in organized Roman Catholic, Orthodox, Protestant and Jewish religious fields has been published since 1915 under the auspices of the federal council of churches. The editor, as in the two previous issues, is Dr. Herman C. Weber. The statistical picture of organized religion in the United States may be framed in the single statement that 58.5 per cent of the population 13 years and older is in active membership with some religious body. The census bureau reported a 1935 population of 127,521,000 and of this number there were 87,160,604 individuals 13 years old or more.

Eight Leading Faiths.

There are 244,090 clergy and rabbis serving 245,005 churches and synagogues.

Chicago pastors are pointing out that while there are 506 religious bodies listed in the yearbook, 92 per cent of the religious affiliation is comprised within eight leading faiths. The membership in Roman Catholic, Jewish, Methodist, Baptist, Lutheran, Presbyterian, Congregational and Episcopal bodies leaves only four million people to be distributed among 498 other forms of religious adherence. This seems a disproportionate ratio of churches to population, but easily understood when it is found that the yearbook lists 159 different beliefs as "minor bodies with less than 50,000 reported members each."

It is, furthermore, the dichotomies in these groups that produce so many minor bodies. There are 14 branches, for example, of the Mennonites and the Stauffer group lists only 150 members. There are 16 varieties of Baptists and the Two-Seed-in-the-Spirit Predestinarians number only 350 inclusive, i. e., children and adults. This latter group, however, is not the smallest; the Life and Advent Union, an offshoot of the Adventists whose distinctive belief is that there is no resurrection for the wicked, total 315.

Tables of Reference.

As a reference compendium the yearbook will be found invaluable. There are Easter tables, the Jewish calendar, graphic charts and tables of membership, a list of service organizations, and a whole section devoted to movements or organizations in the field of coöperation, union, or interdenominational service with roster of their respective personnels.

Under the section "Reference Lists" will be found all the bishops in the major Catholic and Protestant bodies, a check list of religious publications, theological seminaries, colleges and universities. This last reveals that there are twenty institutions in Chicago against New York City's thirteen where theology may be studied, and strictly Bible schools of the evangelical type are not included in this comparison.

The only part of the yearbook which is not statistical are five articles surveying the religious fields of Catholics, Protestants and Jews, a summary of the objectives of the federal council of churches, and a review of the National Preaching mission.

Presbyterian Theological seminary, 2330 North Halsted street, will confer bachelor of divinity degrees on forty-three candidates next Thursday evening in the seminary chapel. The commencement address will be given by Dr. Thomas Wesley Graham, dean of the graduate school of theology, Oberlin, O., on the topic, "The Church in a Changed World." The president and Mrs. John Timothy Stone will entertain the faculty and directors of the seminary at luncheon on Wednesday.

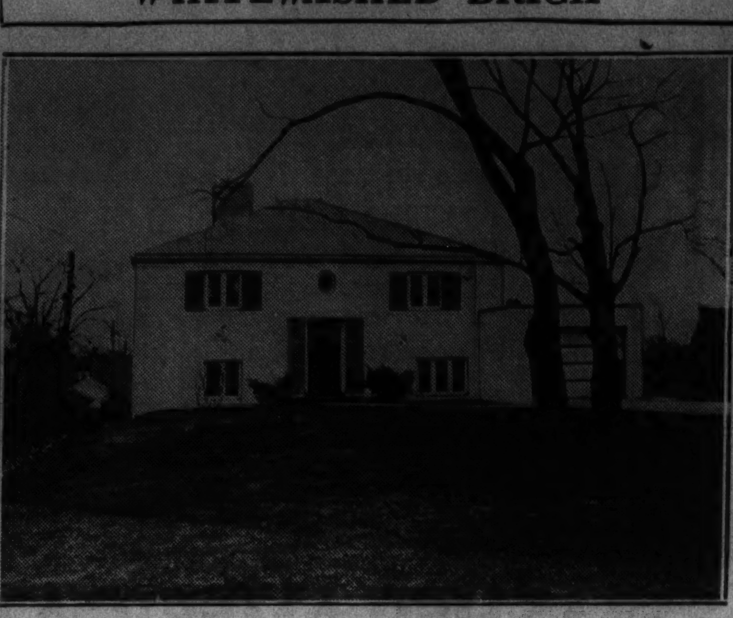
The Rev. and Mrs. E. G. Woods, on furlough after seven years of missionary service, will give a moving picture lecture on missionary activities in India tonight at St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran church, Spaulding and Lemoyne avenues, the Rev. Freeman A. Kunz, pastor.

WHITEWASHED BRICK



The new home of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Ensinger, 545 Ridge road, Kenilworth. Architects, Perkins, Wheeler & Will, 333 North Michigan avenue. The house has exterior walls of whitewashed brick and an intriguing red doorway.

Features of Kenilworth House Mark It as Modern Project

Louise Bargelt's booklet, "Let's Keep Cool this Summer," is 5 cents by mail and 3 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn and Tribune Tower.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

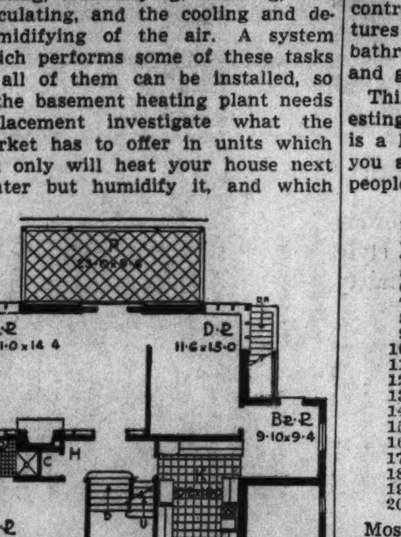
A certain poet once pointed out that lives of admirable men "oft remind us" that there are ways by which we may improve our daily living. Just so, even the most casual observation of some of the admirable new homes now being built can suggest to us methods, materials, decorations, and equipment for the new house we plan to build, or the old one we have decided to modernize.

Let us glance at this new home in Kenilworth and observe what features mark it as being deserving of praise and make it a modern project.

Although house preferences are varied, this in no way interferes with our relish for the new and the interesting. In a recent poll of owners of some 250,000 homes, conducted by the Architectural Forum, 65 per cent voted for air conditioning.

Air Conditioning Improved.

Today's new home has a warm air heating system with winter air conditioning [and provision for future summer cooling]. There is a decided trend toward units which combine a number of the functions of a complete air conditioning system, or all of the functions. These include the heating, humidifying, filtering, and circulating, and the cooling and dehumidifying of the air. A system which performs some of these tasks or all of them can be installed, so if the basement heating plant needs replacement investigate what the market has to offer in units which not only will heat your house next winter but humidify it, and which also will make it more comfortable this coming summer. At the same time ask to see units which circulate and filter air all year round.



A modern first floor layout with kitchen in front and living room and dining room overlooking terraces and gardens at rear.

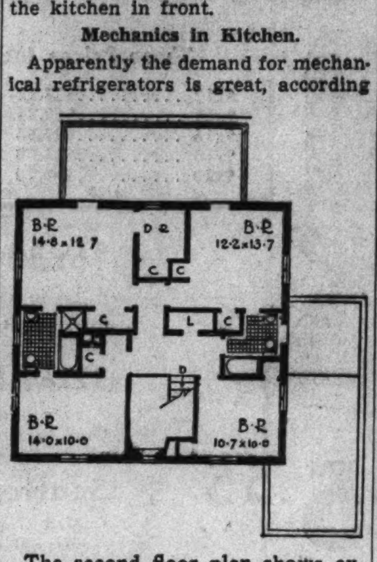
In the same poll 51 per cent voted for an attached garage, 84 per cent for a full sized basement, 51 per cent for a basement recreation room, 82 per cent for a laundry room, and 55 per cent for a fruit and vegetable room. So far, so good. This new house in Kenilworth has all these features.

Forty-six per cent voted for exterior walls of bricks, other types of construction being divided among the remaining 54 per cent. Fifty-four per cent voted for two or more baths, 83 per cent for separate living and dining rooms, 50 per cent for thermostatic control of heating plant. So far, still good. The new house has all these features.

Now we come to something different. The Kenilworth house has the kitchen placed in front. This was the choice of the owners who had the house designed. But this distinctly new trend is not yet universally in favor. Eighty-six per cent of the people polled voted for the living room and dining room, or at least the living room alone, facing the street. Only 14 per cent voted for placing the kitchen in front.

Mechanics in Kitchen.

Apparently the demand for mechanical refrigerators is great, according to answers filed in the widely circulated questionnaire. So it is for automatic hot water heaters and oven controled stoves. Other popular features are kitchen ventilating fans, bathroom heaters, dishwasher sinks, and garbage disposal units.



The second floor plan shows excellent utilization of space with bathrooms conveniently placed.

This same poll throws some interesting light on "pet peeves." Below is a list of them. Check and see if you agree, or don't agree with the people's choice in this matter.

1. Not enough closet space.
2. Not enough electric outlets.
3. Uneven distribution of heat.
4. Poor kitchen arrangement.
5. Drafty house.
6. Can't arrange furniture.
7. Not enough sunlight.
8. No place to keep toys.
9. Poor hot water heater.
10. Garage door doesn't work.
11. House hard to care for.
12. Refrigerator too small.
13. Drain pipes clog.
14. Lighting fixtures are glary.
15. Rain water floods basement.
16. Garage too small.
17. Pipes rust.
18. Dark halls and stairways.
19. Screens rust.
20. Water flows poorly.

Most of these are real peeves if you have to live with them . . . peeves which home owners are taking steps to remedy.

PARK DISTRICT'S 'SAVE THE LAWN' CAMPAIGN OPENS

Prizes Will Be Awarded in Three Divisions.

The northwest side is taking up beauty culture along with the city as the park district announces its third annual "Save the Lawn" campaign, a city beautification plan. Mayor Kelly is honorary chairman of the general committee in charge of the garden and lawn project.

District chairmen who have been appointed to conduct the campaign on the northwest side are Mrs. Anna H. Steinborn and John Riva. Churches, schools and improvement clubs in the district will coöperate in the work. Copies of the winning poster in a contest conducted during last year's campaign will be displayed on public property and private lawns. These posters can be procured at the Administration building in Burnham park and at local fieldhouses.

Among the contests this year will be the home owners competition for which the city has been divided into five sections. A cash award of $50 will be made to the home owner in each section producing and maintaining the finest lawn for the summer. Albert J. Schrosch, northwest side realtor, donated this prize for his district.

Another contest will be the fire and police station competition for which City Treasurer Gustave A. Brand will donate a trophy. The apartment house contest conducted last year will be related in this campaign. For this the city will be divided into four districts with a cash award of $40 as the prize. James B. McCahey, president of the board of education, will contribute a silver plaque to the engineer or janitor of the parochial or public school who maintains the finest lawn.

A folder entitled "How to Grow a Good Lawn" is being prepared by the landscape gardeners of the park district.

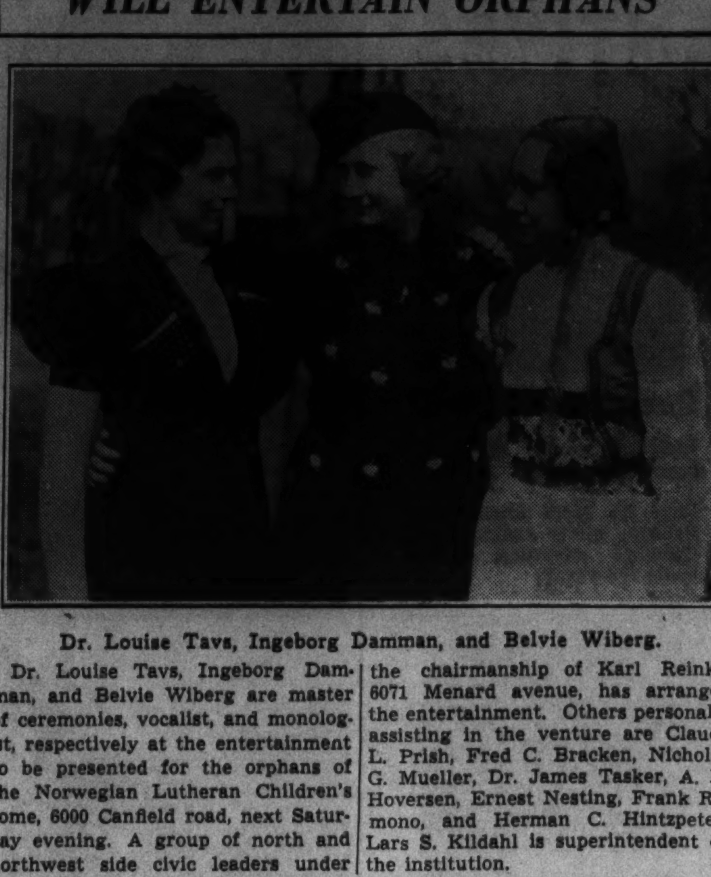
GIRL RESERVE CLUBS FROM 7 HIGH SCHOOLS TO HAVE STYLE SHOW

Miss Lorraine Riske. [Root Studio.]

Miss Lorraine Riske, president of the Roosevelt High school Girl Reserve club, and members of the organization will act as hostesses at the style show and tea dance which will be given by girl reserve clubs of Austin, Flower, Harrison, Lake View, McKinley, Roosevelt, and Waller High schools at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the West Side branch, Y. W. C. A., 101 South Ashland boulevard.

Officers taking an active part in arrangements for the show and dance are Miss June Murphy, Miss Catherine Shines, Miss Betty Sievers, Miss Jean Ernst, Miss Mary Jane MacDonald, Miss Margaret Johnson, and Miss Lorraine Riske.

WILL ENTERTAIN ORPHANS

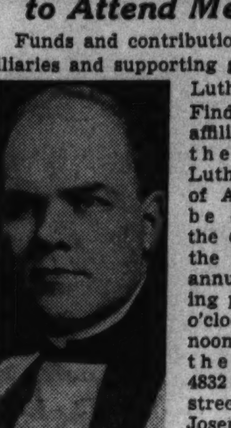


Dr. Louise Tavs, Ingeborg Damman, and Belvie Wiberg.

Dr. Louise Tavs, Ingeborg Damman, and Belvie Wiberg are master of ceremonies, vocalist, and monologist, respectively at the entertainment to be presented for the orphans of the Norwegian Lutheran Children's home, 6000 Canfield road, next Saturday evening. A group of north and northwest side civic leaders under the chairmanship of Karl Reinke, 6071 Menard avenue, has arranged the entertainment. Others personally assisting in the venture are Claude L. Prish, Fred C. Bracken, Nicholas G. Mueller, Dr. James Tasker, A. E. Hoversen, Ernest Nesting, Frank Ramono, and Herman C. Hintzpeter. Lars S. Kildahl is superintendent of the institution.

LUTHERAN HOME FINDING GROUP TO GET FUNDS TODAY

Contributing Societies to Attend Meeting.



The Rev. Joseph C. Simonson.

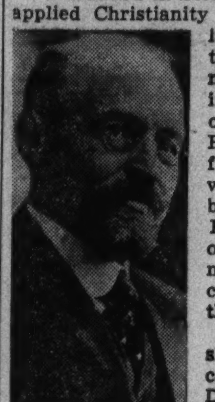
Funds and contributions from auxiliaries and supporting groups of the Lutheran Home Finding society, affiliated with the Norwegian Lutheran church of America, will be delivered to the executives of the home at the annual ingathering program at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Lutheran home, 4832-4840 Byron street. The Rev. Joseph C. Simonson, pastor of Moreland Lutheran church, will give a lecture, "The Call to Service."

Vocal numbers will be given by a quartet composed of Mrs. Alice Arnesen, Edward Arnesen, Miss Alice Arnesen, and Dr. Burt Arnesen. Short talks will be given by the president of the board of directors, M. I. Ronning, and the superintendent of the home, Charles J. Buslee. Rudolph Gustafson is in charge of arrangements.

The society at present is caring for 224 dependent children who have been given over by the Juvenile court until a suitable home is found. Deaconess Caroline Williams is the society's representative at court.

The following are the group leaders: Mrs. Samuel Thompson, ladies' auxiliary; Louis O. Gunderson, Bethel branch; Mrs. Warren A. Peterson, Entre Nous club; Axel Ryerson, Erie branch; Julius Larsen, First Lutheran branch; Miss Mildred Frohman, Friendly circle; Mrs. John Suerth, Friendly club; Mrs. A. V. Lundberg, Home club; Mrs. Erna Abrahamson, Humboldt branch; Mrs. G. M. Larson, Martha Maria society; Mrs. C. A. Nelsen, Parkview branch; Mrs. J. H. Hansen, Portage Park branch; Mrs. T. A. Zirngibl, Redeemer branch; Mrs. Sigrid Andersen, Timothy branch; Mrs. R. H. Ruenzel, Six Corner club, and Miss M. E. Boe, Social club.

GRINNELL PROFESSOR TO ADDRESS SUNDAY EVENING CLUB TODAY



Dr. Edward Steiner.

Dr. Edward A. Steiner, professor of applied Christianity at Grinnell college will address the Sunday Evening club tonight in Orchestra hall on the text "A Preacher Come from God." He will be introduced by Clifford W. Barnes, president of the club, for many years a close friend of the speaker.

Born in Czechoslovakia and educated in Vienna, Dr. Steiner developed liberal views and was compelled to flee his country, arriving eventually in New York City. Unable to make use of his classical education he worked in the steel mills till he had mastered the English language and after years of slow progress he at last gained recognition as an educator, author, and Christian leader.

Today he is an authority on immigration with which subject the majority of his published works deals. Dr. Steiner was ordained to the Congregational ministry in 1891. After tonight's service a reception will be held for Dr. Steiner by Chicago alumni of Grinnell college.

Sorority Benefit.

Alpha chapter of Gamma Theta Rho sorority will give its annual card party for charity at 2 o'clock today at the Belmont hotel, 3156 Sheridan road.

LUTHERANS WILL DEDICATE NEW BUILDING TODAY

Irving Park Structure to House School.

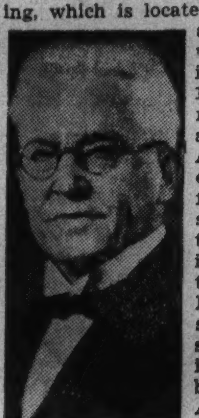
Dr. Joshua Oden.

The new education building of the Irving Park Lutheran church, Belle Plaine and Harding avenues, erected for the housing of young people's social activities and the church school, will be dedicated at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The ceremony will be the climax to the church's Third of a Century anniversary celebration.

Dr. Peter Peterson, president of the Illinois conference of the Augustana Lutheran synod will dedicate the building. Dr. Joshua Oden, church pastor, will be in charge of the program.

Leaders to Speak.

A message on behalf of the Chicago Lutheran Ministers association will be given by the Rev. C. M. Olander; the representative of the Northern Chicago district will be Dr. E. K. Jonson; the Chicago Church federation, Dr. Ralph Wakefield, and the city of Chicago, Ald. H. L. Brody, who will speak for Mayor Kelly.



Dr. Peter Peterson.

The auditorium of the new building, which is located at Belle Plaine and Harding avenues, has a seating capacity of 1,000 persons and may also be used as a gymnasium. A modern kitchen is on the first floor. The church school will use the rooms adjoining the auditorium. Irving Park's Lutheran school was started in 1901 in a store owned by Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Olson on Irving Park boulevard. Seven students were present at the first session and from this number the enrollment has grown to 600 persons. The church congregation was organized Dec. 30, 1903.

On Building Committee.

The building committee in addition to Dr. Oden includes C. H. Anderson, A. S. Elmlund, C. J. Goranson, L. M. Nelson, and E. T. Stille. The advisory committee consists of Roland Anderson, Hjalmar Andrews, Mrs. Carroll Bussman, Einar Carlson, Mrs. A. J. Dittman, Reuben A. Erickson, Adolf Fors, J. Vern Fridlund, F. B. Goranson, Arthur E. Helstrom, Kenneth Landon, George A. Larson, Mrs. George G. Larson, Halfdan Olson, Fred Reimer, Charles Rosberg, and Mrs. P. A. Wayman.

The campaign for funds is under the leadership of C. H. Anderson. He is assisted by A. A. Ahlberg, Carl Andrews, Hjalmar Andrews, Miss Elizabeth Benson, L. A. Borgeson, Allan Carlson, A. S. Elmlund, Adolf Fors, C. J. Goranson, Harry B. Norlin, M. F. Ramme, Mrs. Victor Rosencrantz, Oliver Sandquist, E. T. Stille, Axel A. Swanson, and George J. Wiberg.

WOULD YOU MIND HELPING MR. BUNGSTARTER CARRY A BARREL TO THE BASEMENT, MR. MULLINS.
WILL I? I'LL SAY I WILL!
LET ME GIVE YOU A HAND, BUNGSTARTER, HUMM- WHAT HAVE WE HERE?
GUESS.
GRAPE-FRUIT?
YES, I AM EXPERIMENTING ON MAKING A GRAPE-FRUIT THAT TASTES LIKE AN ORANGE.
YOU SEE, GRAPE FRUIT ARE BIGGER THAN ORDINARY ORANGES AND EVERYBODY WILL BUY MINE BECAUSE THEY'LL GET MORE FOR THEIR MONEY.
PHEEEW! WHY DON'T YOU TRY INVENTIN' AN ODORLESS ONION?- THAT WOULD BE SOMETHIN'.
I DON'T THINK I'D MAKE SO MUCH OUT OF THAT.
WELL, YOU MIGHT TRY EATING 'EM.
KONK!
DON'T GO GETTING PERSONAL.
WELL?
WELL?
YOU NEEDN'T OF GOT SO TOUGH ABOUT IT.

M—IS HE MAN OR MONSTER? WELL, LET'S FOLLOW "DADDY" AS HE AND ANNIE RETURN AM'S CALL—
AH—I AM REMINDED OF A VERY DEAR FRIEND I KNEW, SOME FIFTEEN THOUSAND YEARS AGO—
BUT PERHAPS YOU'D BE INTERESTED IN LEARNING SOMETHING OF HOW LIFE WAS LIVED IN BY GONE DAYS—
YOU, OLIVER, KNOW SOMETHING OF THE PAST—BUT TO LITTLE ANNIE ALL THIS IS NEW—GEE—LOOK! IT'S LIKE A MINE—HEY! SEE? LOOK THERE! INDIANS!
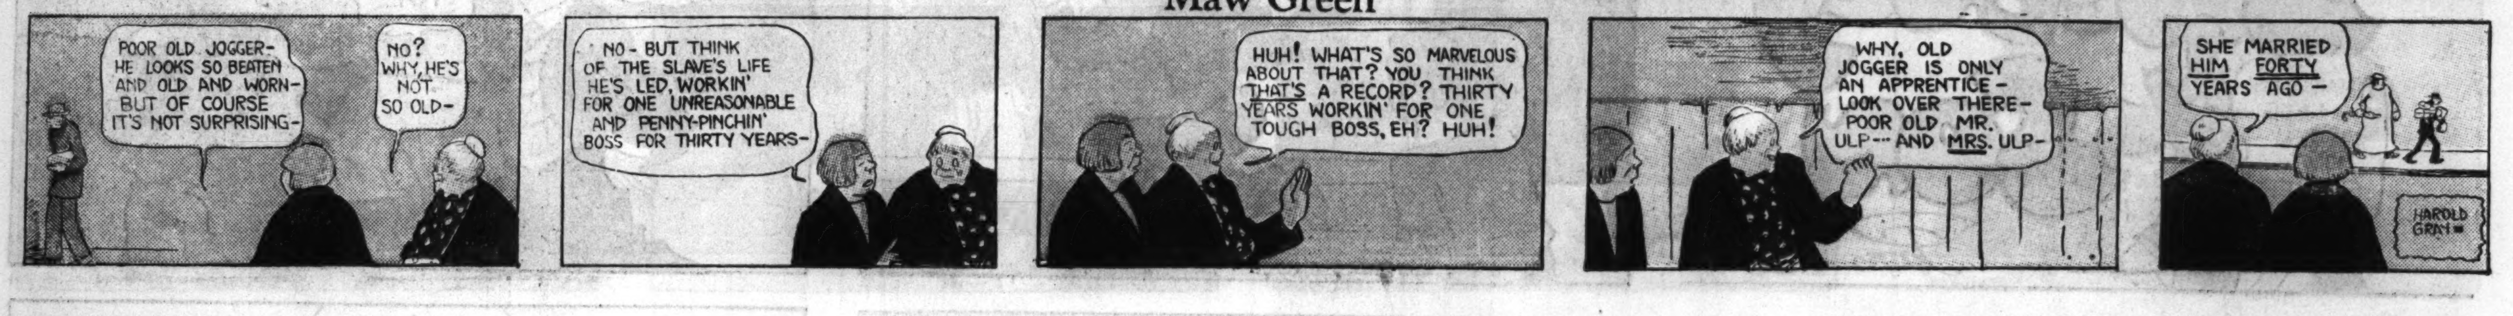
INDIANS? OH, YES—FLOATERS—ONLY LIVED HERE A COUPLE THOUSAND YEARS—I NEVER KNEW ANY INDIANS—THEY WERE ONLY MUSHROOMS—
AH—NOW WE'RE GETTING DOWN TO MORE SUBSTANTIAL LEVELS—10,000 YEARS AGO—··· 15,000—····
AND HERE WE HAVE MY OLD HOME TOWN OF 20,000 YEARS AGO—I LIVED HERE TEMPORARILY COUPLE OF HUNDRED YEARS OR SO—
SOMETHING LIKE AN ORDINARY MORTAL SPENDING A WEEK-END, EH?
LEAPIN' LIZARDS! WAS THIS YOUR HOUSE?
YES—THIS WAS THE ENTRANCE HALL—THERE ARE ABOUT A HUNDRED ROOMS IN ALL—I'M ONLY HAVING A FEW OF THEM EXCAVATED—
WHY, THIS WAS A PALACE! WHAT'S IN THERE?
OH, THAT'S ONE OF THE BATHS—THERE WAS ONE FOR EACH BED-ROOM, OF COURSE—
WHY, THIS PLACE WAS MORE UP-TO-DATE THAN MOST HOUSES TO DAY—
EACH GENERATION IS CERTAIN IT HAS REACHED THE PEAK OF CIVILIZATION—NO USE TO TRY TO TELL FOLKS THAT, TO PEOPLE OF LONG-FORGOTTEN AGES, OUR PRESENT DAY LIFE WOULD SEEM CRUDE AND ABORIGINAL—
B-BUT WHY DIDN'T IT LAST? I MEAN, FOLKS WAY BACK HAD EVER'THING—HOW DID THEY LOSE IT ALL?
EBB AND FLOW IN EVERYTHING—GIANT CYCLES—THE SWINGING PENDULUM OF TIME—BUT I FANCY YOU HAVE ENOUGH TO THINK ABOUT FOR ONE DAY—
I'LL SAY SO! AND——ER··· MR. AM—I'LL NEVER, NEVER AGAIN QUESTION ANYTHING YOU SAY IS SO——NO MATTER HOW CRAZY IT SOUNDS—
HAROLD GRAY
WHILE HIGH IN THE SKY, FAR OUT OVER THE MOUTH OF THE RIVER, A HARMLESS-LOOKING PLANE WINGS DOWN THE COAST—
SEE? IT IS THE FISHING BOAT USED BY THE DOG, WARBUCKS, TO ESCAPE US—
YES—AND NEARBY, HIS HOUSE, WELL CAMOUFLAGED
AT LAST WE KNOW HIS LAIR—BUT WE MUST MOVE WITH CAUTION—

Maw Green



POOR OLD JOGGER—HE LOOKS SO BEATEN AND OLD AND WORN—BUT OF COURSE IT'S NOT SURPRISING—
NO? WHY, HE'S NOT SO OLD—
NO—BUT THINK OF THE SLAVE'S LIFE HE'S LED, WORKIN' FOR ONE UNREASONABLE AND PENNY-PINCHIN' BOSS FOR THIRTY YEARS—
HUH! WHAT'S SO MARVELOUS ABOUT THAT? YOU THINK THAT'S A RECORD? THIRTY YEARS WORKIN' FOR ONE TOUGH BOSS, EH? HUH!
WHY, OLD JOGGER IS ONLY AN APPRENTICE—LOOK OVER THERE—POOR OLD MR. ULP——AND MRS. ULP—
SHE MARRIED HIM FORTY YEARS AGO—

HEY, PAT! THERE'S A GUY ON TH' HILL WITH A WHITE FLAG! — HE MUST BE FROM TH' GANG THAT GRABBED SANDHURST!
I'M FER TAKIN' A POT SHOT AT 'IM — AFTER WHAT THEM BUZZARDS DID T' SOME OF OUR BOYS!
NO! THEY'D SKIN SANDHURST ALIVE IF YOU DID!
PERSONALLY, I'D LIKE T' HAVE A FRONT ROW SEAT WHEN THEY DID TH' DEED!
NO VIOLENCE, LADS — LET'S SEE WOT TH' BLOKE'S GOT T' SAY!
COMES WRITE-TALK FROM BOSS-MAN!
IT'S A NOTE FROM SANDHURST!
READ IT, ED!
MY CAPTORS DEMAND THAT YOU DELIVER THE REMAINING STORES IN THE WAREHOUSE TO THEM, OR THEY WILL TORTURE ME...
"...IN HEAVEN'S NAME, ALLOW THEM TO TAKE THE SUPPLIES BEFORE THEY DO ME HARM! I SHALL SEE THAT EVERY COMPANY EMPLOYEE IS PROPERLY REWARDED WHEN I AM SET FREE. DESPERATELY, SANDHURST"
HO! AFTER CUTTIN' OFF OUR WINTER SUPPLIES HE WANTS US T' GIVE AWAY EVERY BIT O' FOOD WE GOT LEFT T' GIT HIM OUTA TROUBLE!
LET 'EM SCALP TH' DOPE IF THEY WANT TO!
YEAH! — LET 'IM LIE HIS WAY OUT O' THIS JAM!
YOU GO TELL YOUR PEOPLE WE'RE NOT INTERESTED! — NO SALE, SEE? — NOW GIT — CHOP, CHOP!
JUMPIN' JUNE BUGS, PAT, THEY'RE GONNA LET THOSE DEVILS TORTURE SANDHURST! IT AIN'T HUMAN!
MISSY NORMANDIE GOT TEAR WEEPS NOW 'CAUSE SOUR SANDYHURST WAS KETCHED BY MAD MOUNTAIN FELLERS!
SHOULDN'T WE TRY T' STOP 'EM, PAT?
TH' MEN ARE IN TOO BAD A HUMOR TO LISTEN TO US RIGHT NOW...
... IF SANDHURST IS TO BE SAVED, IT'S UP TO THE THREE OF US! — AND I WOULDN'T TRY IT FOR ANYBODY BUT NORMANDIE! — LISTEN! HERE'S MY PLAN...

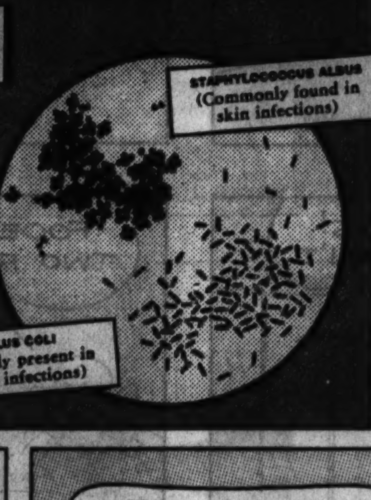
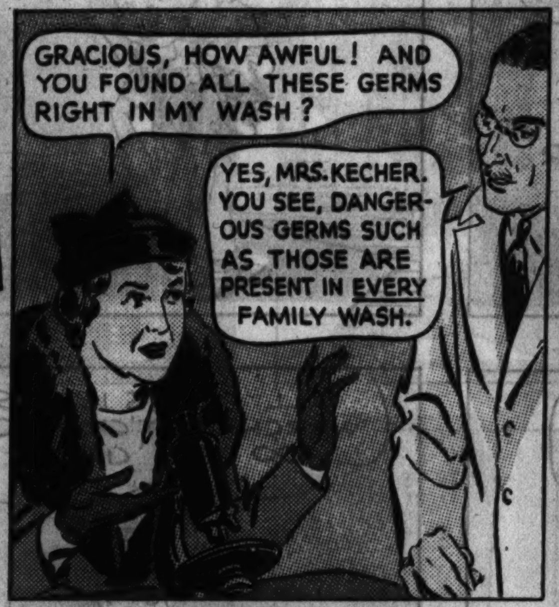
SHE SAW THESE GERMS IN HER FAMILY WASH

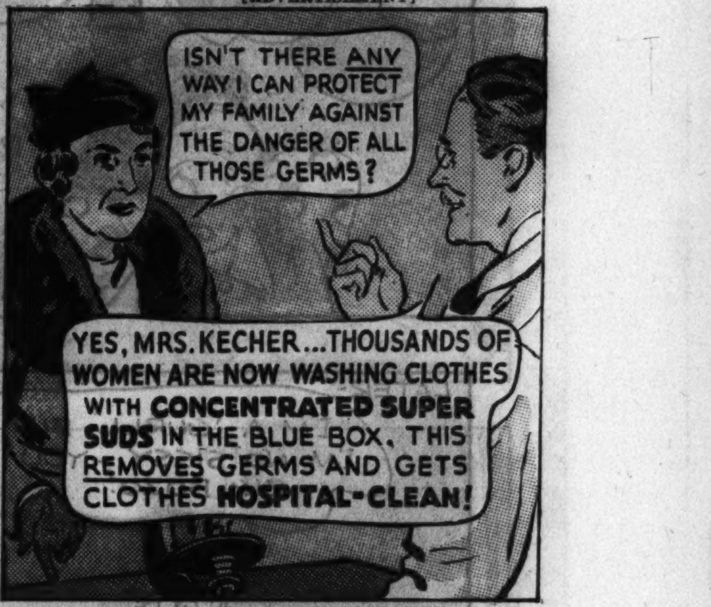
MRS. ANNA KECHER, of Carmel, N.Y., is one of the many modern, careful mothers who co-operated with us in this extensive series of germ tests on the average family wash. A sample of Mrs. Kecher's wash was submitted to analysis, and later Mrs. Kecher came to the laboratory to see for herself the result of the test . . .



STAPHYLOCOCCUS ALBUS (Commonly found in skin infections)
BACILLUS COLI (Commonly present in intestinal infections)

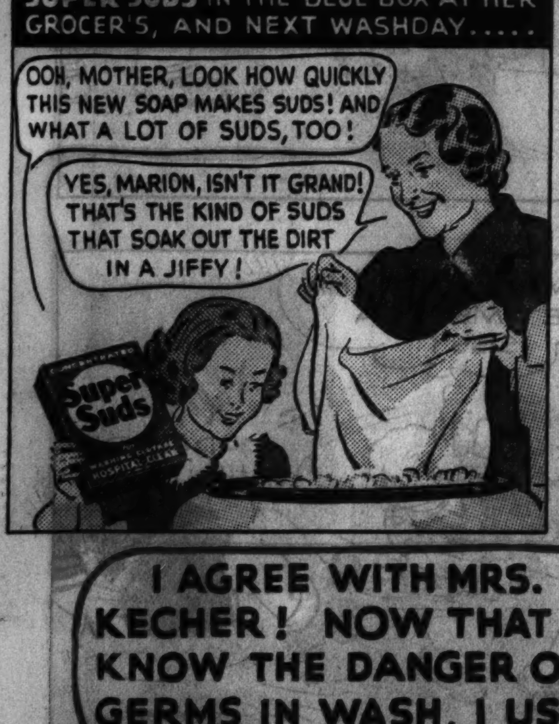


GRACIOUS, HOW AWFUL! AND YOU FOUND ALL THESE GERMS RIGHT IN MY WASH?
YES, MRS. KECHER. YOU SEE, DANGEROUS GERMS SUCH AS THOSE ARE PRESENT IN EVERY FAMILY WASH.

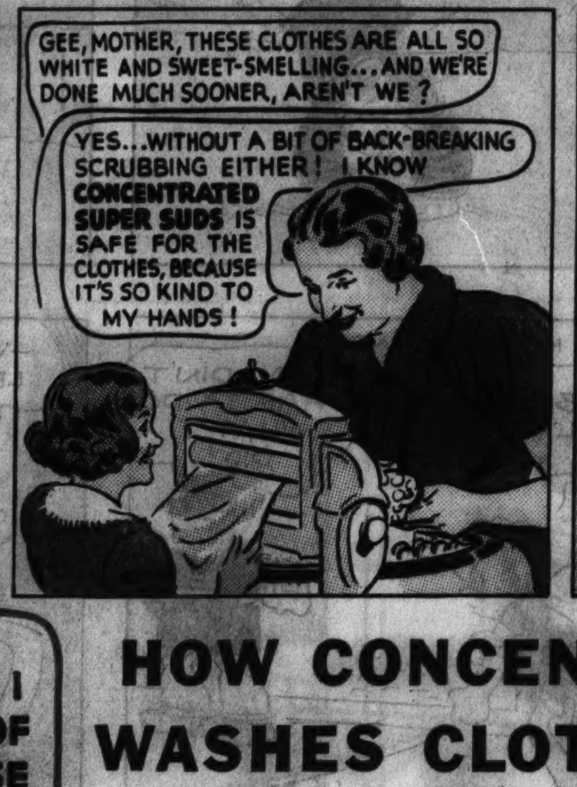


ISN'T THERE ANY WAY I CAN PROTECT MY FAMILY AGAINST THE DANGER OF ALL THOSE GERMS?
YES, MRS. KECHER...THOUSANDS OF WOMEN ARE NOW WASHING CLOTHES WITH CONCENTRATED SUPER SUDS IN THE BLUE BOX. THIS REMOVES GERMS AND GETS CLOTHES HOSPITAL-CLEAN!

MRS. KECHER GETS CONCENTRATED SUPER SUDS IN THE BLUE BOX AT HER GROCER'S, AND NEXT WASHDAY.....



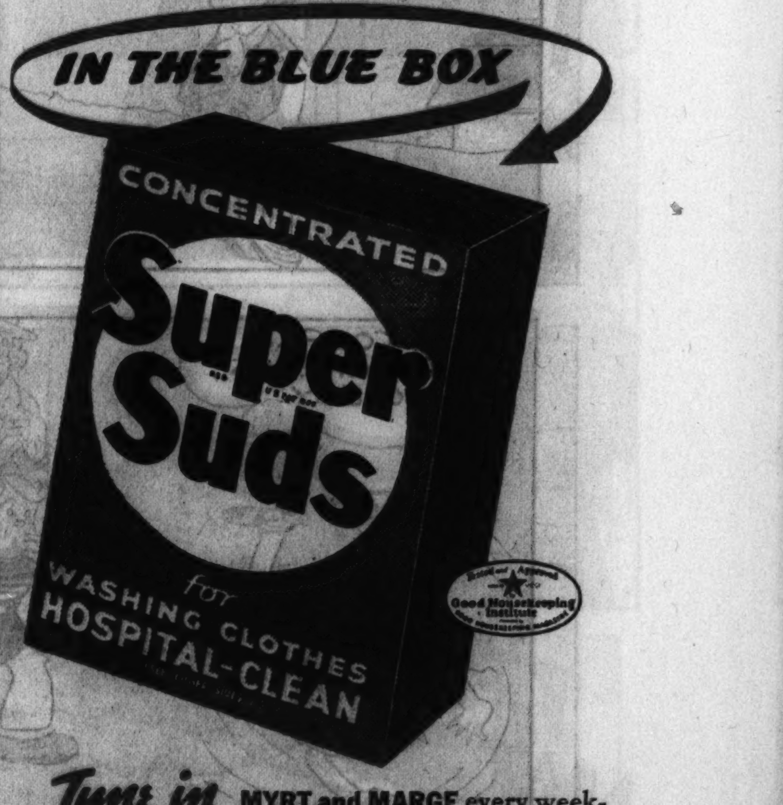
OOH, MOTHER, LOOK HOW QUICKLY THIS NEW SOAP MAKES SUDS! AND WHAT A LOT OF SUDS, TOO!
YES, MARION, ISN'T IT GRAND! THAT'S THE KIND OF SUDS THAT SOAK OUT THE DIRT IN A JIFFY!
Super Suds



GEE, MOTHER, THESE CLOTHES ARE ALL SO WHITE AND SWEET-SMELLING...AND WE'RE DONE MUCH SOONER, AREN'T WE?
YES...WITHOUT A BIT OF BACK-BREAKING SCRUBBING EITHER! I KNOW CONCENTRATED SUPER SUDS IS SAFE FOR THE CLOTHES, BECAUSE IT'S SO KIND TO MY HANDS!

HOW GLAD I AM NOW, THAT I WASH MY CLOTHES WITH CONCENTRATED SUPER SUDS, TO KNOW MY FAMILY IS PROTECTED AGAINST DANGEROUS GERMS.... THAT MY CLOTHES ARE REALLY CLEAN.... HOSPITAL-CLEAN!

Mrs. Kecher and her daughter, Marion



IN THE BLUE BOX
CONCENTRATED
Super Suds
for WASHING CLOTHES HOSPITAL-CLEAN
Good Housekeeping Institute

I AGREE WITH MRS. KECHER! NOW THAT I KNOW THE DANGER OF GERMS IN WASH, I USE CONCENTRATED SUPER SUDS TO GET MY CLOTHES HOSPITAL-CLEAN!

MRS. E. A. SARNO
of Natchitoches, La.

HOW CONCENTRATED SUPER SUDS WASHES CLOTHES HOSPITAL-CLEAN!

CONCENTRATED Super Suds piles up richer, thicker, far more active suds—even in hard water! Lively and long-lasting suds that end once and for all the drudgery of washday scrubbing—that quickly soak out dirt and give you a lovely snowy-white and sweet-smelling wash in far less time! Most important, you can be sure that germs are removed... that your clothes are really clean—Hospital-Clean. That does not mean sterile, but it does mean that most of the dangerous germs are removed or killed in the washing process. Yet Concentrated Super Suds is so safe that clothes last far longer . . . colors remain fresh and bright!

Get Concentrated Super Suds, in the blue box, right away! It is a Colgate-Palmolive-Peet product, tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute.

Tune in MYRT and MARGE every weekday but Saturday, Columbia nationwide Network.

FOR WASHING DISHES—SUPER SUDS IN THE FAMILIAR RED BOX!

Super Suds in the red box is the soap made especially for washing dishes. Dissolves instantly, cuts grease, banishes soap film . . . protects hands, saves time! Super Suds is approved by Good Housekeeping Institute.

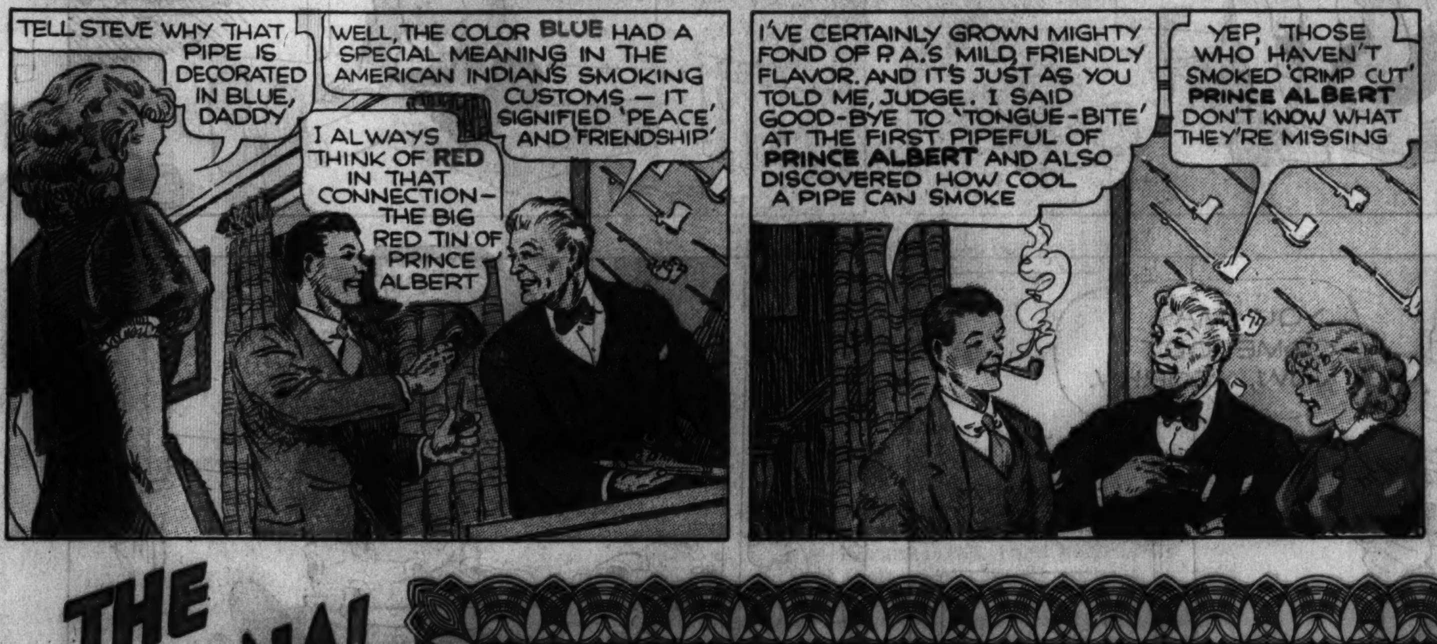
OL' JUDGE ROBBINS
-AND SO, JUDGE - I PRESENT YOU WITH THIS BEAUTIFUL PIPE TO ADD TO YOUR COLLECTION. IT WAS DESIGNED BY OUR PLUMBER, AND IS THE ONLY LEAD PIPE IN EXISTENCE -
I'M OVERWHELMED STEVE - HA! HA! BUT, SERIOUSLY, I ALREADY HAVE A LEAD TOBACCO PIPE IN MY COLLECTION
NO FOOLIN', JUDGE - YOU DON'T MEAN ANYONE EVER SMOKED A LEAD PIPE!
YEP - SOME OF OUR INDIAN TRIBES DID. HERE'S A VERY RARE EXAMPLE FROM MICHIGAN - NOTICE THE GRACEFUL DESIGN AND THE BLUE DECORATIONS
LA SALLE EXAMINED SEVERAL INDIAN LEAD MINES IN HIS HISTORIC JOURNEY DOWN THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER. THE RED MEN USED PRACTICALLY EVERY TYPE OF METAL AND STONE AS PIPE MATERIAL, INCLUDING LEAD
DON'T IMAGINE, THOUGH, THAT ALL LEAD PIPES WERE AS HANDSOME AS MINE. MANY WERE THE CRUDEST SORT OF TOBACCO BURNERS

Copyright, 1937, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company



TELL STEVE WHY THAT PIPE IS DECORATED IN BLUE, DADDY
WELL, THE COLOR BLUE HAD A SPECIAL MEANING IN THE AMERICAN INDIAN'S SMOKING CUSTOMS — IT SIGNIFIED 'PEACE' AND 'FRIENDSHIP'
I ALWAYS THINK OF RED IN THAT CONNECTION - THE BIG RED TIN OF PRINCE ALBERT
I'VE CERTAINLY GROWN MIGHTY FOND OF P.A.'S MILD FRIENDLY FLAVOR. AND IT'S JUST AS YOU TOLD ME, JUDGE. I SAID GOOD-BYE TO 'TONGUE-BITE' AT THE FIRST PIPEFUL OF PRINCE ALBERT AND ALSO DISCOVERED HOW COOL A PIPE CAN SMOKE
YEP, THOSE WHO HAVEN'T SMOKED 'CRIMP CUT' PRINCE ALBERT DON'T KNOW WHAT THEY'RE MISSING

THE ONE AND ONLY JOY SMOKE!

A coast-to-coast census would show Prince Albert far in front for popularity. P. A. is the world's largest-selling smoking tobacco. And it's won its way on sheer merit! Made from choice, aged tobaccos — it naturally has tastiness. The Prince Albert "no-bite" process removes harshness. And the scientific "crimp cut" gives you longer-burning, cooler-smoking tobacco. Prince Albert keeps prime. It's protected in tin. Get this princely joy smoke, gentlemen, and get a new idea of pipe-smoking contentment. P.A. is first choice for trim, tasty roll-your-owns too.

THE NATIONAL JOY SMOKE

PRINCE ALBERT MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

Smoke 20 fragrant pipefuls of Prince Albert. If you don't find it the mellowest, tastiest pipe tobacco you ever smoked, return the pocket tin with the rest of the tobacco in it to us at any time within a month from this date, and we will refund full purchase price, plus postage. (Signed) R. NAN STARTS a LUCKY QUARREL
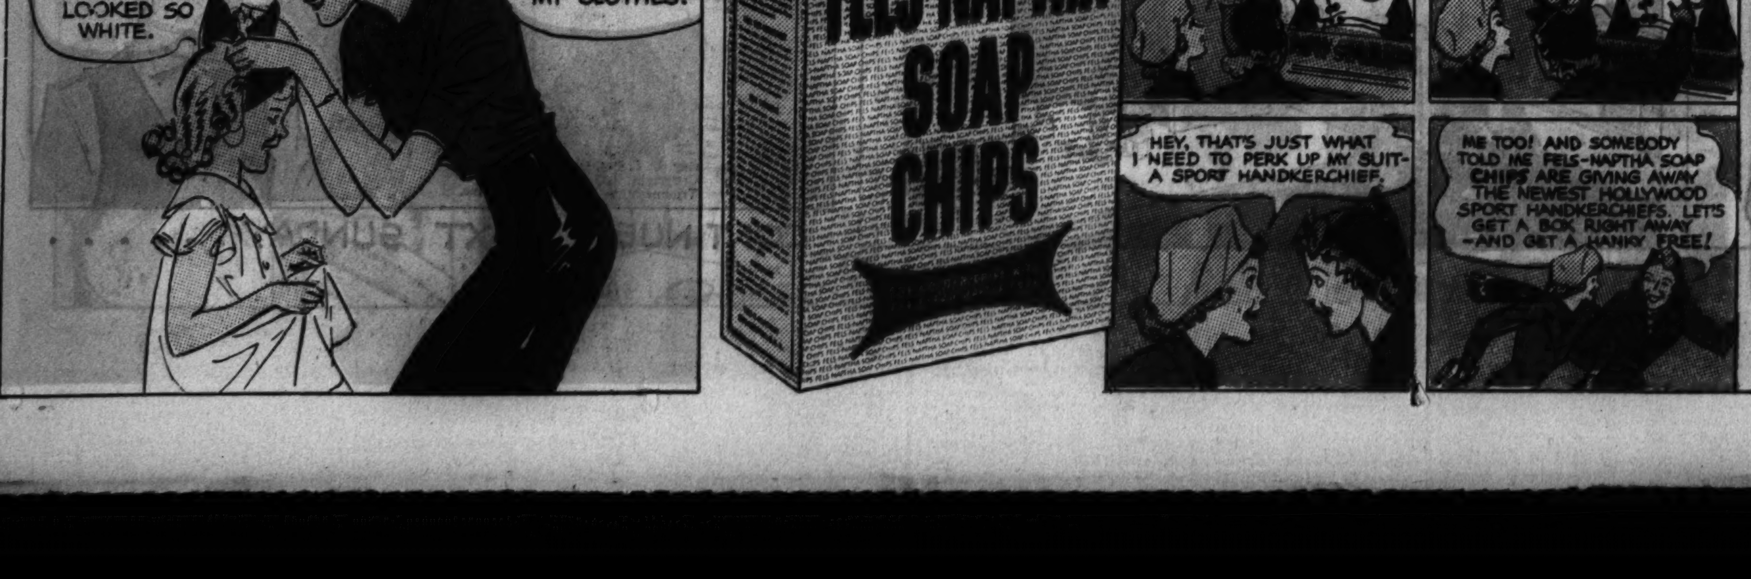
WHY, NAN, DIDN'T YOU HAVE A GOOD TIME AT BETTY'S ?
IT WAS HORRID. I HATE HER OLD PARTIES.
I WANTED TO BE SNOW QUEEN. BUT BETTY SAID MY DRESS WASN'T WHITE ENOUGH AND I HEARD HER MOTHER SAY ALL YOUR CLOTHES ARE FULL OF TATTLE-TALE GRAY.
THE CAT! I'LL NEVER SPEAK TO HER AS LONG AS I LIVE.
CUT YOU DEAD? YOU BET I DID. TELLING PEOPLE I'M TOO LAZY TO GET MY CLOTHES CLEAN.
WHY, NANCY LANE. I DID NO SUCH THING. COME ON, AND I'LL TELL YOU ABOUT IT
WHAT I SAID WAS THAT YOUR CLOTHES HAVE TATTLE-TALE GRAY. THAT'S NOT YOUR FAULT - IT'S YOUR SOAP'S, FOR LEAVING DIRT BEHIND IT.
BUT I'VE TRIED ALL KINDS OF SOAP CHIPS, AND POWDERS, AND...
BUT YOU HAVEN'T TRIED MY KIND. IT'S BRAND-NEW. FELS-NAPTHA SOAP CHIPS. THEY'RE CURLS OF RICHER, GOLDEN SOAP AND PLENTY OF NAPTHA. THEY WASH A MILLION TIMES CLEANER.
THERE'S NO SNEEZY DUST IN FELS-NAPTHA SOAP CHIPS EITHER. AND IF SOAP HURTS YOUR NOSE, THINK WHAT IT DOES TO YOUR CLOTHES.
GROCERIES
HEY, DROP ME OFF AT THE GROCER'S, WILL YOU?
I WAS A GOOSE TO BE MAD, HELEN, AND I'M GETTING SOME OF THOSE NEW FELS-NAPTHA SOAP CHIPS RIGHT NOW.
YOU'LL LOVE 'EM. THEY'RE NICE TO HANDS, TOO. THERE'S SOOTHING GLYCERINE IN THEM.



FEW WEEKS LATER
GEE, BETTY CAN'T POKE FUN AT ME TODAY. NO DRESS EVER LOOKED SO WHITE.
I'LL SAY SHE CAN'T! THOSE NEW FELS-NAPTHA SOAP CHIPS CERTAINLY CHASED TATTLE-TALE GRAY OUT OF MY CLOTHES.
FELS-NAPTHA SOAP CHIPS
ISN'T SHE BEAUTIFUL? SHE'S MY FAVORITE MOVIE STAR
SHE CERTAINLY DRESSES LIKE A MILLION DOLLARS. LOOK AT THAT SPORT HANDKERCHIEF PEEKING OUT OF HER POCKET.

LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP

Use Lifebuoy regularly to protect freshness . . . guard your skin beauty

Millions of American women—and men—have learned the real secret of lasting freshness . . . The sure way to end "B. O." . . . More of them use Lifebuoy for the bath than any other soap . . . 120,000 interviews by eight leading magazines reveal these facts!

Lifebuoy is deservedly an overwhelming favorite . . . It contains a special purifying ingredient not present in any other well-known toilet soap. Its abundant lather penetrates the pores, removes all impurities—leaves you feeling extra-clean—because you are extra-clean.

Millions of dainty American women swear by Lifebuoy for complexion care, too. Its lather is milder than many so-called "beauty soaps" and "baby soaps" —20% milder by scientific test on all types of skins—dry, oily and medium.

But you try Lifebuoy! "Use it a week and you'll use it always!" That's what any Lifebuoy user will tell you!

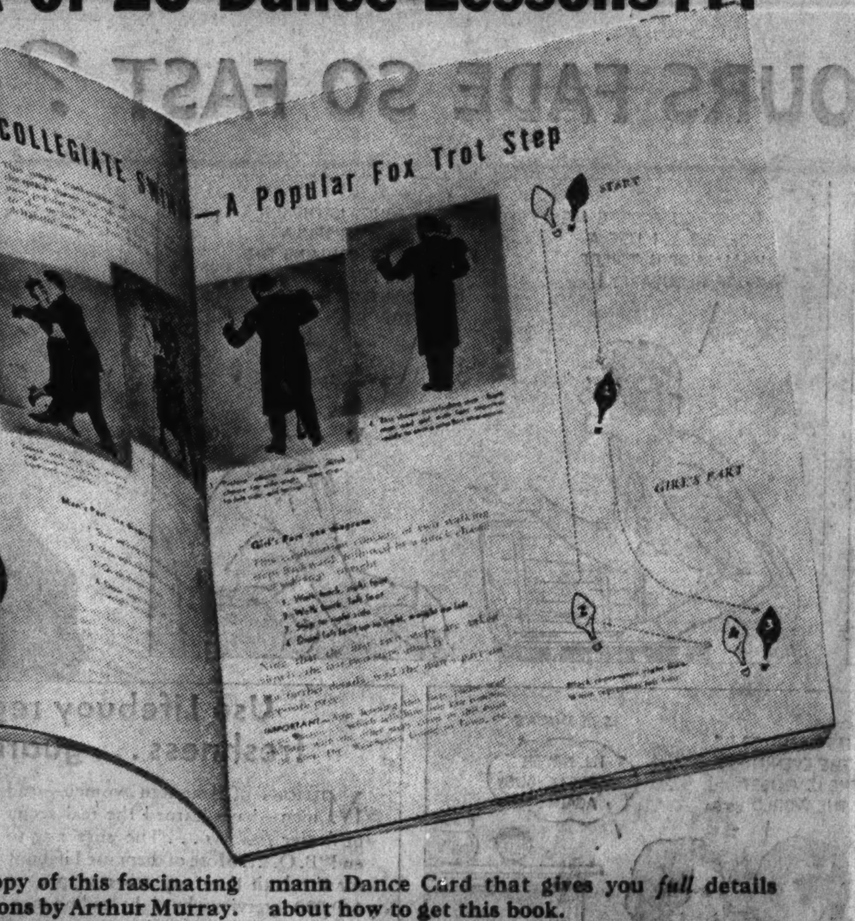
Learn how to "Susie Q"

"Tango"

"Rhumba"

Get ARTHUR MURRAY'S Exciting Book of 20 Dance Lessons . . .



FREE DANCE BOOK save your YEAST LABELS

Don't fail to get your copy of this fascinating new book of 20 dance lessons by Arthur Murray. Learn how to Rhumba, Tango, Waltz! Study the hints on how to follow, how to lead, how to be light in your partner's arms! Every page illustrated. Photos—diagrams make every step easy! Ask your grocer for the FREE Fleischmann Dance Card that gives you full details about how to get this book.

IT WOULD COST $5 EACH PRIVATE LESSON TO LEARN THESE STEPS IN ARTHUR MURRAY'S NEW YORK STUDIO

SEE WHAT FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST DID FOR THIS GIRL AND BOY

BEFORE

Before Elizabeth Wagner, of Douglaston, N. Y., began eating 3 cakes of yeast daily, her skin looked like this. "I didn't want to go anywhere," she says.

AFTER

Elizabeth's skin is clear and attractive once more. She says: "Since Fleischmann's Yeast helped clear up my pimples, I'm getting dates again."

BEFORE

Before he started eating Fleischmann's Yeast, Paul Shea, of Springfield, N. J., had pimples like these. "I got so I hated to be seen," he says.

AFTER

See how Fleischmann's Yeast helped clear Paul's skin. He says: "Any boy that's bothered by pimples ought to try it."

Don't Miss This Big Chance— Learn the Newest Dance Steps and Have More Good Times

THE better you dance, the more popular you're bound to be! But—even if you know all the latest steps—you can't help feeling self-conscious and ill at ease if your looks are spoiled by pimples!

Unfortunately, many young people have trouble with their skin during adolescence. Just when they want to appear at their best, these unsightly skin eruptions come, making them miss out on good times and popularity.

Don't let pimples spoil your fun. Fleischmann's Yeast has helped thousands of boys and girls correct this trouble. It helps clear up your skin by clearing the blood of the waste poisons that usually aggravate pimples and ordinary skin eruptions.

If your face has any tendency to pimples, start eating Fleischmann's Yeast at once. Eat 3 cakes every day for at least a month. Give it a real chance to help you. Remember—a clear, fresh skin is one of the biggest attractions any girl or boy can have. It makes people like you on sight!

And—while you are eating Fleischmann's Yeast—be sure to save the labels for Arthur Murray's exciting new book of 20 dance lessons!

Dr. R. E. Lee, well-known physician, says: "STICK TO IT, and Fleischmann's Yeast will help clear up ADOLESCENT PIMPLES"

During adolescence—from about 13 to 25—the body is changing, maturing. Important glands develop at this time, causing disturbances throughout the system. The skin, especially, gets oversensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin—and pimples break through!

Fleischmann's fresh Yeast helps correct adolescent pimples by clearing these skin irritants out of the blood.

Just eat 3 cakes daily—a cake about ½ hour before each meal. Eat it plain, or in a little water. Continue to eat it regularly, and watch how it helps your skin to clear!

TO GET BOOK JUST FILL THIS CARD WITH YEAST LABELS

FLEISCHMANN DANCE CARD

The Arthur Murray Dance Book is NOT FOR SALE. It is being especially offered by the makers of Fleischmann's Yeast in the hope that it will bring girls and boys everywhere more good times.

The ONLY WAY to get a copy is by saving the labels from the yeast cakes you eat each day. Ask your grocer for one of the free Fleischmann Dance Cards. Paste the labels on as directed. Send it in. The book is yours.

If your grocer has no Dance Cards—you can still get Arthur Murray's book by pasting 81 yeast labels on a piece of paper, or putting them in an envelope. Send them with your name and address to Fleischmann's Yeast, 701 Washington Street, New York City. (This offer holds good until August 31, 1937.)

MOLER SYSTEM OF COLLEGES

Was established in 1893 to OVERCOME THE DRUDGERY of the Apprenticeship Method of Learning BEAUTY CULTURE and BARBERING.

Moler's originated a better plan—Less Time required — Less Difficulty — Better Methods—both in Learning and Selling Your Services to Customers.

Now, why go back to the old plan in a neighborhood where the schooling differs but slightly from the Apprenticeship Drudgery of the discarded methods of 1893? . . . Don't do it!

MOLER LEADERSHIP
The Moler Manual has been the Standard Text Book for years! . . . Dr. Karr's Personality Course leads the way to Outstanding Success!

AND NOW THE LATEST MOLER ORIGINATION
Our newest development, a professional sensation—the Moler Magna-scope that takes the guesswork out of Facial and Scalp Treatments! Big paying feature in the shop.

Let Moler's explain this new process. Easy to Learn. Offered in our Regular course. Days or evenings. Easy payments. Employment help. Call, phone or write.

NEAR NORTH SIDE

"Well, here's where we head in, pater." These words from my boy sound pretty good to me every night when we reach home. The Cook Estate tries to make their studios and apartments so darn comfortable and homelike that that's the place where you will like to head in, too. Double height ceilings, balconies and fireplaces. 2, 3, and 5 rooms. The 5 room is just great. Also a beautifully furnished studio apartment and other interesting places in which to live.

—COULD YOU INVEST IN ANYTHING— that will match the security, independence, or investment of a good farm? Remember, the productivity of a good fertile farm is not affected by distressed economic conditions. Incomes from farms are very high, but the prices of good farms ARE THE LOWEST IN HISTORY, based on their present income.

We have highly productive farms with good buildings only 60 to 90 miles south of Chicago in the famous Illinois Corn Belt, selling today FAR BELOW THEIR ACTUAL VALUE.

There is only a certain amount of good land. There will never be any more. OWN SOME OF IT. Buy it with good judgment and IT WILL TAKE CARE OF YOU AND YOUR CHILDREN.

Write or call our Farm Department,

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Bob Becker

A Spring Pastoral.

April 24, 1937.

THE lambs on the Wheaton farm are a happy, frisky lot these days. No longer are they confined in crowded quarters around the sheepfold, but can jump, run, and buck like miniature broncos around the pasture.

When we were on the Wheaton farm the other day the ewes and the lambs were scattered all over a big pasture that recently has turned a deep, rich green . . . the kind of green that seems to come only in the spring following heavy April rains.

It's lucky that every little lamb grows his own insulated sleeping outfit. When we looked over the pasture and then walked around one corner we noticed how wet and soggy the ground was. But that didn't keep the plump, playful lambs from stretching out on the cold ground for siestas in the sun.

While the little fellows slept the ewes nibbled away at the new grass. It isn't very long and can't be easy to get, but practically every ewe was trying her best to munch green grass. But all of them come in around evening for a meal of hay.

30 Lambs of Each Sex.

An interesting average has been recorded on the pure bred Southdown ewes that have lambed this spring. There are sixty lambs from these ewes. Exactly thirty are rams and thirty are ewe lambs. But these figures may be changed, inasmuch as more than twenty ewes have not yet lambed.

While we were in the barnyard the other day Rawlings was concerned about the hiding place of two turkey hen nests. He said he didn't know where the crafty hens had nested. Apparently they had built nests along the road, but he hadn't been able to locate them. He was worrying whether the turkeys had nested on high or low ground. If the birds had started to lay eggs on very low ground they probably needed a raft to float their nests during the heavy rains last week.

Rowdy, gangsterlike tactics pursued by two Rhode Island Red roosters on the Wheaton farm a few days ago have sent a third into temporary retirement. We saw this much battered rooster taking it easy in the sheepyard. Then Rawlings told us how the pair of Rhode Island Reds had ganged on this fellow and given him an awful drubbing. He had to be rescued and put in the sheepyard where the hoodlum roosters couldn't get to him.

Rat Population Reduced.

In the first twenty-four hours following a heavy distribution of red squill baits for rats on the Yorkville farm it was apparent that a lot of these animal pests no longer were going to be a bother. Although red squill sometimes takes three days to kill a rat, the boys saw a number that had succumbed to the poison during the first day.

A hog house, granary, sheep barn, poultry house, and a dwelling at Yorkville were treated. For the first "attack" around these buildings 560 bread and lard baits, 490 sliced ham and lard baits, and several hundred cheese baits were used. The animals had a grand time with this food. After their all night feast not enough rats were left to make an impression on the second distribution of squill poison three days later.

Chicagoans Buying Estate Properties Near Woodstock in McHenry County

BUSINESS MEN ADOPT FARMING AS AN AVOCATION

Buy About 25,000 Acres in Three Years.

The growing interest of Chicagoans in farm properties, which they are acquiring partly for the purpose of making money, but mostly for pleasure, is indicated in the purchase of more than 200 farms in McHenry county since early in 1934.

George B. Huffman, real estate broker of Woodstock, which is in the center of the estate section of McHenry county, said the average holding of city-folk farmers is about 125 acres, which means that in less than three years some 25,000 acres have been taken by persons whose regular business or vocation has not been farming.

Brokers and doctors, lawyers and advertising men, cartoonists, and persons representing many different callings are included among the 200 persons who do a great deal of commuting from Chicago to McHenry county.

Paul H. Davis Has Farm.

Of the 200 farms acquired by city dwellers, Huffman said that 20 were purchased in 1934, 50 in 1935, 100 in 1936, and 30 so far this year.

Paul H. Davis, head of the brokerage house bearing his name and former president of the Chicago Stock exchange, has about 400 acres northeast of Woodstock, where he raises Hereford cattle. Davis also has a good hunting ground on his property.

Dr. V. T. Nylander, a dentist in downtown Chicago, has a 160 acre farm near Woodstock. When he is not busy with his practice, Dr. Nylander engages in farming. His wife is the conductor of the Woman's Symphony Orchestra of Chicago.

Leeds Mitchell, a partner in the investment house of Winthrop, Mitchell & Co., has a 320 acre farm southeast of Hebron, where he has a modern chicken ranch. On an eighty acre tract on his farm he has some 7,000 chickens. The chickens are kept in tiers of cages, where they are fed scientifically.

Specializes in Holstein Cattle.

Mrs. Jane C. Henning, widow of Charles F. Henning, vice president of the United States Gypsum company, has one of the finest farm properties in the district, her lands totaling some 750 acres. Mrs. Henning specializes in Holstein cattle.

John Chivers, a young Princeton graduate and a former official of the Brinks Express company, is another city dweller who decided to become a farmer. He bought about 200 acres northeast of Woodstock.

In the eastern section of the district Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Maxwell own 750 acres. They have just built a large home into which they are moving this May. Maxwell is in the wall paper business in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Jewell Dick have two farms in the Bull valley section of McHenry county. Dick, who is connected with the A. B. Dick company, plans to remodel the buildings on his properties to harmonize with others in the surrounding country.

Banker Purchases Farm.

George F. Spaulding, vice president of the Northern Trust company, has purchased a 200 acre farm west of Woodstock. Not far distant from his property is the 240 acre farm belonging to Carl H. Zeiss, general counsel of the Northern Trust.

Comer Winter, an advertising man, has several large farms in the area. Besides getting much pleasure out of his lands, Winter said that he has been able to operate them on a profitable business. He has a large dairy herd.

Chester Gould, who creates Dick Tracy for THE TRIBUNE, gets some of the inspiration for his work in the quiet of his seventy-five acres, east of Woodstock.

Farm lands in the area are reported to be selling at an average of $125 an acre, although it is said some land is being sold around $100 an acre. The adjoining map shows the location and ownership of many of the farms owned by city dwellers in the district.

News of the Architects

Smoke pollution in Chicago will be discussed at the regular April meeting of the Illinois Society of Architects at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday at the Architects' Club of Chicago, 1801 Prairie avenue.

GENERAL MORTGAGE INVESTMENTS, INC.

GOING UP?

Leading financial authorities seem to be of the opinion that interest rates are going up. We offer real estate owners the opportunity of refinancing their first mortgages at prevailing interest rates. Commitments are being made for the balance of 1937.

Map showing location of farms purchased in recent years, most of them by Chicagoans, near Woodstock, in McHenry county. More than 200 farms have been purchased since the early part of 1934. Chicago business and professional people are finding profit and pleasure in running their farms, according to some of those who have bought such property. To the left of each name is a number which corresponds with a number on the map, indicating the location of the property. To the right are a number and letter to assist in locating the properties on the map. Letters will be found at the sides of the map and the numbers at the top and bottom.

SOARING WAGES BLOCK CHICAGO BUILDING BOOM

Leaders Cite Fact City Is in Seventh Place.

One obstacle blocking the potential building boom in Chicago is the high hourly wages of building trades workers, leaders of the industry declared yesterday. Their remarks were prompted by a report showing Chicago in seventh place among cities as to the volume of construction in the first quarter of 1937.

Bricklayers last week negotiated an increase, raising wages from $1.50 to $1.70 an hour. They said they would have been content to continue at the old rate but for the fact that the other trades were getting increases. Carpenters expect $1.62½ an hour, instead of $1.50, and painters $1.67, instead of $1.50. Plumbers, steamfitters, cement finishers, and other trades are among the crafts negotiating raises.

Labor Costs Restrict Building.

"There is no question but that the labor cost is an important factor in holding down the volume of building," said H. Mayne Stanton, executive secretary of the Associated Builders of Chicago. "Employers are generally agreed that raises in wages are not justified this year and that the industry will suffer as a result."

Fred M. Lorish, president of the Chicago Real Estate board, asserted that the more increases there are in hourly rates, the longer it will be until building reaches normal.

"We have a situation in Chicago today that makes it virtually impossible to invest in new buildings and expect to recover the amount put into construction," Lorish said.

Rent-Producing Building Delayed.

"The level of construction workers' wages, now rising even higher, must give pause to prospective builders of rent-producing properties.

J. Soule Warterfield, vice president of Starrett Building company, said the building trades should start a constructive apprentice system looking forward to demands for more skilled workers than are now available here. When the city finally issues its new building code, costs will be reduced an average of 20 per cent, he said.

E. M. Craig, executive secretary of the National Association of Building Trades Employers, in announcing the figures on building activity throughout the country, said most cities are complaining of a lack of desirable dwelling accommodations.

LAWYER BUILDS $30,000 RESIDENCE ON SOUTH SIDE

Florence Williams.

Contracts have been let for construction of a residence to cost approximately $30,000 for Winfield S. Williams, an attorney, at 1116 East 50th street. Williams recently acquired the site, which measures 70 by 100 feet.

Ralph C. Harris designed the residence, which will be of Georgian architecture. Two stories in height and of brick construction, the house will contain nine rooms, a screened sleeping porch, three baths, and a two car garage. The house will be air conditioned.

Features will be a studio on the second floor and a picture gallery in the basement, where will be displayed paintings by Florence White Williams, the daughter of the builder. The basement gallery will have knotty pine walls and ceiling, and the rest of the interior of the dwelling will follow the Georgian style.

PLAN TO BUILD NINETY HOMES OF COLONIAL TYPE

A residential development in Glenview, in which all the houses to be erected will be of colonial architecture, was announced yesterday by three north shore real estate developers. W. H. Jackson, who is in charge of the sales, said it is proposed to build ninety houses in the area, which is west of Skokie road and east of Waukegan road, in Glenview. Five are under construction.

"We have chosen colonial architecture," Jackson said, "first, because it is beautiful and dignified; second, because it is adaptable to a variety of tastes and needs. There are many forms of colonial, the New England, Virginia, Louisiana, and others, which give us variety."

The others in the group which are carrying on the work are Leonard H. Roach, technical adviser, and George Gonsolves, contractor and builder. Ernest Benkert, Winnetka, designed the five houses being constructed.

BILLS REALTY BUSINESS ACTIVE IN FIRST QUARTER

First quarter business of Bills Realty, Inc., stepped up toward the close of the period after a slow start, F. W. Bills, president, reported yesterday. He said eighty-four deals were closed during the period, among them the sale of twenty bungalows, fifteen residences, nine apartment buildings, two commercial properties, one industrial property, and fifteen homesites. Bills said that, while the business was spread among the company's branch offices, the greatest activity was shown in the Evanston-north shore and Oak Park-west suburban offices.

Broadway-Cornelia Corner Is Leased for Drug Store

J. M. Simons has leased from Jacob DeKoven the store at the southeast corner of Broadway and Cornelia street for ten years from May 1 on a minimum guarantee rental basis. After extensive alterations, Simons will open a drug store, which will be the fourth in a chain of north side stores. Coen-Berkson & Co., Inc was broker.

MOVING DAY JAM IS PREDICTED FOR THIS WEEK-END

Thousands Ask for Vans for Use at Same Time.

The most acute moving day congestion in many years will develop at the end of the week when thousands of Chicagoans will pack up and go to new homes, Daniel Healy, secretary of the Movers Association of Chicago, predicted yesterday. Several real estate dealers said they expect slightly more moving this year than last, when about 45,000 addresses were changed.

"In the thirteen years I have been connected with this association I have never seen such a situation," Healy said: "Every one wants to move next Saturday. In previous years we have been able to get people to move a few days before May 1 or a few days after, but this year every one is determined to do his moving on Saturday. As a result we may expect turmoil over the week-end. There are not enough trucks to move every one on one day."

Realty Men Expect Increase.

Healy said he was not able to predict whether the total of families moving this spring will be larger than it was last year. Representative real estate men in various sections of the city estimated that more families will move this year than in the spring of 1936. They based their estimates on the number of leases they have written.

Last year both the Peoples Gas and Commonwealth Edison companies received 45,000 requests to change services to new addresses. The Commonwealth Edison up to Saturday had received a few more requests for service changes than it had in the corresponding period a year ago. The Peoples Gas requests were about the same as a year ago.

The Illinois Bell Telephone company reported that from April 1 to 21 it had received 10,263 change requests compared with 9,847 in the same period of 1936. However, all requests for changed services do not indicate the number that will require the services of vans to move.

Choice Is Limited.

Real estate men say that the high percentage of occupancy in moderate priced desirable apartments has served to hold moving down to some extent. In some instances tenants have not been able to meet rent advances and consequently they had to move to cheaper quarters, but real estate men say this has been infrequent.

"As a matter of fact," said one realtor whose company handles about 11,000 flats on the south side, "I believe that there has been a great deal of exaggeration on rent boosts. It is true that rents have been increased, but the increases have not been as large as reported and in our experience most increases have been accepted by tenants.

"We have only about a 1 per cent vacancy in moderate priced and moderate sized apartment against a vacancy of 21 per cent in 1932. The apartment situation has improved in more ways than one. Our collections have improved greatly. Tenants doubling up are taking the large apartments which have been hard to rent."

A firm representing 5,000 apartments on the north side said it had 97 per cent occupancy and expects 98 per cent by May 1. It reports more moving this year than last. Another firm doing gold coast business on the near north side said there were few vacancies in the apartments of eight rooms and fewer, but vacancies are still high in the de luxe large flats of 12 to 18 rooms. Eight room flats are not regarded large among expensive apartments.

2 REORGANIZED BUILDINGS WILL PAY DIVIDENDS

Dividend payments on the Engineering building, at Wacker drive and Wells street, and on the Coronado apartments at Winthrop and Rosemont avenues, were announced yesterday by Arthur F. Mohl, secretary of the American Bond and Mortgage company committees which effected reorganization of the properties. The dividend on the Engineering building will amount to 75 cents a share and that on the Coronado will amount to $1.50 a share. These properties are being operated through stock trusts for the benefit of the depositing bondholders.

Chemical Company Leases Wabash Avenue Building

The Trojan Products and Manufacturing company, 3107 South Wabash avenue, has leased the building at 3130-36 South Wabash avenue from A. R. Newberg for an undisclosed term of years. The company, a chemical concern, manufactures cleaning compounds and sanitary supplies.

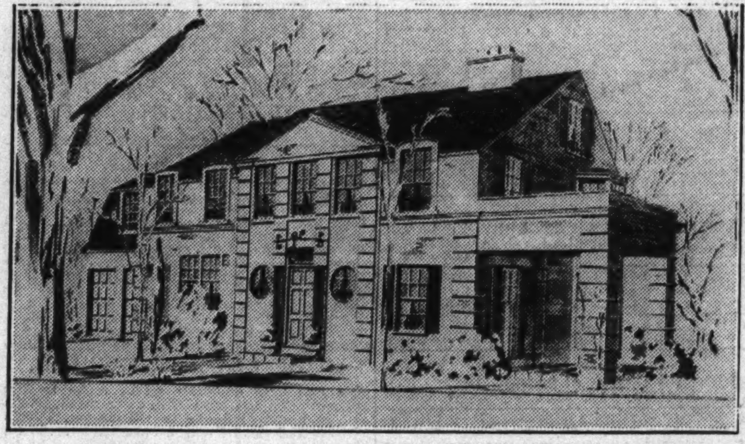
New Northfield Residence



Residence under construction for George B. Atkinson, manager of the furniture division of the Merchandise Mart, on a heavily wooded acre at the northeast corner of Willow road and Thornwood lane, Northfield. Designed by Otis & Fuller, architects, the house will contain ten rooms and four and a half bathrooms. The house will be winter air conditioned.

HomeConstructionProgram Is Started in Wilmette

A program for the eventual construction of seventy-five residences in Wilmette was announced yesterday by the Realty Mortgage Investment company. The first in the group has just been completed at the northwest corner of Thornwood and Cleveland avenues, and the others are to be built in the same locality. The houses will range from five to seven rooms. Ground for five more is to be broken immediately.

BUILDING IN OAK PARK IS LEASED BY ARNOLD, INC.

J. E. Ehrenhalt & Co. announced closing a number of business leases, including the following: Arnold, Inc., which operates the Lanathan Stores, has leased the two story building at 1115 Lake street, Oak Park, for ten years on a minimum guarantee and percentage rental basis. The company then rented part of the ground floor space to Sherman Wash Wear, Inc., on a similar rental basis.

Sherman Wash Wear leased the store at 815 Davis street, Evanston. The Gray Goose Self Service Stores, Inc., shoe store operators, have leased the store at 6516 South Halsted street.

Group of Roseland District Houses Nears Completion

Four in a group of twelve new residences for the Sheldon Heights section of the Roseland district are nearing completion, Charles H. Brandt & Co., developers of the section, announced yesterday. A fifth, at 11357 Lowe avenue, has been completed. Of old New England type, it was designed by Franklin L. and Olga V. Paul. This is reported to be one of the first building improvement programs to be undertaken in Roseland since the depression.

Here Are Smart Linen Frocks for You to Make

By RHEA SEEGER.

ROUND THE CLOCK with linen . . . linen for daytime clothes, for snappy sports and spectator sports outfits, for hats, bags, belts, shoes, and for costume accessories . . linen jackets, linen coats, linen dinner and dance dresses, and fine linen lingerie for hot weather wear.

For travel there is a trick new processed stuff that absolutely refuses to wrinkle, no matter what the punishment. It comes in a stunning blackish-gray and in bright colors.

Never have the colors been so delectably pictorial, from the watery sherbet pastels to the vivid orange tones, the clear turquoise blues, the royal blues, the reds and the yellows. Tobacco brown, cornflower blue, and black go on forever, while oyster white, beige, and gray are the potential buys of the season.

Printed linens are the most refreshingly crisp finds in the stores. Tiny, effective floral patterns, variegated dots in bold color contrast; big, splashy border effects for play clothes; peasant patterns borrowed from printed challis, huge tropic blooms and buds and foliage, in bold relief; beautiful black and white printed linens that look like Japanese prints, good looking ring dots in white against blue, red, green, or gold backgrounds, are just a few of the latest patterns.

Striped gypsy stuff is new and going strong, both in thin linen and in street linen, while a white daisy print against cool gray, with the centers of the daisies in red or gold yellow, is proving a big success among the gray enthusiasts. The daisies and butterfly printed linens are two new spring favorites, and they come in almost every color combine.

With daytime dresses as the biggest summer attraction . . . the most necessary sort of clothes for every one . . . we selected the following linen swatches and the well known Tribune Clotilde patterns as timely fashion combines. All dresses are slim, smart, and easy to make.

Illustrating the linen page for spring wardrobe collectors are four easy to wear and just as easy to make dresses.

Clotilde pattern No. 3192. . . . The newest gypsy print linen in stripes of many colors is used for this street dress, with the four pockets featuring the striped material in a horizontal treatment that contrasts vividly with the vertically arranged stripes in the dress.

Campus Mode pattern No. T-8510. . . . A clever two piece combine of monotone linen dress, worn with a short jacket of dotted linen. This is a stunning street ensemble for hot weather daytime wear, for the cap sleeves are comfortably cool.

Clotilde pattern No. 3040. . . . Linen one piece dress with lacings in white or in a contrasting color. A good frock for spectator sportswear, for summer office wear and, in dark colors, for street and general purpose wear.

Clotilde pattern No. 3192. . . . Printed floral linen in another easy to fashion one piece dress. The neckline and short sleeves make it especially comfortable and cool.

All linen fabrics used on this page are to be found in Chicago stores, and the Clotilde and Campus Mode patterns may be ordered by means of the coupon below.

IT is said that fat legs are admired in Mexico, but we doubt it. There is no place, certainly, where legs with muscles bulging at the calves, like those of a prize fighter, or legs with spindly shanks and rawboned ankles, projecting like walnut buttons on a bureau drawer, are pointed to as attributes of beauty.

With skirts up to 14 inches from the floor, the yardstick of beauty standards chalks up legs again, and you're going to have to look to these extremities if your figure is to be fashionably attenuated for this season's short dresses and bathing suits.

As important as the contours of your legs are the suppleness and vigor with which you move them. Grace and flexibility are characteristics of youthful legs. After a woman is 30 the tonicity of her legs, that peculiar elastic condition of healthy tissues which imparts vigor and which gives that quick stepping muscular activity, loses its snap if she abandons the active habits of her youth.

TAKE a tip from the beauties of the stage, radio, and screen, who know that they can't go any farther than their legs will carry them. Note how they exercise these members, massage them, apply artificial aids to step up the circulation, give them vigorous workouts for flexibility and suppleness, participate in all forms of outdoor sports and gymnasium routines to keep their legs shapely and limber.

Gracie Allen, who doubles a stellar career before the microphone and on the movie lot, became a comedienne because she tripped and fell as she was dancing off a vaudeville stage in San Francisco as a small-time trooper. The audience liked the humor of the situation so much that it clamored for more comedy antics. With this cue Gracie devised her act accordingly. But she was slow to get over the humiliation of faulty leg work.

She sought the advice of a well known athletic trainer, who prescribed the same workout for her legs that he required of his wrestlers and boxers to give them their catlike movements of foot in the ring. She was told to swim an hour a day, thus exercising every muscle of her body and giving her legs that perfect coördination which is so necessary if they are to respond to every need of the body in walking, standing, and sitting.

In addition to the actual swimming in water, Gracie practiced the Australian crawl, and back, breast, and side strokes while lying on her abdomen on a bench. A special exercise recommended to loosen knee tendons and muscles, that basic point of graceful movement, was borrowed from a Russian folk dance. It is one which she still includes in her daily limbering up routine: the familiar sitting down posture, with arms folded across the chest, legs bent at the knee, shuffling out and in heel and toe, accented in a quick dance tempo. She passes this on as an ideal exercise for keeping legs supple and for reducing the hips.

For her daily massage she lies down with a pillow under her hips, with more pillows under her feet and, with forefinger and thumb of each hand, begins at the heel of each foot and pulls the flesh of her limb upward in long firm strokes to the knee. This massaging breaks down any fatty tissues which may accumulate, works up a good circulation, and relieves congestion in the tangled network of nerves by forcing the blood stream upward.

GERTRUDE NIESEN, singing star of the screen, whose famous legs helped to win her headlines in the "Follies," sees to it that exercise and care keep her muscles pliant and responsive. Flexible tendons in the knees, strong ankles, and good circulation in her feet contribute to the bounding vitality which makes her move as if her legs were attached to springs.

She keeps a stationary bicycle in her home in Hollywood, which she pedals five miles a day, a good daily stunt, she thinks, for keeping the legs in shape. An automatic timing device signals with a bell when the mileage is up.

She advocates plunging the feet and legs alternately in hot and cold water to work up a circulation in these members, concluding by rubbing table salt over the entire surface of the legs and rinsing with cold water.

A problem which confronted Martha Raye, "trucking" expert and singing comedienne of the radio and screen, early in her stage career was that of reducing "bunched" muscles in her legs, those objectionable bumps on the calves which come from the rigors of training to become a dancer. But persistent workouts by pounding her legs with clinched fists, followed by a rubber roller on those bundles of muscles rising from the calves of her legs, were successful in smoothing them down.

"Prop your legs up on a stool under an infra-red lamp" advises Miss Raye. "Annoint them with a cream stimulant, and massage, with both hands grasping the fleshy parts of the legs, pulling and twisting vigorously from the arch of the foot to the knee. The heat, the penetrating ointment, and the massaging combine to iron out the snarls and to make your muscles long and smooth instead of short and knotted. This takes time and patience, but it can be done."

JOY HODGES, who began her career as a dancer, has abandoned her professional turns with toe and heel to sing on the radio and screen. But her tricky footwork still is something to be reckoned with. She still can do a cartwheel with the best acrobats, and it is her perfectly coördinated muscles which make her one of the best tennis, badminton, and golf players in the country. Suppleness and grace of movement are among Miss Hodges' principal attributes of beauty.

She acquired an agile foot movement for her dancing routines by jumping a rope and by walking on her toes, for fifteen and twenty minutes a day, to strengthen her ankle muscles. She still considers these basic practices for any person who wishes to keep the muscles of her feet and legs elastic and springy.

Miss Donnelly's authoritative articles, counseling women in matters of beauty and charm, appear every day in the feature pages of The Chicago Tribune.

SOME OF HOLLYWOOD'S LOVLIEST LIMBS

At right: All ready for a romp on the terrace is Gertrude Niesen. She earns her daily bread singing the blues, but her famous legs did a great deal to help her win headlines in the "Follies." Gertrude sees to it that exercise and care keep her leg muscles pliant and responsive. Flexible tendons in the knees, strong ankles and good circulation in her feet contribute to the bounding vitality which makes her move as if her legs were attached to springs.

Above: A problem which confronted Martha Raye, "trucking" expert and singing comedienne, early in her career was that of reducing "bunched" muscles in her legs, those objectionable bumps on the calves which result from the rigors of training to become a dancer. This photo shows that Martha overcame the difficulty well.

At left: Don't let the hula costume fool you. It's Martha Raye behind the grass and lei, and the pretty leg she extends for your scrutiny is the result of careful exercise as well as natural endowment. By persistent workouts of pounding her legs with clenched fists, followed by a rubber roller on calf bumps, Martha smoothed down the contours of her limbs.

Handwriting of Jimmy Durante, Stage and Movie Star, Gives Tribune Graphologist a Real Jolt

tive, literary, cultured, changeable, and versatile. Those who always have considered Jimmy the prize fool he pretends to be will have to change their opinion or give up their faith in graphology.

The signature has the dash [and unreadibility!] of a man who thinks faster than he can write. His signature is much more illegible than the body of the writing. I'd say that inwardly Durante is much more hesitant than he would seem to be.

Notice the involved capital H that he makes. This is an unusual letter formation which means—of all things!—the kind of person who gets himself into very bad predicaments and doesn't know how it happened but almost invariably gets out, to everybody's amazement.

All the a's and o's are wide open, and I'd say that Jimmy can talk, likes to talk, and insists upon talking. What would you say? Of course, he probably has found that is one grand way of getting into the predicaments I have mentioned, but he can talk himself out of a bad spot as well as into it.

If you don't believe it you weren't there when a whole audience was waiting breathlessly for the curtain on the supposed "first night" of "Red, Hot, and Blue." Something happened to the scenery, as you may have heard, but they simply sent little Jimmy out to talk to the audience and everybody went away feeling amused and sorry for him instead of annoyed, as you'd expect. Everybody seemed to be getting a real kick out of the episode, and I didn't hear one expression of annoyance.

Formality of Wedding Key to the Attire

Should the bride's trousseau contain more than a dozen napkins? How many table cloths? Answers to these questions and many others are given in the booklet, "Selecting the Trousseau," by Helen Bartlett, Tribune etiquet editor. On sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 S. Dearborn, and Tribune Tower. Price, 3 cents. Postpaid, 5 cents.

By Helen Bartlett.

TENTH in the wedding etiquet series.

We mean to employ our time today in talking about correct wedding apparel. And again, as in many of the previous articles, we must refer back to what the bride is going to wear. The costume of the bride, as you have discovered by this time, is the keynote of the whole affair.

THE bride who chooses a formal wedding gown and veil makes the wedding formal, and all other details of the affair, including the attire of the other members of the wedding party, should be carried out in the same degree of formality. The bride whose fiancé feels that a fairly large outlay for formal clothes for himself, the best man and ushers is a great extravagance, or out of the question entirely, should either forego the traditional bridal array or modify her own plans somewhat in order to make everything conform.

The strictly formal daytime costume for men is gray and black striped trousers, cutaway coat and high silk hat. A "compromise costume" for the daytime wedding that is neither formal enough to demand extreme formal attire, nor so informal as to permit wearing a business suit, consists of the gray and black striped trousers, a plain black or Oxford gray sack coat and a soft felt hat.

For the most formal type of evening wedding, all of the men in the wedding party wear full evening dress. This is distinguished by a swallow tail coat, trousers of the same material with a silk braid stripe, and a high silk topper. The dinner coat, also known as the tuxedo, although, strictly speaking, it is not correct for weddings, usage has made acceptable in many circles for weddings of a less formal character and for persons in moderate circumstances.

FOR an informal wedding the bride may wear any informal costume ranging from a tailored suit to a dressy afternoon frock. The color, fabric and style of the dress may be whatever the bride considers most becoming, and whatever is appropriate to the season of the year. Her attendants, of course, are a little less elaborately dressed than is the bride. Their costumes, too, should be suitable to the season and should be harmonious with and complementary to the bride's costume. It is customary for all the girls to wear hats or some substitute in the way of hair adornment, unless the ceremony is taking place in the bride's own home.

The men in the informal wedding party are permitted to wear business suits of a conservative and plain cut. Plaited backs and belted, sporty models of tweed are not in good taste. The business suit never should be worn for a wedding with any pretense to the elaborate, particularly in metropolitan circles.

For informal summer weddings the bridegroom and his attendants are permitted to wear summer formal attire, consisting of white flannels and a dark blue or oxford gray jacket, or all white Palm Beach or linen.

Dance to Aid Consumptives' Society Funds

WITH $25 the price of admission to their annual dinner dance this evening, senior and junior members of the Jewish Consumptives Relief society have sold so many tickets that the party will overflow from the Congress Casino into the Pompeiian room and cocktail lounge. In fact, only the hotel's previous commitments prevented the organization from repeating the party for its unexpected numerous guests next Sunday evening.

Each member either has bought outright or earned the admission price to the party, thereby providing funds which will further the society's work at Winfield sanitarium, and in other fields.

THE society contributes $2,100 annually to the Jewish Tuberculosis service, supports the occupational therapy department at Winfield sanitarium, and provides a trained recreational director there. In addition, surgical and nursing care is given to from 12 to 20 persons annually at Michael Reese hospital, 200 mothers and children are sent to camp each year, and money and clothing are provided for patients at the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium and Oak Forest.

Mrs. Benjamin Ruekberg.

Mrs. Benjamin Ruekberg is president of the seniors, and Mrs. L. L. Meitus, of the juniors. Serving as chairmen of the party are Mrs. B. Barnett and Mrs. H. Wolper for the former group, and Mrs. Charles Kauffman, and Mrs. N. Lipman for the latter.

Another benefit taking place this evening is the 1937 "Varieties" and dance to be given by Sigma Alpha Phi Musical sorority at 8 o'clock this evening in the Tropical room of the Medinah club. Proceeds will be turned over to the scholarship fund maintained by the sorority for deserving music students.

Appearing on the program will be J. Jessie Lewis, whistler; Ethel Schmetter, and Dorothy Coskik, pianists; Ann Gershon, coloratura soprano; Helen Goldenberg, Helen Schutzbank, and Ruth Blumenthal, violinists; Rose Schnitzer, reader; and Evelyn White and Sarah Guroff, pianists. Dancing will follow. Miss Gertrude W. Shapiro is handling arrangements.

THE Indian Council Fire will combine its annual benefit program with the celebration of its 15th anniversary at 3 o'clock next Sunday afternoon at 32 West Randolph street. Chibiaboos, Indian baritone, will come from Minneapolis to give a program of native and modern songs and dances, and there will be door prizes, including a genuine Navajo rug.

While the activities of the Council Fire are largely philanthropic, the organization also has been interested in the advancement of the Indian race. An achievement medal was awarded an Indian of outstanding ability at A Century of Progress exposition in 1933, and at the exposition the following year an exhibit demonstrating the progress of the race in the last 100 years was entered. Last November the Council Fire sponsored the publication of "Indians of Today," a compilation of biographical sketches.

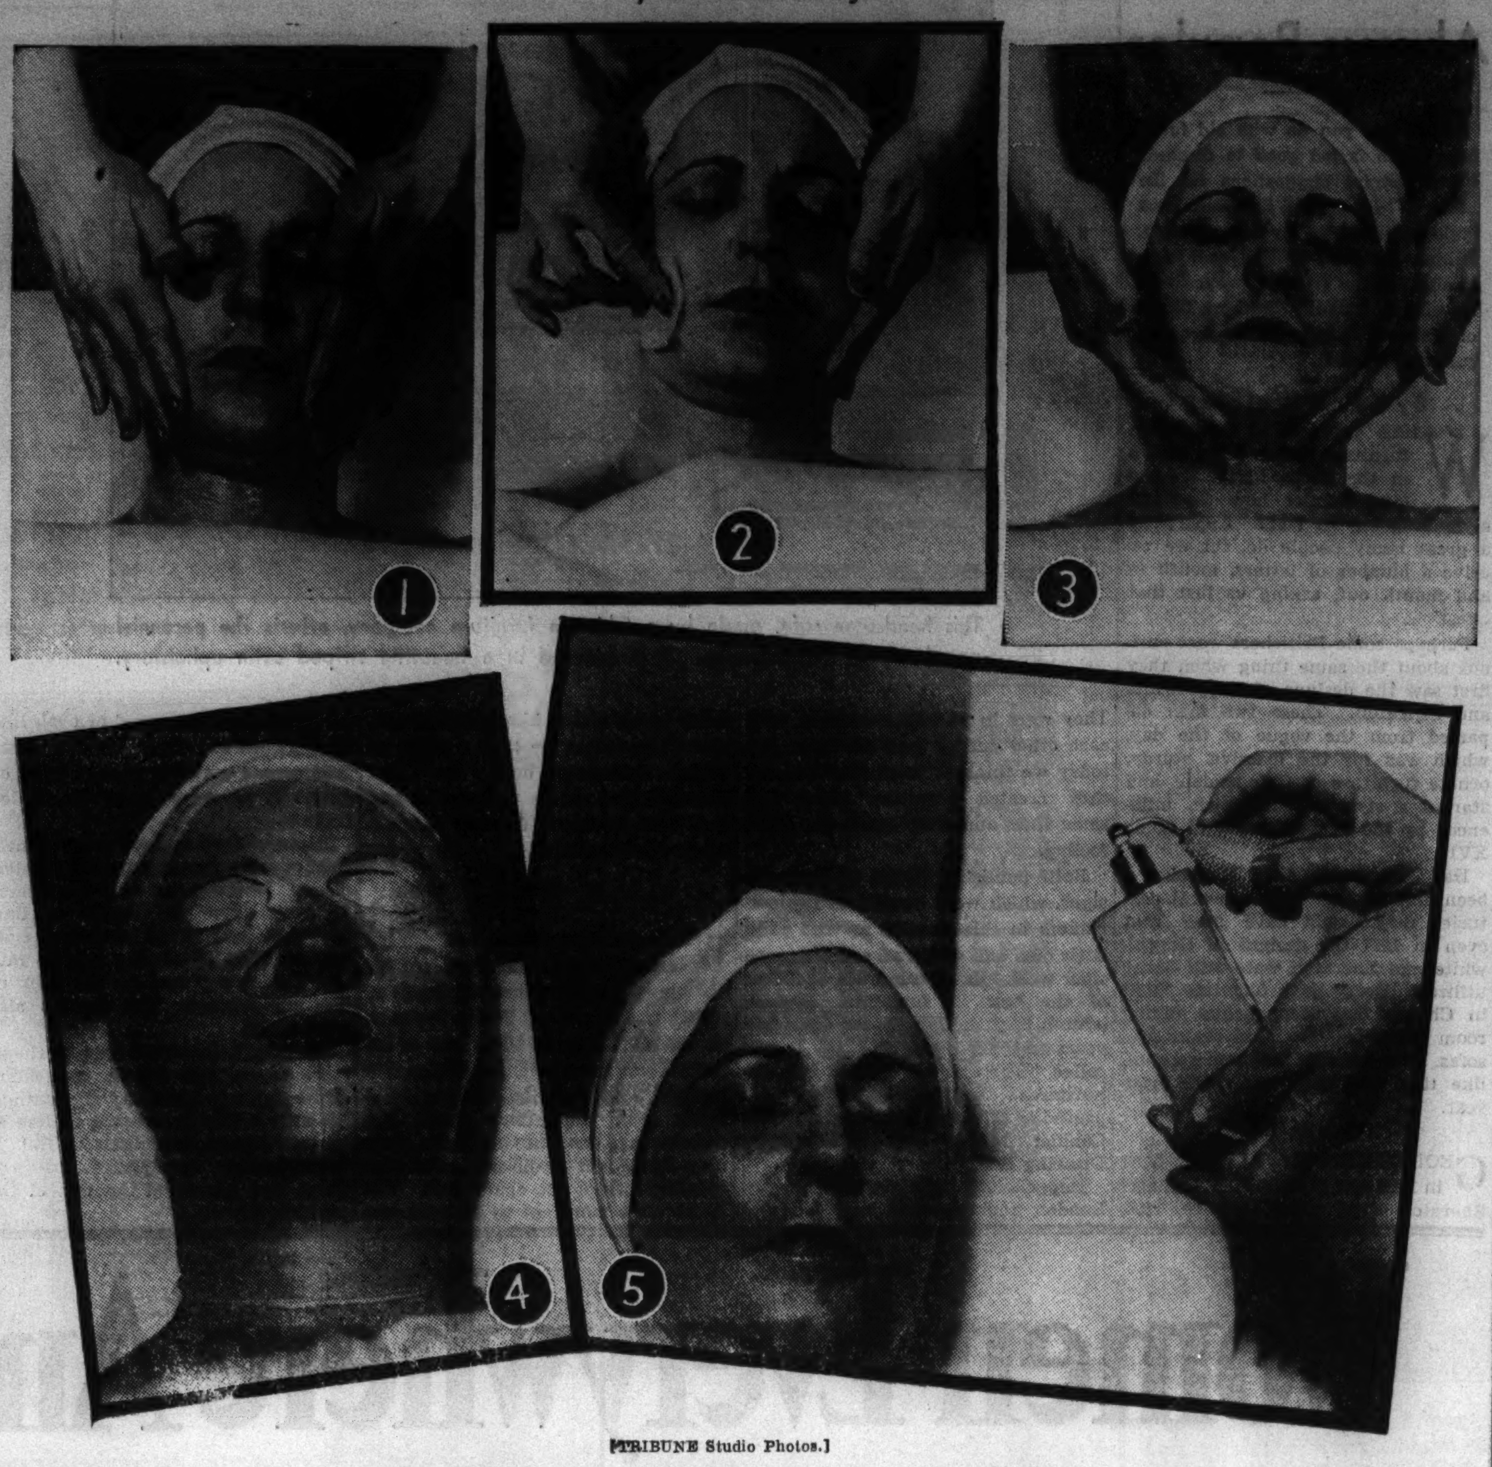
Next Sunday evening the Fae Blanke Gordon Aid is holding its annual spring dinner dance in the College Inn of the Hotel Sherman. Proceeds will go toward the maintenance of the organization's camp for convalescent and undernourished children. Mrs. S. Glassman and Mrs. Fred Block are chairmen of the party. Mrs. Edward M. Gertz is president of the group.

The Florentine room of the Medinah club will be the scene of the fourth annual dinner dance of the Woman's Traffic club of Chicago, next Saturday evening. Miss Golda Luster is serving her second term as president of the group.

The Chicago Relief league recently reëlected Miss Mildred Freedman as president. Miss Bertha Korey was reëlected vice president.

Through the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle



[TRIBUNE Studio Photos.]

The camera takes you step by step through a beauty treatment that routs the drooping contour threatening every woman over 30. First comes a cleansing, then the application of a stimulating lotion that tones up circulation. Special attention is given the danger areas, the chin and the eyes, in the expert massage that follows. The high point of the treatment is the use of a silk mask, dipped in a toning lotion, that lifts the muscles and molds the contour. The skin tonic used as a finishing touch is a delightful, fragrant lotion sprayed on that feels like cool mist against the skin.

IF you're 30, or over, you owe it to yourself to become "contour conscious." You might just as well face the fact that you've reached the age at which your figure will thicken and your face grow lined if you don't watch out. The simple beauty routine, based for the most part on the principles of good grooming, which took you so beautifully through your teens and your twenties just won't be enough for the good years that lie ahead of you.

Today we're not concerned with your silhouette. We'll take that up another time. But how about your face? Are there fine lines around your eyes, lines that could charitably be called laugh lines in your youth but that will terrify you one of these days by becoming plain garden variety wrinkles? Is your chinline the smooth, rounded, firm line it was two or five years ago? Or is it slipping ever so gently? And, when you're weary, are there horrid deep lines running from nose to mouth corners? They disappear, perhaps, when you catch up on sleep, but don't forget that they now are visitors who soon will plan a longer stay if you don't rout them!

IT'S up to you to seek a preventive beauty routine, sort of a facial youth preserver. And we know just the thing, the very latest trick in beauty treatments, simple and not too expensive. Sign up for a course and you automatically sign a lease on good facial contour, dissipating the threat of middle age.

This is a treatment that begins, naturally, with cleansing but, in this case, with an herbal cleansing cream that stimulates ever so gently. It progresses to more stimulation with an interesting lotion that makes your skin tingle and in the doing tones it up wonderfully. Then comes a period of special treatment, with special preparations, that's aimed particularly at the two areas where danger signals blossom, the eyes and the throat.

Then comes massage with a nourishing cream, skilfully worked in where it will do the most good. Muscles are gently lifted, contour expertly molded. It's not until after this that you reach the high point of this special treatment for the preservation of your good looks, a dramatic mask, made of silk, which is carefuly tied on for a long session that lifts muscles into the lines in which they should go!

THIS mask is most exciting, really. It's not pretty, with its cut-outs for nose, eyes and mouth, but it's marvelously good for you. Its silky pinkess is first saturated in a special lotion that helps the molding cause. Then it's tied on tightly, as shown in the accompanying photographs, and allowed to remain until it dries, which is in about 20 minutes.

After this comes a delightful, misty skin tonic sprayed on with an atomizer. When your hour is up and you pay your money and go your way you've accomplished, with no effort on your part, two things: You look a great deal better than you did when you came in, AND you've had a treatment that is insurance against that discouraging contour droop of advancing years.

A Friend in Need . . . .

By Sally Joy Brown

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, the Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Activities of this department are sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

NEVER quite enough—whether it be food for the table, chairs to sit on, room to sleep, or clothing to wear. Such is the nerve racking, unsatisfactory mode of living in many homes today. Constant lack of small comforts prevails when incomes are sufficient only for mere maintenance. There are hundreds of youngsters in Chicago who never have known peaceful, clean living quarters. Such abnormal family life leaves a definite scar on youth, and every effort should be made to adjust these homes. This constant atmosphere of failure and inadequacy is equally trying to parents, many of whom turn to me for help.

There are seven orphaned children in a family brought to my attention by Miss H., a case worker. The oldest girl, who is 25, keeps house, and the oldest boy, 23, works and contributes to the support of the younger children. They are a fine group of young people and take pride in making their home as attractive as possible on their meager income. Their greatest need is a dining table and a set of chairs. If some reader is discarding such furniture these young people would appreciate having it.

The social service department of a large hospital sends the following request for a simple article which the family in question cannot purchase on the present income.

"Dear Miss Brown: We are writing to you to request a stroller for a 4 year old child who is badly crippled. Little Pat has been in our hospital almost a year because of congenital absence of some of the bones in his legs. He has had an operation and further surgery will be attempted when he is a little older. He is not yet able to walk and the doctors do not wish to encourage it for some time. Since he is quite a large youngster his mother finds it almost impossible to get him outdoors, as he is too heavy for her to carry. The child's father is a veteran and is in one of the government hospitals. Do you think you could get a large stroller for this little boy? D. P."

This is one of those hundred and one extras not provided for in relief budgets and for which there is a crying need.

Young Mr. and Mrs. D. are expecting their first child. They were able to manage until Mr. D. was threatened with tuberculosis and had to give up work. They have an apartment on the near north side, but are unable to furnish it with any degree of comfort. The floors are unpainted and full of slivers. Linoleum or rugs would eliminate the necessity of much scrubbing. They have no comfortable chairs and no curtains in the home.

Mrs. D. writes: 1 work very hard trying to keep things clean, but the house never looks tidy, since we haven't any of the little things to make our home look like a home should look. It's so dreary and is depressing when you have to be indoors all day."

Any number of things will be discarded during the spring cleaning season which would serve to improve this barren little home.

Preparing Child for Unpleasant Events Is Wise

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

SPRING means all sorts of lovely things after winter's cold and sunless days—flowers, warmth, green bowers, blue skies, soft, fragrant breezes, and pretty clothes. But to many a mother spring means tonsils. "We'll wait till it's really warm," says the doctor, and so a tonsil operation looms ahead as a not very pleasant task for late spring or early summer.

Not being editor of the health department, this article is not on the medical aspect of tonsillectomies, as we have gotten to call them, although I do feel qualified to make one suggestion. It is this: Do not have your child's tonsils out if it is not absolutely necessary. Tonsils have a function to perform in the human body, as do adenoids. Badly diseased and filled with pus, they are a menace. But the wholesale yanking out of tonsils and adenoids that prevailed not so long ago is no longer advised. This subject of the removal of tonsils and adenoids has been studied intensively since then and the effects of necessary removals and unnecessary ones checked over carefully. While I won't go into the many interesting results described, I do want to urge you to be sure your child's tonsils and adenoids need to come out before you have the operation performed. Also, don't expect your child never to have another sniffle, cough, cold, or sore throat after they are out.

But the connection between the spring tonsil event in your family and this article is not a medical one. It has to do with how and whether you thrust your child suddenly into the experience, or prepare him for it. Here is a letter which mothers having this ahead of them should find of interest.

"MY Dear Mrs. Bevans: Your article on the understanding of children brings two experiences so clearly to mind that I feel I wish to tell you of them.

"When my older boy was almost 5, his tonsils were removed. He had not been well since a streptococcus throat infection several months before.

"The doctor, his father, and I told him all we could of what he must expect to do as his share. He decided for himself that it was better to have the operation than be ill, and that if Dad would carry him to the operating room and if I would hold his hand until he was asleep it would be all right. He was introduced to the anaesthetist and nurses who were told by the surgeon: 'This boy will do as he was told for he knows what is expected and will be a good sport.' There was not a word—he just asked the doctor to save his tonsils for him to see.

"He now is 12. A year ago he had two operations on neck glands. The same surgeon, and the same manner of taking it, the only request being that I hold his hand until he went to sleep. An 'O-ke-do-kee' to the anaesthetist and 'I am glad we found out there had to be a second operation before we left the hospital, if it was to be,' were his only comments.

"When he was 6 he was given gas for a puncture in a bad ear. They thought I was foolish when I asked for a little time to explain to him and let him get used to it. He screamed and kicked and was held by force and always has remembered that incident as an 'unfair' one.

"The younger boy had his tonsils removed at an army hospital where they felt mothers would be in the way. I waited outside while the poor little chap screamed and fought until he went to sleep and I was sick at heart. They did let me stay with him until he slept that night [a thing his father and I failed to do]. I told him what crying and fusing might do to his throat. He was the only child who did not cry that night, and when 'Dad' called at 6 in the morning, the nurse said he could be brought home, but that he hated to lose so good a sport.

"Since, he has had an operation with anaesthetics, an injured eyelid stitched with almost no anaesthetic, and gravel dug with a surgeon's knife, from an injured knee, and has joked and smiled about it all. But he knew what was to be done and was allowed to go into it, as an adult."

YOU may remember the article in this column to which the writer refers. It had to do with the experience of a boy who was prepared, but whose doctor did not coöperate with his mother in the handling of him. I fervently wish more doctors understood things of this sort.

I know of many cases where parents prepared their children for an operation and got the most wonderful response from them. Every one's way of preparing them is not the same, of course. Some parents have let their children act out the proceedings, imitating the inhaling of the anaesthetic and dressing up as nurses, for instance. This would work with the younger children who are at the age where dramatizing is one of their enjoyable forms of play. Other parents explain and talk things over with their boys and girls. It is well to point out right here that one always has to use common sense in considering the age of the child and in deciding how far ahead to prepare him.

One hardly needs add that it is unwise to mislead a child when a thing like this is ahead of him, by saying, "O, it's nothing," or, "It won't hurt."

The point in all this is to avoid shock as much as possible—what we call psychic shock. In fact, physical shock is minimized too, in this way. Indeed, it is always a good thing for parents to realize that, in many sorts of experience, children are taken aback or startled by the unexpected and the unfamiliar.

There is not much space left to speak of the frequent aftermath of tonsil and other operations, simple though they may seem. There frequently is a noticeable physical or emotional reaction. And therefore a child needs to be tided over this period with tact and patience.

"Caring for and Amusing the Convalescent" is the name of a leaflet that is sent by Mrs. Bevans on receipt of a large, 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope. Or, if your child is convalescent, you may prefer our list of books or our leaflet on "Articles the Children Can Make." Each of these requires additional postage.

Mrs. Bevans' column also appears in The Tribune on Monday and every other weekday.

Here's the Thrilling New Shampoo Everyone Is Raving About

CORRECT NEW WAY
No dull film; hair soft, shining like silk!
IMPROPER WAY
Hair dull, covered with cloudy film.

NOT SOAP—NOT OIL
Makes Dull Hair Gleam Like Silk

It's no wonder women everywhere are raving about this amazing, new liquid shampoo—no wonder one trial converts them for life! For it gives your hair a thrilling new gleam. Yes, actually transforms dull, average-looking hair into a brilliant, glistening halo—with a single application.

Look at the girl above. See what a difference it makes when you use it. So try it soon—see how beautiful your hair really can be.

Just how this unusual shampoo works these miracles is a new scientific secret. It isn't oil, it isn't soap—it isn't anything you've heard of before. Scientists have brought us something brand-new; a shampoo so different that they've patented the process by which it is made. You simply wet your hair, shake on a few drops and instantly you get a glorious, billowy lather. 5 times more lather than soap in hardest water. Lather so neutral—being neither acid nor alkaline—that it is ideal for either oily or dry hair. You rub it briskly into the hair, rinse thoroughly—and you're through.

"What?" you say, "no special rinses; no vinegar, lemon or after-rinses to 'cut' the lather?" No—they are not necessary—just a thorough dousing in clear water! That's the marvelous part. Drene cannot leave unrinsable film on hair to cover up natural lustre as ordinary shampoos do. Your hair is left radiant, silky, smooth. Even dull, bleached or dyed hair becomes more brilliant, more natural looking after a Drene shampoo. More amazing, embarrassing flakes of dandruff disappear with a single washing, leaving the scalp scrupulously clean. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau. Women who have used it for months rave about the beauty and health their hair possesses—and have found its thorough cleansing is the quickest, best way to a healthy head of hair. Your scalp can really nourish the hair properly, when cleansed the Drene Way, which simply calls for one or two shampoos a week with Drene, and a few minutes of scalp massage and brushing of the hair. Then it glows with new life and lustre.

Procter & Gamble make this marvel, and you can buy it in various sizes at all drug, department and ten cent stores. Only half a tablespoonful for a perfect shampoo. Market Prices Make Chicken Seasonal Hit

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune.]

FORTUNATELY for those of us who can think of nothing more delicious than tender young chicken, the supply at present is great enough to make prices encouraging.

"Spring" chickens are available in many sizes. The market situation favors the large broiler or the small fryer, which may be broiled, fried, sautéed or roasted, as you choose. A broiled half of young chicken is the greatest factor of a Sunday or special dinner.

THESE directions for broiling young chickens are suggested by the home economists of the Institute of American Poultry industries.

DIRECTIONS FOR BROILING YOUNG CHICKENS.

Temperature: Moderate [350 degrees].

Time: 45 minutes to 1 hour, depending on size.

Broiling rack to be placed 5 inches from heat unit.

1. Have the broilers cut in half and bring them to room temperature before cooking begins.

2. Break the three or four major joints: the hip joint where the leg joins the body, the knee joint between drumstick and thigh, and the two wing joints. Work from inside.

3. Brush the halves all over with fat if the chickens appear to lack it. Butter or oil may be used.

4. Place, skin side down, on the heated broiling rack and sprinkle each half with ¼ teaspoon salt or slightly less if butter has been used for the oiling process.

5. Slide the rack into the heated broiling oven, so that the distance between rack and heating unit is about five inches. If there is no oven control, adjust the gas flame so that it is not more than a fourth inch long.

6. Cook 15 minutes. By this time the surface should be delicately browned.

7. Turn halves skin side up and sprinkle another ¼ teaspoon salt over each. Cook for another 15 minutes.

8. Turn again skin side down. If the sides of breasts and the thighs are not browned, place the halves supporting each other in a standing position so that these parts may come under the direct heat.

9. Turn again skin side up. Brush with fat any parts not well browned. Cook about 15 minutes longer. Chicken should be well browned and thoroughly tender. During this last period of cooking, any well browned portions may be covered by parts of other halves which are not so well browned.

10. Transfer to hot serving platter and pour drippings over chicken. Or make gravy from the drippings, adding chopped giblets which have been previously cooked. Garlic or onion is a delicious addition. Rub the broiler rack or service platter lightly with a cut surface of either.

NOT more than one vegetable should be served on the same plate with a broiled half chicken. A crowded plate is not attractive, and there is difficulty in handling the chicken with knife and fork if plenty of room has not been left on the plate. The same is true when serving stuffed halves of chickens, prepared by the following recipe.

STUFFED HALVES OF BABY CHICKENS.

Have 1½ pound broilers split at the market. Brush with fat and place in a pan under the broiler or in a 475 degree oven for only long enough to brown the skin. Remove from the oven and fill each half with ½ cup moist dressing, made from crums, chopped giblets, seasonings, butter and some of the liquid left from cooking the giblets. Cover the pan closely and place in a 325 degree oven to cook for an hour, or until tender. When serving, invert on the plate, skin side up. Oiled brown paper may be placed over the dressing during the cooking to prevent drying.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, April 26.

Garden work should be in full swing from now until the plants are inactive in autumn. Rearrange the borders to provide a better and more stimulating growth. Replace with good soil if the soil has become impoverished. Study the color and height of all plants and arrange them for harmonious effect and succession of bloom. Remember not to overplant or to use too many kinds. Peonies should be planted in October and not in spring unless it is absolutely necessary to do so. Use plenty of iris in the city garden, for they do well under city conditions. Give them a sunny location for best results.

Tuesday, April 27.

Make the lawn immediately, if it has not been done, for the seed will germinate readily at this time, and the young seedlings will grow strong enough to withstand the heat of early summer. Chip up all bare spots, rake in some fertilizer, and re-seed. Do not sow seed on hard ground. Use a high grade mixture. If one wishes to mix his own seeds he may use 50 per cent Kentucky bluegrass, 40 per cent redtop, and 10 per cent English rye grass. Bent grass lawns are excellent if the home gardener is willing to give them the attention they require.

Wednesday, April 28.

Do not attempt more than can be adequately cared for in gardening. The exciting period of spring is likely to cause the gardener to imagine a large, finished garden without a thought of the work that must be undertaken during the heat of summer. It is better to have a small garden complete in every detail than to have a large, unfinished, unkempt area. Evergreens will not do well in the congested areas of the city, for excessive smoke and gas seriously affect them, preventing luxurious growth. They will, however, flourish in suburban sections. After they are planted, spray them with water morning and evening for two or three weeks, and water the roots when dry weather comes.

Thursday, April 29.

When planting roses and evergreens do not allow the roots to dry out through exposure to wind and sun. If it is inconvenient to plant immediately on receipt of the plants, heel them in by digging a trench, laying the roots in it, covering with soil, and watering well. They may be planted later then. See that posts or uprights that have rotted at the base are replaced to avoid disaster when the plants requiring their support are in full growth. Repair all woodwork needing it and repaint, if necessary, before they are covered with growing plants. The new lawn should be rolled when growth is an inch high to compact the soil around the roots.

Friday, April 30.

Now is an excellent time to dig perennial weeds that show above the ground. By devoting a few minutes each day to this work the lawn will soon be rid of all weeds. Plant the Lombardy poplar, magnolia, and sassafras in spring to enable them to become well established during summer. A magnolia or two, with their delightful flowers that appear before the leaves, are excellent for the suburban garden. Hardy chrysanthemums also should be planted in spring. Place them nine inches apart in good, rich soil and in a sunny location.

Saturday, May 1.

When the ground is warm make a planting of gladiolus for early bloom. Make successive plantings at intervals of ten days. They may be planted among other kinds of flowers. Investigate the use of dwarf fruit trees in restricted areas. They are ornamental and bear fruit earlier than the standard kinds, but the crop is smaller and the plants shorter lived. They may be obtained in various shapes, such as fan, cordon, and standard.

British Revolving Bookcase Recalls an Older Model

IF you remember the revolving bookcase of 1910, resembling a big block on a pivot, you immediately will see that one of the newest objects of furniture shown in London is not really new, after all. The modern British revolving case differs very little from the old. Each face has three shelves and a blank space which closes up the shelves adjoining. It has a cross-shaped base and is made of light oak. Another model, less difficult to manage, is made of mahogany and does not revolve.

Speaking of English novelties, there must be a place here for the child's "fun" chair. Imagine a box with one side knocked out and the other side moved to the center. It becomes a chair, a shelf, or a sort of table. Several boxes are a house or a train.

Records Reveal School Attendance Is Better

ALTHOUGH there are, on the average, 4,000,000 children absent from school every day, school attendance records are improving.

Shrubs and Evergreens with "BLACK LEAF 40" TO KEEP DOGS AWAY

If you have shrubbery or evergreens stained yellow and possibly dying because dogs choose them as the favorite stopping place, you will more than ever appreciate "Black Leaf 40".

DOGS DO NOT LIKE THE ODOR

Spray the lower branches of those shrubs and evergreens with a little "Black Leaf 40" mixed with water (directions on the label). It is harmless to dogs—but they do not like the odor and will seek another stopping place. Try this today—you'll be surprised how quickly the dog nuisance is stopped.

Has Many Other Uses. "Black Leaf 40" kills insects that damage flowers, fruit or vegetables. It kills poultry lice and feather mites when spread lightly on roosts. Kills lice on livestock and ticks on sheep.

"Black Leaf 40" is sold by dealers everywhere. Original factory-sealed packages assure full strength always.

Good Styles in Furniture Are Always Popular

What can you do with old furniture which is too good to discard? Many helpful suggestions fill the booklet, "Giving Old Furniture New Style and Beauty," by Edith Weigle, Tribune furniture stylist. Get a copy at either of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn Street or Tribune Tower. Price, 2 cents. Postpaid, 3 cents.

By Edith Weigle.

WHEN you look at the modern furniture that is being shown in the shops today, do you ever wonder how long its style is going to last? Apparently a great many people do, for we receive a number of letters, month in and month out, asking us just that question.

Perhaps some Britishers were curious about the same thing when they first saw the designs of Heppelwhite and Sheraton. These two men departed from the vogue of the day, which was for the massive, sturdy, ornate furniture of Chippendale, and started a style of their own, influenced by the French modes of Louis XVI.

Had the questioning Englishmen been able to look ahead several centuries they would have seen that even in 1937 the designs of Heppelwhite and Sheraton were still being utilized. Every good furniture store in Chicago has Heppelwhite dining room pieces and Sheraton chairs and sofas. The demand for them goes on, like time and the river, year after year.

GEORGE HEPPELWHITE was born in 1727 and died in 1786. Thomas Sheraton lived from 1751 to 1806. They were in no way connected with each other during their lifetimes, but today we think of them together, for they created furniture along the same lines and with much the same feeling.

Both published books of their designs, which were bought by cabinetmakers in this country as well as in their own and which served to spread their work among hundreds of lovers of the best in furniture. Heppelwhite's book did not appear until two years after his death, in 1788. It was called "The Cabinet Maker and Upholsterer's Guide." Sheraton's appeared in 1791 and was entitled "The Cabinet Maker and Upholsterer's Drawing Book."

Heppelwhite maintained a shop in London and probably made a great many of his pieces himself, although, like Chippendale, he kept a corps of skilled craftsmen busy, too. But Sheraton was simply a designer, and it is said he never actually made a single chair or table.

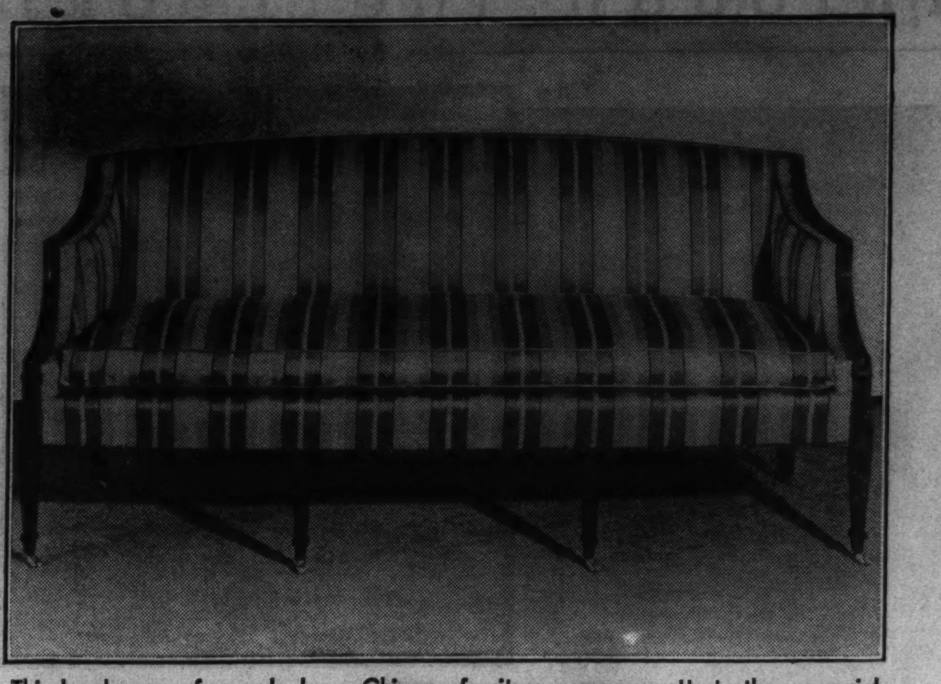
WE know Heppelwhite best for his famous shield back chair and for his use of the three ostrich feathers, called the prince of Wales feathers, as carved ornament. The legs of his chairs always were slender and mostly straight and tapering, ending in a spade foot. Sheraton's chairs had delicate legs, too, but they more often were fluted and he did not make such constant use of the spade foot. The backs were more apt to be rectangular in shape than curved or oval, like Heppelwhite's. They usually were ornamented with carvings of urns, or garlands, or were made in lattice fashion.

Heppelwhite's cabinets with serpentine, curving fronts were his masterpieces. Nothing has ever been made to excel them in beauty of line. Sheraton also made handsome sideboards, often employing a brass railing that was placed on the back of the top surface. The mounts also were brass.

Sheraton's furniture was, perhaps, more severe and classic in feeling than was Heppelwhite's. One authority says it was so delicate in line as to be "almost effeminate." But it was strongly constructed, just the same, and has stood the test of the years in beauty.

SATIN COVERED SOFA



This handsome sofa, made by a Chicago furniture company, attests the perennial popularity of Heppelwhite. It is covered in a beautiful striped satin upholstery.

Spring Practical Time to Paint, Replace Fixtures

IF spring house cleaning means new paper and paint in some of the rooms this year, it is a good time to take an inventory of the lighting fixtures. Of course, they may be very nice ones and you wouldn't change them for the world. But, if they are rather antiquated, this is the opportune time to make alterations.

Are the living room walls spotted with brackets that you never use, but which interfere with hanging pictures or placing furniture as you would like? Then, why not discard them entirely? The wires can be disconnected by an electrician and the openings prepared or plastered over for a small cost.

Have you been hating the old-fashioned fixture in the center of the living room ceiling? If the ceiling is to be repainted, this is a grand opportunity for taking down the unsightly thing and capping the opening with an inconspicuous metal plate. Paint it right in with the ceiling color and it will hardly be noticeable.

Perhaps you have decided to paint the woodwork in the dining room but the center figure is one of those far-from-beautiful affairs with chains dangling from a dark wood medallion. It should be replaced with a new fixture of good design. But, if the budget won't stretch that far this year, have the entire thing—wood, chains, and all—painted the same color as the ceiling. It won't seem half as objectionable as it did before. Then shield the globes with simple shades so that the glare will be eliminated and all the light concentrated on the dining table.

Uninteresting wall brackets which cannot be removed take kindly to the same treatment. Just paint them to match the walls or [if paper is used] to tone in with the ground of the paper.

Women Everywhere Amazed When They Find Out

About A Thrilling Discovery That Actually Feeds New Life Into Dry or Aging Skin!

Middle-aged skin almost miraculously appears 10 to 20 years younger in texture and beauty

Youthful skin which was dry becomes unbelievably soft, smooth and glamorous again

A Week's Trial Will Thrill You

AN amazing substance has recently been found which has the remarkable ability to feed back into the skin in exact and precise proportions those very elements put into the skin by nature to keep it fresh and youthful—and which, when lost, cause the skin to become dry and unattractive.

So sensational are the results that skin the age of forty or fifty has miraculously become as youth-like in texture and appearance as skin of twenty. While youthful skin which was dry and rough magically regained its softness, suppleness and glamorous beauty!

Today, eminent dermatologists are proclaiming its immediate use by every woman—whether young or old—as the one means to possess the beautiful skin of youth.

How to Give Your Skin These Thrilling Beauty Benefits

This amazing, youth-giving substance is found only in ESSENCE OF LIFE Face Cream. And because of its presence, a cream is now available for the first time which contains in exact and precise proportions the very elements your skin must have to be fresh and youthful.

You use ESSENCE OF LIFE as you do your present cleansing cream. Immediately it begins to feed back into your skin those youth-giving elements which are lost or destroyed as a result of these five causes:

First, exposure to sun and wind. Second, overheated rooms. Third, a diet deficient in fat. Fourth, time and age. And fifth, improper, present-day cleansing methods which, while they remove dirt from the face and pores, also remove the essential elements provided by nature to keep the skin young, without re-supplying the skin with these essential elements.

This is why skin steadily becomes drier, coarser, tighter-drawn. Why pores become enlarged. Why blackheads appear. Why wrinkles begin to show at the corners of the eyes and mouth. Why, all too soon, the skin becomes old looking.

Even First Application A Revelation

The first application of ESSENCE OF LIFE will prove a joyful revelation to you. As you use this thrilling, new-type cream, your skin seems to become youth-like before your very eyes. The texture finer; the pores smaller; the feeling smooth as velvet. The tight, "drawing" will be gone. Dryness, coarseness and blackheads will disappear. Lines and wrinkles seem to fade away. You look years younger; vastly more attractive.

(Please note carefully the two micro-photographs—and sworn statement—which clearly prove the startling, rejuvenating effect of ESSENCE OF LIFE.)

Prepare For The Thrill Of Your Life

When you first use ESSENCE OF LIFE, be prepared for the thrill of your life! For, almost before you realize it, you will see your skin so fresh and beautiful that you may doubt your own eyes. Yet the reason for this almost magical change is so simple. All you have done is to re-supply your skin with what it has lost—its skin-beautifying elements!

And here is more good news for you. You need no other cream when you use ESSENCE OF LIFE. Used in place of ordinary cleansing cream, it not only thoroughly cleanses the skin, but in addition, with each application it re-supplies the skin with the essential elements it needs to stay young. Thus, this amazing cream gives skin the benefits of the most startling beauty treatment you have ever witnessed.

So don't wait another day. Every woman should use this amazing cream for every cream purpose (cleansing, nourishing, softening, as a make-up base) to actually feed new life into dry or aging skin. ESSENCE OF LIFE Face Cream is on sale at all drug, department and 10c stores. Remember, it is the only cream containing this amazing, youth-giving substance which will make your complexion lovelier than you have ever dreamed possible.

What Every Woman Should Know

Why is it that some women look old at 30 and others look young at 50? The answer is a substance put into the skin by nature, which must be present in the skin if one is to look young.

You need not know the scientific name of that substance. You want only to know that there is such a beauty substance always present in your skin in more or less quantity and that when you have it in sufficient quantity you are beautiful—and that when you have it in insufficient quantity you are not beautiful.

Wind, sun, heat, cold, age, deficient diet and improper skin cleansing methods, all take their toll of this element from the skin until the skin becomes old looking, dry, faded, unattractive and finally ugly.

You have heard it said that you can aid nature. Well, it is a scientific fact that you can in many ways aid nature. But it is also a scientific fact that you cannot change the working of nature. In other words, you cannot stop nature from its process of removing from the skin its beauty substance day by day.

Science through long years of painstaking work has discovered ways to aid nature in resisting the deadly inroads of many human ills, such as malaria, small pox, headaches, blood troubles, etc. And now, at last, after years of research work, science again triumphs by a discovery that aids nature to artificially re-supply the skin with the very substance that the skin must have to be beautiful.

BEWARE OF DRY SKIN

DRY SKIN IS AGING SKIN. Eight out of ten suffer with this needless handicap. As the skin dries out it becomes thicker, coarser, less pliable. With all suppleness and elasticity gone, lines and wrinkles form. When this happens the skin definitely is labeled "old", regardless of the age of the person.

Today, DRY SKIN IS ABSOLUTELY UNNECESSARY through the discovery of an amazing substance which feeds back into the skin the youth-producing elements it must have to stay soft, thin and supple. Every woman—whether young or old—should use this discovery to keep her skin fresh and youthful—because dry skin is no respecter of age. Young girls of 18 must guard against it just as much as older women of 50.

Camera Records Day's Work of a Movie Director—French Beauty Queen Loses Title After Strip Dance

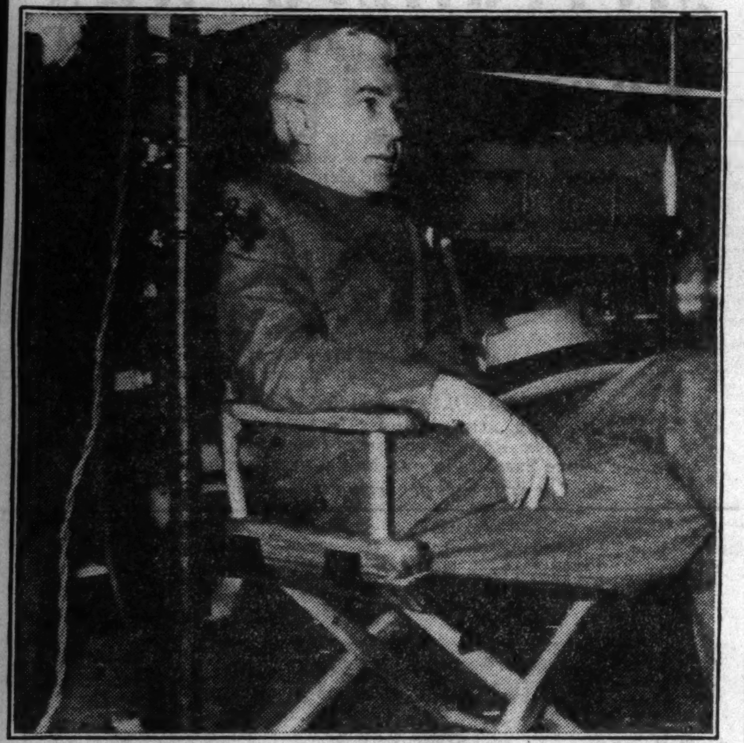
DIRECTOR BEGINS DAY'S WORK IN STUDIO—John Stahl (left), Hollywood movie director, guides his cast through the first scene of "Parnell" as John Van Druten, scenarist, holds the script and watches action.

THE CAMERAMAN GETS INSTRUCTIONS—With the lights adjusted on the scene at the proper angle, the director tells an assistant cameraman where to place his equipment to make the most of action to come.



THE NEW SCENE UNFOLDS—Director Stahl slouches down in his chair on the set and gives the command for the action to begin. Amidst silence the cameras start, and another "take" is recorded.

EXPLAINS HIS IDEA TO LEADING WOMAN—Director Stahl tells Myrna Loy of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer just how he wants her to play her part in the next scene as electricians set the lights in the right position.

BUT SOMETHING WENT WRONG—"Now here's what I mean," says Stahl as he steps out of his chair and starts across the set swinging his cane. But Actor Clark Gable (background) pays little attention as he lights his pipe.

Jacqueline Mignac was chosen "Miss Cinema" by stage and screen stars in France. Then she appeared as a strip teaser and the public roared protest.

After Jacqueline's act the judges decided they needed a new queen. Monica Joel, attired in an evening gown, was selected.

Whereupon everybody was happy and an admirer was allowed to kiss the new queen, a 17 year old beauty. Monica was elated, of course, but Jacqueline was dismayed when she realized what had happened because of "success."

SO TENDER!
SUCH FLAVOR!
OF COURSE I MADE THEM WITH Spry. IT MAKES ALL BAKED AND FRIED FOODS DOUBLY DELICIOUS. HERE'S MY RECIPE — TRY IT!

ADA'S CHOCOLATE PECAN WAFERS

- ½ cup Spry
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 eggs, well beaten
- 3 ounces chocolate, melted
- ¾ cup sifted flour
- ¾ cup pecans, chopped, or any other nuts desired

Combine Spry, salt and vanilla. Add sugar gradually and cream well. (So quick and easy with triple-creamed Spry!) Add beaten eggs and mix thoroughly. Add chocolate and blend. Add flour, nuts and mix well.

Drop from tip of teaspoon on baking sheets greased with Spry. (Or press through pastry bag.) Let stand a few minutes, then flatten cookies by stamping with a glass covered with a damp cloth. (Does away with tiresome rolling and cutting.) Bake in moderately slow oven (325° F.) 12 to 15 minutes. Makes 2½ dozen of the crispest, crunchiest, richest-tasting cookies ever.

WHEN you've made these delicious Chocolate Pecan Wafers with Spry, don't stop there. Make a cake next. See how light and fine and velvety it is, how delicate in flavor. And mixed in half the time with triple-creamed Spry that blends so smoothly, easily!

Spry pastry is flakier, more tender—Spry-fried foods crisper, tastier, so digestible a child can eat them. Get Spry today. Use for all baking and frying—see the difference!

Do As Your Dentist Does—

when he cleans your teeth

THERE is nothing known that will clean and polish teeth so quickly and leave them so gleaming white—as POWDER.

That is why your dentist, when cleaning your teeth, as you know—always uses powder.

As it is only the powder part of any dentifrice that cleans, a dentifrice that is ALL POWDER—just naturally cleans best. Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is ALL POWDER—100% cleansing properties. This is more than twice the cleansing properties of tooth pastes.

Dentists everywhere recommend Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, because—teeth simply cannot remain dull and film coated when it is used. Dr. Lyon's cleans off all stains and polishes the teeth in a harmless and practical way that leaves them sparkling—many shades whiter.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is a special dental powder developed for HOME USE by a distinguished practicing dentist. Free from all acids, grit or pumice, it cannot possibly injure or scratch the softest enamel. Even as a neutralizer in acid mouth conditions, Dr. Lyon's is just as effective as Milk of Magnesia.

Dr. Lyon's keeps your teeth REALLY CLEAN and clean teeth mean—firm, healthy gums and the least possible tooth decay. It leaves your teeth feeling so much cleaner, your mouth so refreshed, and your breath so sweet and pure.

Brush your teeth with Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder regularly—consult your dentist periodically—and you will be doing ALL that you can possibly do to protect your teeth.

Once you use powder you will never go back to tooth paste. Thousands are switching to Dr. Lyon's daily.

Dr. Lyon's is not only doubly efficient, but it costs only half as much to use. Even a small package lasts twice as long as a tube of tooth paste.

THE BOYS THINK IT'S A PANIC! ANN NEVER HAD HER POWDER PUFF OUT OF HER HAND AT THE DANCE
HER SKIN'S SO SCRATCHY THAT'S WHY... SHE OUGHT TO TRY POND'S VANISHING CREAM. IT MELTS SKIN SMOOTH!

Melt SKIN SMOOTH... THEN POWDER CLINGS

IT drives a girl nearly frantic when powder won't go on smooth—won't stay on! No worries like this if you use Pond's Vanishing Cream! "A keratolytic cream (Vanishing Cream) has the ability to melt away dried-out, dead surface cells," a famous dermatologist says. "New cells come into view—young and smooth. The skin takes on a soft appearance instantly."

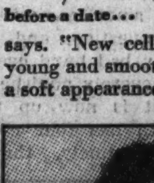
This smooth, new skin takes make-up beautifully. Dry, rough skin can't. Easy to see why popular girls everywhere depend on Pond's Vanishing Cream. They use it for perfect make-up whenever they have a date, whenever they want to be sure their powder will stay.

Use Pond's Vanishing Cream for more than holding your powder. You'll find it does wonders for your skin, too.

For Powder Base—A film of Pond's Vanishing Cream melts flakiness away. Make-up stays wonderfully smooth!

For Overnight—Use at bedtime after your cleansing cream. It's not greasy. In the morning you'll find your skin is soft and clear.

For Protection—Apply before long hours out of doors. Your skin won't rough up!



before a date...

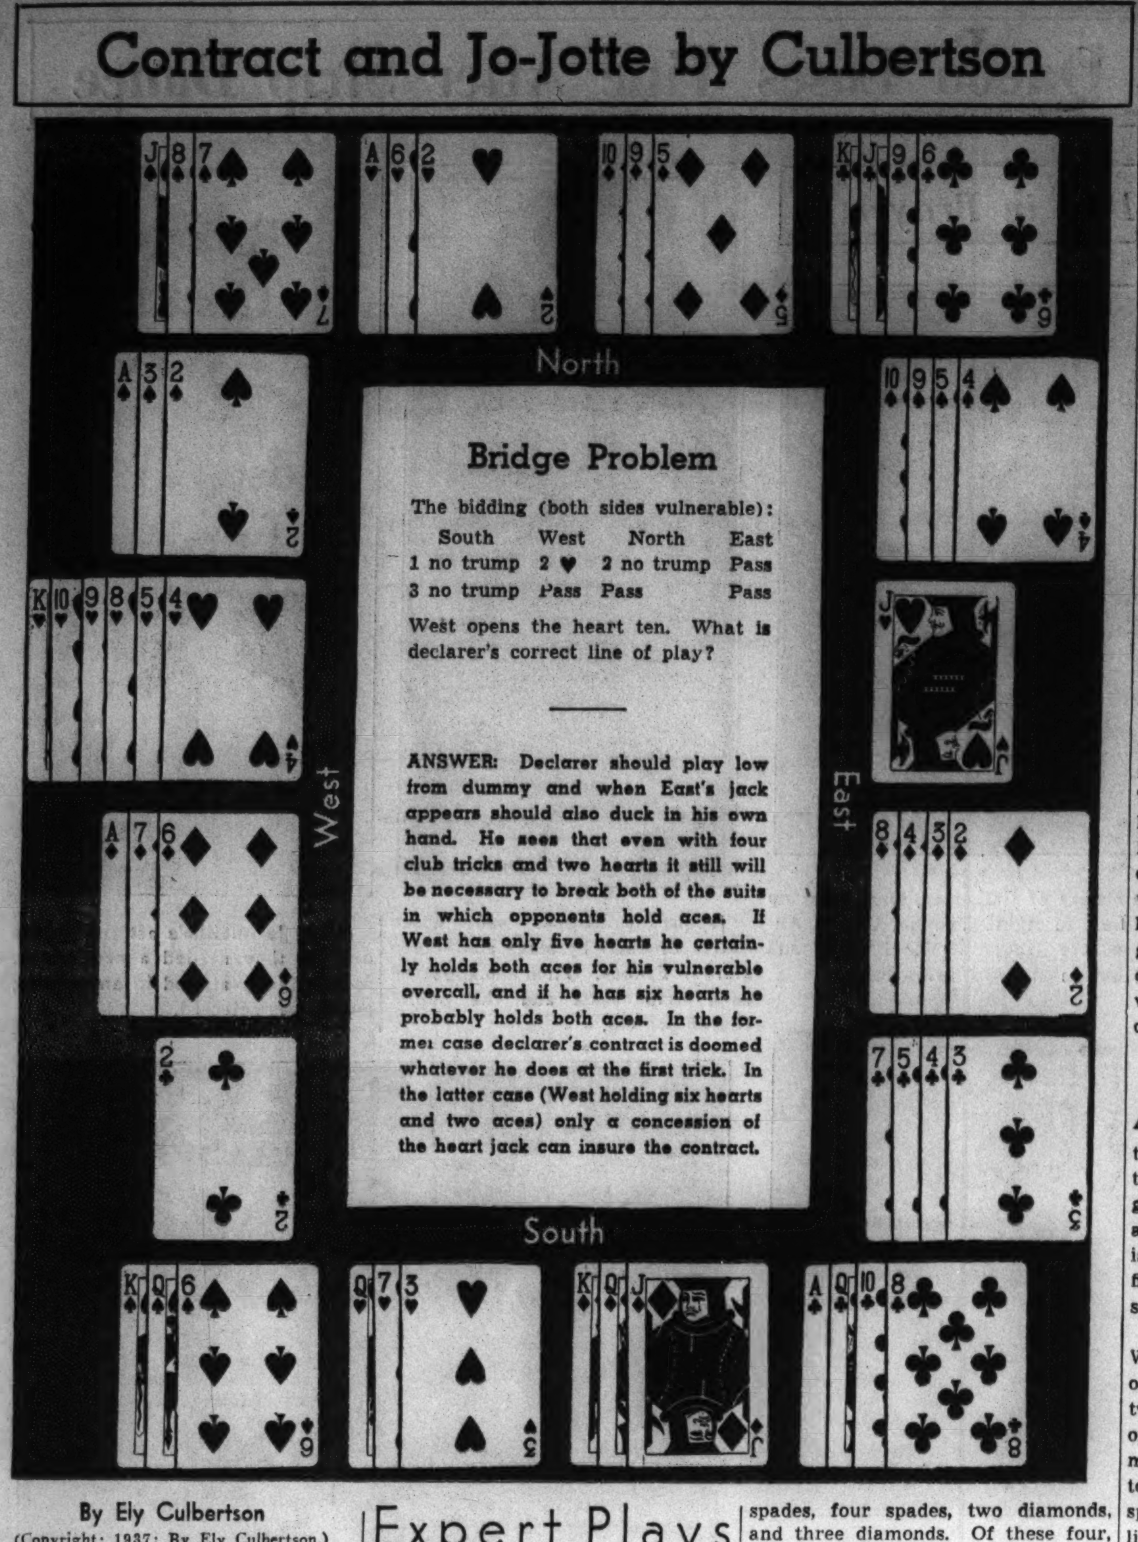
Contract and Jo-Jotte by Culbertson



Bridge Problem

The bidding (both sides vulnerable):

South	West	North	East
1 no trump	2 ♥	2 no trump	Pass
3 no trump	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opens the heart ten. What is declarer's correct line of play?

ANSWER: Declarer should play low from dummy and when East's jack appears should also duck in his own hand. He sees that even with four club tricks and two hearts it still will be necessary to break both of the suits in which opponents hold aces. If West has only five hearts he certainly holds both aces for his vulnerable overcall, and if he has six hearts he probably holds both aces. In the former case declarer's contract is doomed whatever he does at the first trick. In the latter case (West holding six hearts and two aces) only a concession of the heart jack can insure the contract.

By Ely Culbertson

(Copyright: 1937: By Ely Culbertson.)

LAST week in the Graphic Section of The Sunday Tribune I introduced to you a new two-handed card game, jo-jotte. I explained the rules, the bidding, and the scoring and then played a hand with you. Today I invite you to play another hand with me.

I pick up one of the packs of thirty-two cards, shuffle, and push it toward you to be cut. Here are our original six cards:

ME	YOU
♠ J 7	♠ Q
♥ ——	♥ K J 9
♦ A	♦ Q
♣ Q 9 7	♣ K

The thirteenth card (which is turned up as a tentative trump) is the nine of spades. Your hand is not much good at spades, so you say, "Pass." At spades I am sure to win a trick with the jack of spades, since it is the highest trump. That will give me 20 points. The ace of diamonds will give me 10 more. And I have the right to exchange the seven of spades for the nine—if the spades are trumps. That will give me 15 more points—a total of 45. That is plenty, so I say, "I'll play it." Your hand is much too weak to double, and you lack the stoppers and high cards which would justify a no trump overcall. You have no choice but to pass.

Now I deal three more cards to each of us and turn up the bottom card of the pack, the ace of hearts. Then we assort our hands and this is what we see:

ME	YOU
♠ J 10 7	♠ K Q
♥ ——	♥ 10 K J 9
♦ A K	♦ Q
♣ Q J 9 7	♣ A K

You now have a good hand. That king and queen of spades is the jo-jotte. You have a three-card sequence in hearts (J 10 9), and your ten of hearts is the high card in the suit (as long as the ace of hearts has been turned up). And your high cards in clubs are not to be sneezed at.

You begin the melding by saying, "Twenty." I exchange my seven of spades for the nine of spades and say, "Equal." That means that I have a twenty also. You say, "To the jack." That means that the highest card of your twenty is a jack. Even though both twenties are headed by the same card, mine wins because it is in the trump suit. So I show my J 10 9 of trumps and score 20 points above the line.

Now you look around for a good opening lead. You realize that it's a good idea to lead your long suit; you may win control of the hand. Therefore you lead the ten of hearts. I trump with the ten of spades and win the trick. Now it is my turn to lead. I don't want to take out trumps, because then I would not have a very good chance to win the last trick. I must try to make you trump also, so I lead my long suit. I return the jack of clubs. You win that trick with the king of clubs and continue your forcing game by leading the nine of hearts. I trump with the nine of spades and lead the nine of clubs. You win the nine with your ace and make me use my last trump, the jack, on your jack of hearts. There is still a chance that my diamonds will enable me to win the last trick. I lead my queen of clubs. You trump with the king of spades and remember to say, "Jo."

You lead the king of hearts. I have no more trumps, so I discard my seven of clubs. Now you lead the queen of diamonds. You save your queen of trumps in order to win the last trick. I know your other card must be the queen of spades, since you said "Jo" when you played the king. I win the ace of diamonds and give you the last trick. You carefully say "Jotte" as you take it, and then we count.

Expert Plays Jo-Jotte with You

The Scoring

My tricks	Pts.	Your tricks	Pts.
♠ 10, ♥ 10	20	♣ K, ♣ J	5
♠ 9, ♥ 9	15	♣ A, ♣ 9	10
♠ J, ♥ J	20	♠ K, ♣ Q	10
♦ A, ♦ Q	15	♥ K, ♣ 7	5
		♠ Q, ♦ K	10
		Jo-jotte	20
		Last trick	10
Total 70		Total 70

We each count 70 points for tricks. But I point to the score sheet and show the 20 I had melded. That won the hand for me. So I score 70 points below the line and put your 70 points above the line on your side of the score sheet. I did not make a game, even though my total score was 90 points Only my trick score counts toward game, and that amounted to only 70 points—a very juicy part score.

You are not discouraged, because if you get a good hand on the next deal you can score a game and wipe out my part score just as you would if we were playing bridge. And I heave a sigh of relief. For a beginner you certainly gave me a lot of trouble.

NOW we will take up the subject of contract bridge. Border-line hands in contract—hands which are not quite a good bid but which the holder passes only with the greatest reluctance—require a special kind of handling. It must always be borne in mind that the partner of the passer will take a pessimistic view of combined resources. He cannot be expected to assume that the pass was almost a bid. Thus if the "almost bidder" has another opportunity to indicate his strength he should not dilly-dally and respond with a bid that may still be ambiguous. Take such a hand as the following:

NORTH
♠ Q 10 6 5
♦ A K Q 5 3 2
♣ 10

WEST
♠ 7 3 2
♥ Q J 6 3
♦ 10 4
♣ K J 8 4

EAST
♠ J 4
♥ K 8 5 2
♦ J 9
♣ A Q 7 3 2

SOUTH
♠ A K 9 8
♥ A 10 4
♣ 9 6 5

With both sides vulnerable, North deals and passes. East does likewise, and South bids one spade. South is by no means pleased with this bid—as a matter of fact, he feels much more like passing, since game appears out of the question, and if North holds a really bad hand even one spade may be severely punished. West passes and it is now up to North again. North has four conceivable responses, namely, three spades, four spades, two diamonds, and three diamonds. Of these four, two are definitly bad and would immediately be discarded by experts. I wonder whether average players would pass them up quite so quickly?

The bad bids are three spades and two diamonds. It must be remembered that after an original pass a jump in partner's suit is no longer forcing and in this case would be fatal. South would be quite mad to go on to game with his miserable hand even if North jumped to three spades. Two diamonds would be an even worse response.

It is here that the change in bidding technique is most notable. If North had not passed originally two diamonds would be the correct response to one spade. The fact that he had passed, however, makes this response horrible.

Having disposed of the bad bids, let us consider the two others that are good. Four spades has the merit at least of insuring that the partnership will be in game. But there its merit ends! The bid does not represent the true potentialities of North's hand opposite a spade bid. North would bid four spades over one on such a hand as ♠ Q 8 6 4 3 ♥ 7 5 ♦ 9 ♣ A 9 7 5 3, and surely this type of hand does not approach the one actually held in playing strength. By the simple process of elimination, then, three diamonds remains North's only good bid in response to one spade.

It is true that with this particular hand clairvoyance would be required by one or both partners in order to reach the slam contract that would be a virtual laydown. But this is a "result" observation and does not alter the fact that three diamonds is the one proper response on North's hand. In this case, of course, South could do no more than answer with three no trump and later pass to North's four spade bid. If South had held any one of countless other hands, however, the three diamond bid would have been the only key to full success.

Each Monday in The Daily Tribune Mr. Culbertson writes a bridge article especially for beginners. Articles for more advanced players on other days.

Today's Questions

Question: Partner opened with one spade. Next hand passed. What should be my response with:

♠ A ♥ K Q 6 3 ♦ Q J 7 4 ♣ 8 6 4 3

Answer: Two hearts.

Question: What is the correct opening bid on the following:

♠ A K Q 4 ♥ Q J 8 6 4 3 ♦ 8 4 ♣ 9

Answer: One heart.

Plump Students of Barnard Take Reducing Course

A CHECK-UP of eight Barnard college girls who started this semester overweight revealed the success of an extra-curricular "course" in dieting with weight losses of from three to four pounds a week.

Dr. Gulielma Alsop, the college physician, and Miss Helen Page Abbott, head of the dormitories, are in charge of the "slimming table," at which planned meals are served to girls who wish to be careful of their weight.

Miss Abbott explained that the "slimming table" was only for girls who are "definitly handicapped by overweight," and that the dieting "is entirely a medical matter."

"The girls began of their own volition," she said, "and both Dr. Alsop and I try to make them take it as a game."

Miss Charlotte Strickland, the college dietitian, has been coöperating in planning meals that give diet conscious students a choice of four items from fruit, milk, meat, vegetables, and a salad.

Dr. Alsop, who checks the condition of the "slimmers" once a week, said they had not lost their good complexions or their resistance to colds. One girl who had been losing weight regularly went home for a short vacation, entered a waffle eating contest and won. Now she has to start the diet course all over again.

Chic Jackets Add Glamor to Simple Frocks

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

PARIS.—[Special.]—Mrs. Harrison Williams, the beauteous Nona Williams who is the undisputed champion of dress in the United States, has just worked out a new system for dressing during the summer. She has been buying clothes in Paris, and although her budget is without limit, Mrs. Williams picked her wardrobe on a principle that might be followed successfully by a woman with a pint size clothes allowance.

This famous hostess, who has town and country houses, a palace at Palm Beach, and a villa in Capri, is going to do honors in two new black frocks which Schiaparelli has made for her in lines of the utmost simplicity. These two frocks, however, will look like at least seven, because Mrs. Williams has five new jackets to wear over them, and these glamorous little wraps transform them. There you have the system in a sentence. Two good dresses, and an abundance of camouflage in the way of slipover wraps that may be worn indoors and out.

AN important point in the clothes plan of Mrs. Harrison Williams is the matter of accessories. Hats to suit the occasion have been selected with great thought, and gloves and shoes and jewels. Genius for good dressing is like any other kind—it has an infinite capacity for taking pains with small things.

The way the color scheme of Mrs. Williams' clothes works out is another significant thing. She has her two dresses—the fundamental part of the wardrobe—in black. That makes these frocks, which are going to be worn all the time, not too conspicuous, although they have good lines and nice materials, one being in heavy, black silk crêpe and the other in pebbly black silk. The hats chosen to wear with these also are all black, but new and stunning in shape and trimmings. It is the jackets which give glow and glamor and color to the costumes, and there are enough of them so frequent changes can be made.

For grand occasions there is a short jacket of pink satin covered with opalescent pearl embroidery in flowers that seem to grow out of the material.

Strap sandals in kid that is the color of the jackets, or in black, are perfect footnotes for the ensembles chosen by Mrs. Williams. Short black gloves for some occasions and long ones for others go with all the varied colors of the jackets.

In one of the black dresses that Mrs. Williams selected, it is interesting to note that the silhouette lines are slender and modern, in this season when there are so many swing skirts and fancy silhouettes. This model is made of crinkled, dull black silk crêpe with a long, slender skirt which is split rather daringly at the front hem. The blouse has a high, daytime neckline and short sleeves, and a wide tuck suggests a high waistline which the black suede belt with a fancy composition fastening denies. The pink satin jacket, embroidered with pearl flowers, is worn like a cape. A stunning black tulle basket toque filled with stately black ostrich tips makes a perfect hat.

THE model of the multiple jackets which Mrs. Williams has selected, is solidly covered with tiny colored beads, so that it looks like bead cloth. It fastens with a composition butterfly at the waistline and has short sleeves caught into fitted cuffs below the elbows. These jackets are worn over both dresses.

Mrs. Williams also has ordered another type of jacket, and this goes with the simple, low cut dress that is the second frock. The dress is made of black pebbled crêpe and has a long, slim skirt that flares at the hem. The bodice is perfectly plain, with a low, square neckline.

It is the jacket that supplies the brilliance, according to the plan. This is done in a different way, the jacket being made of the same material as the dress, but trimmed with gleaming curved and curlicued bands of white lether. The lether goes all around the edges of the jacket, replacing the lapels and the collar and accenting the two hip pockets. It fastens at the waistline with a fancy black composition button. There is another jacket much like this that may be worn over the dress. It is trimmed with lilac colored material and beading.

The hat that goes with this costume is a raffia basket toque of shiny surface, and it is filled in with tiny black birds, their wings spread for flight.

Chicagoans in Sea Island Hosts on 32d Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Warren A. Lamson, of Chicago, celebrated their 32d wedding anniversary at a dinner party on Monday evening in the main dining room at the SEA ISLAND, GA.

Cloister, Sea Island, where they are spending several weeks. An aperitif party in the Cloister clubrooms preceded the dinner, and among those attending were Selden F. White, of Barrington, Ill., and his daughter, Miss Billee White, and Mr. and Mrs. Lynn A. Williams. An especially attractive floral centerpiece was arranged on the table and during the evening the orchestra played the wedding march as Mr. and Mrs. Lamson were toasted by their guests.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning value. Do not ask where stamps may be sold, as the Postage Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope to reply.

BY issuing three stamps bearing the portrait of George VI., on April 1, Canada leads the British empire in the race to show the new ruler on the postage stamps of the various colonies and dominions.

The new Canadian stamps, which by the way are not a coronation issue but a part of the new regular issue of that country, are illustrated with a first day cover shown in an adjoining column. The coronation stamps for the 45 crown colonies and dependencies will be issued in a uniform design which shows the portraits of George VI. and Elizabeth in a setting of coronation emblems, including the crown, orb, sword of state and scepters. The date appears at the top, the name of the colony at the bottom, and the value in each of the lower corners.

The stamps will be slightly smaller than the jubilee issues and will be printed in a single color. The issue for each colony will be limited to those three low values ordinarily used for domestic and foreign cards and letters. As in the case of the jubilee issues, when Newfoundland was allowed to have its stamps in a single color instead of in two colors, as required for all other colonies, that country is again allowed the distinction of having its name in white on a colored background, whereas the stamps of all other colonies will show the name in color on a white ground.

Information regarding the stamps to be issued by the dominions and their dependencies has been slow in reaching the public, but it is understood that parts of the empire will have distinctive stamps except possibly Australia and Western Samoa, although it is believed that the royal portraits will appear on certain values of the new regular issue.

The dependencies of Australia are expected to issue sets of four stamps each. Canada is scheduled for a special issue to be placed on sale at the time of the coronation and to be withdrawn after a few weeks. South Africa will issue a set of five values in bilingual pairs, and South West Africa will have eight values also in bilingual pairs. Southern Rhodesia has announced four values, but no word has been received from India or Burma, although it is almost certain that the former will do the usual thing, and that Burma may overprint Indian stamps.

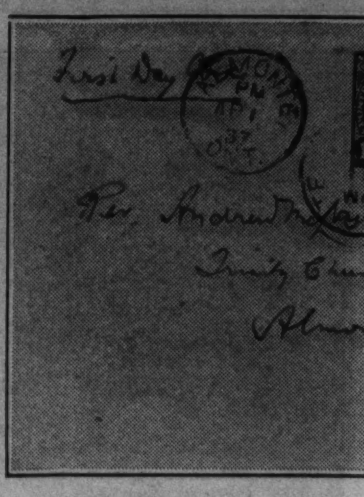
Originally Great Britain announced that it would place on sale 250 million sets of coronation stamps in four values. These were to be issued in advance of coronation day, and recently a news release stated that three more values up to one shilling also would be included in the coronation set. Overprinted British stamps are to be expected for the various districts of Morocco.

The general understanding has been that the special stamps of the colonies and dominions would be placed on sale on May 12, coronation day, and continue to be issued, at least on request, until the end of the year. But since coronation day is a legal holiday throughout the empire with nearly all postoffices closed, it is not certain that stamps will be sold on that day in some colonies, not that first day postmarks will show that date.



The first day cover postmarked at Almonte, Ont., shows the three new Canadian stamps with portrait of George VI. It was loaned by the Rev. Andrew McLauchlin of Almonte, Ont., Canada.

The March number of the Stamp Lover [London], official organ of the Junior Philatelic society of Great Britain, contains an instructive article on American engravers and engraving. This is the first publication of a paper prepared and read at the Tipex by Thomas F. Morris, son of Tom Morris, who was connected with the American Bank Note company and who was in charge of postage stamp printing for the bureau of engraving and printing when that governmental agency began to print all United States stamps.

It is unfortunate for collectors in the United States that this story has not been published in one of our weekly philatelic papers, as it provides detailed information concerning the various men who produced the nation's stamps throughout the 19th century.

Stamp Notes.

The American Stamp Dealers' association is the principal trade organization in the United States and maintains its membership on an invitation basis. Any trade problem is considered carefully by its board and an active full time secretary's office is maintained where all information clears as to fraud matters involving stamps. This office also houses the Stamp Dealers' Credit bureau, a collection and information service for the trade, managed by Miss P. Bruyere. Sidney F. Barrett, of the Economist Stamp company, 87 Nassau street, New York City, is president of the A. S. D. A., and Victor W. Rotnem, Room 609, 38 Park row, New York City, is secretary.

The 1937 schedules of Zeppelin flights from Germany to the United States and to South America are now available to interested collectors. For the first flight of the season the Hindenburg will leave Frankfurt a/M on May 3, to arrive and leave Lakehurst on May 6. A complete schedule with the various rates for cards and letters, with or without domestic air mail service in the United States and/or Europe, may be obtained from F. W. von Meister, German Zeppelin Transport company, 354 Fourth avenue, New York City.

Club Notes.

The Hawthorne Stamp club of the Western Electric company will meet hereafter on the second Wednesday of each month, at 5:15 p. m., in the Hawthorne plant of the company.

The National Junior Stamp exhibition in which prize winning exhibits of junior collectors from all parts of the United States will be judged and displayed, will be held May 13 to 15, inclusive, at the offices of Stamps Jr., 2 West 46th street, New York City, and the winning exhibits will be shown in the hall of the Associated Etchers on the 9th floor at the same address. There are two classes, A, ages 8 to 13 years, and B, ages 14 to 18 years. Each contains five groups for the various divisions of collecting. Only one-page exhibits which have won first prize in their respective class and group may be entered in the national competition. For details, entry form, etc., address Frank L. Wilson, Director Stamps, Jr., 2 West 46th street, New York City.

Mercolized Wax
Complexion Renovator
Keeps Skin Young

NOTHING in the universe is self acting, and this fact is abundantly true about skin, where external aid is needed to help muscles and cells do their work of keeping skin beautiful. The Mercolized Wax method of conditioning, enhancing and preserving complexions is simple and immediately perceived.

For over a quarter of a century, Mercolized Wax has been the trusted cream for revealing skin in its natural clearness and smoothness. It frees pores of extraneous clogginess. It removes the deterring and damaging dead skin so alien to complexion beauty. The daily use of Mercolized Wax prevents tawniness and imparts to your complexion the smooth sway of sparkling loveliness.

In a word, Mercolized Wax RENOVATES the complexion. Thus assuring skin beauty with its frank appeal and incalculable power. Choose Mercolized Wax. Use Mercolized Wax. Then enthuse over the glorious, youthful complexion it gives you. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty of any complexion.

USE SAXOLITE ASTRINGENT DAILY

THIS refreshing, stimulating skin tonic smooths out wrinkles and age lines. Refines coarse pores. Eliminates oiliness. Dissolve one ounce Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel.

Sold at drug and department stores everywhere.

What's In Style Today?

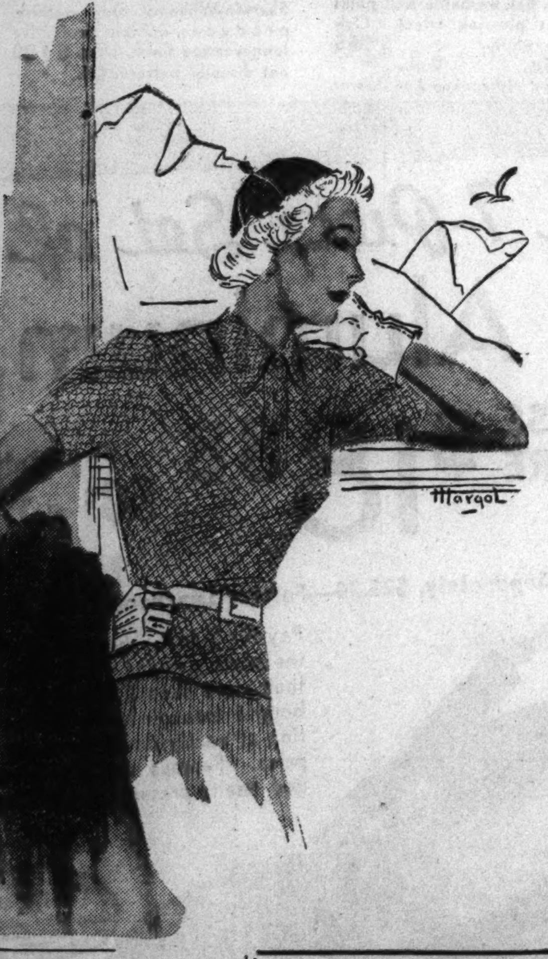
Slender Silhouette Necessary to Wear Bolero Styles Well

BOLEROS are not for hippy figures. Those adorable little jackets, which are so popular in 1937 spring styles that you see them in evening ensembles as well as afternoon frocks, break the line just above the waist and make wide hips look even broader.

Unless you already have the ideal bolero figure with narrow hips, there are only two things to do about boleros—either stay away from them altogether or trim down your hipline. There is no need for adopting the defeatist decision. If your heart is set on a bolero, no hip length jacket or redingote will do. Hips can be reduced in measurement by specifically planned exercises, if you practice them faithfully. Hip and thigh muscles respond quickly to reducing exercises. Fatty pads on the hips are easier to get at than those on many other parts of the body. And it is those pads that you want to get under control.

"Narrow hips" doesn't mean no hips at all, in the manner of yesteryear's "boyish figure." As a matter of fact, fashion authorities are in favor of curves this season—the suggestion of a curved hipline, with a definite nip in at the waist.

Mesh Holds Fashion Lead Among Crocheted Blouses



By Ellen Bruce.

MESH seems to be holding the fashion lead in the field of hand crochet blouses. The reasons may be that this crochet pattern works up more rapidly than the lacy openwork patterns and that there is not so much counting. In the spring it is difficult for even the most diligent to concentrate very long on any subject.

The crochet blouse illustrated today is utterly simple, straight, and smart. The turn down collar, with the four buttons on the placket, is the only trimming on an otherwise severe blouse. Hip length blouses are the reigning favorite for summer this season, with tailored models to the fore. Knitting and crochet cotton, linen, a synthetic fiber combined with finest wool, are all materials that may be used to make this blouse. Heavy wool yarns are completely out of the picture here. The skirts worn with this blouse may be either knitted or of fabric. The lether belt matches the gloves worn with the ensemble.

HOW TO ORDER

If you wish instructions for crocheting the filet sport blouse with short sleeves and turnover collar, illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Ellen Bruce, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

Woman's Club Party Planned to Honor City

AS its contribution to Chicago's 100th birthday celebration, the Chicago Woman's club is holding a jubilee breakfast at high noon Tuesday. A list of guests that reads like "Who's Who in Chicago" has been invited to take part in a symposium on the city's civic and cultural achievements during the last century.

Representatives of the governmental bodies, the Art institute, the board of education, the universities, the public library, the Planetarium and other museums, the Chicago Symphony orchestra, the Chicago Historical society, the newspapers, the Municipal Art league, the churches, the Chicago Bar association, the Chicago Medical society, and other organizations will be seated at the speakers' table. In addition to the symposium, there will be a musical program by Miss Janis Porter and other singers.

Mrs. Willett H. Cornwell, the new president, and other officers elected in March, will take office at the close of the club's annual meeting Saturday.

Mrs. Richard J. Barr becomes first vice president; Mrs. Edwin L. Lobdell, second vice president; Mrs. Charles F. Haseltine, third vice president; Mrs. Walter H. Buhlig, recording secretary; Mrs. Reid M. Bennett, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Harry Hart, treasurer; Mrs. George W. Williams, chairman of bulletin; Mrs. John D. Hoefels, chairman of publicity; Mrs. Calvin P. King, second vice chairman of the house committee.

Several thousand members of the twenty-three auxiliaries affiliated with the Daughters of Zion Infant Home and Day Nursery are joining forces to give a testimonial luncheon to Mrs. Edwin Romberg, Tuesday at the Standard club.

Mrs. Edwin Romberg.
[De Haven Photo.]

Mrs. Romberg, who is life president of the home, has just completed a decade of work in behalf of children at the home. The home, which is located at California avenue and Hirsch boulevard, was founded by Mrs. Charna Reiger, now honorary president. Charles Bondy is chairman of the committee arranging the luncheon, with Mrs. Maurice Johnson, Mrs. Joseph Grossman, Mrs. Frank Doppelt, and Mrs. M. R. Lilienthal as co-chairmen.

The Sonia-Jane auxiliary of the home will give its first annual dance this evening at the Medinah club. Joseph Greenstadt is chairman.

Two other spring luncheons taking place tomorrow are those of the Renaissance and of the Campion Mothers' club. The former is to be held at the Blackstone hotel, with Mrs. R. Hosken Damon, president, in the chair. Parnell Egan, tenor, will sing and Helen Ruth Schall will give a reading before the Campion Mothers' club at its luncheon at the Chicago Athletic club. Mrs. E. N. Heinz is president.

Another interesting luncheon of the week will be that of the Southern Woman's Educational Alliance, tomorrow at the Arts club. Mrs. Henry Lane Schmelz of New York will discuss the alliance's educational and vocational work among the mountaineers of Kentucky. Mrs. Schmelz is vice president of the alliance's New York branch.

Receiving with Mrs. Robert M. Jeffries, president, and members of the board, will be Mrs. George L. Wilkinson, Mrs. Hubert Burnham, Mrs. George B. Dryden, Mrs. H. M. Pulsifer, Mrs. Harden Fitts, and Mrs. J. Louis Rubel.

Mrs. Schmelz also will speak before the junior auxiliary of the alliance at its meeting Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Joyce Cox, 2235 Forest View road, Evanston. Mrs. Cox will have as assisting hostesses Mrs. Graydon E. Downs, Mrs. C. R. Ballard, and Mrs. L. C. Perry.

Hans Lange, Rosa Raisa, Izler Solomon, Rossetter G. Cole, and Mrs. Herman Kretschmer will be among the guests at the annual spring luncheon of the Musicians' Club of Women, tomorrow at the Woman's Athletic club. Mrs. Louise Hattstaedt Winter is president.

Smith College Dance Group Is Rehersing for Annual Recital

THE Smith College Dance group recently began rehersing for its annual spring recital, to be presented the last week in May. In contrast to the modern atmosphere of the performance last spring, "Man and the Masses," the production this year is to represent a garden fête of the early 18th century.

The thirty-five members of the group, under the direction of Miss Edith Burnett, instructor of the dance at the college, are to present the picture at the home of President and Mrs. William Allan Neilson on May 26.

The performance will be repeated as the concluding event of Float night, May 29. At this time the picture is to be given in the quadrangle, where the buildings will form an 18th century background and the music will be heard through the open French doors.

The presentation by the dance group on Float night, which is one of the most picturesque events of the year held outdoors on Paradise pond, answers the demand for outdoor dancing on this program.

The Smith College Symphony orchestra, conducted by Rose L. Finney of the department of music, will give selections by Steffani and Muffat.

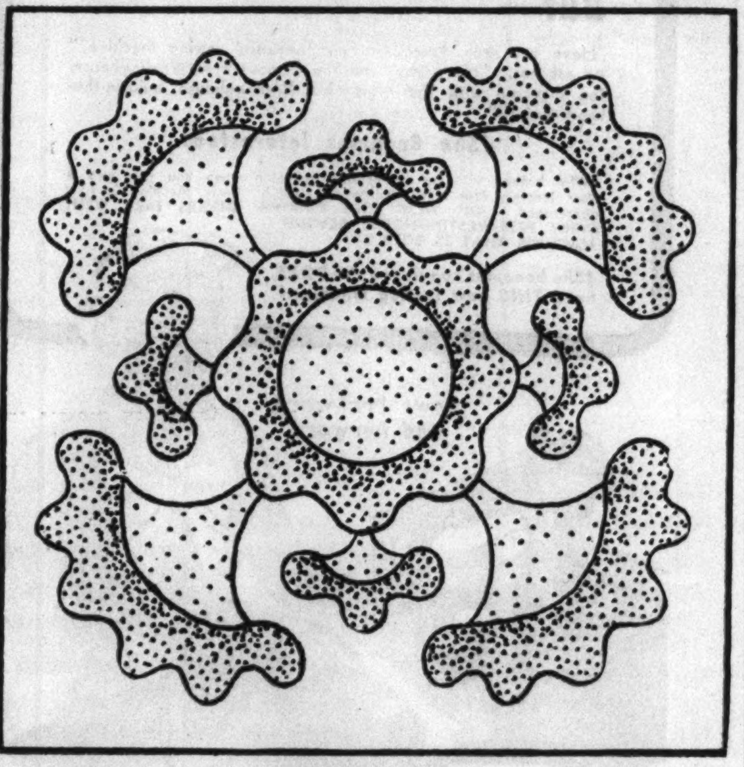
Quilt in Coxcomb Design Has Patches Easy to Cut



COXCOMB BLOCK.

By Nancy Cabot.

THERE are several old coxcomb patterns of both pieced and applique design. "Coxcomb Block," illustrated today, is one of the simplest. It is equally as effective as any other quilt of the same name, but the patches are designed to simplify the cutting for those who do not care for that part of quilt making. "Coxcomb Block" is one of those patterns which invariably are composed of shades of red. Many other blocks add even more brilliance to the design by adding touches of blue, green, yellow, and orange, but, since this block is designed for simplicity, only two shades of red against a white or cream ground are used.

Patterns of this design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

Bibles in Use More Than 50 Years Found in Texas

FAMILY Bibles brought into Texas 50 years ago still are in general use.

Investigators for the Texas old age assistance commission have been shown more than 100,000 such Bibles by persons seeking to qualify for old age pensions.

The present Texas legislature is the second in the last 14 years without a woman member.

Old age pensions were introduced into Great Britain in 1908.

Decorative Papers in Good Designs Enhance Interiors

WHERE there's a wall, there's a way of papering it. At least, that is the opinion of Nancy McClelland, who says, "Nothing more useful in furnishing a room has ever been invented than decorative papers in good designs.

"Papers that are backgrounds; papers that take the place of tapestries and painted decorations; papers that give the feeling of chintz or cretonne or toile de Jouy; Chinese papers that are purely fantasies—all these are possible to get today in the hand-blocked reproductions of the old designs that were so effectively used in decoration in the 18th and 19th centuries. There is scarcely a room in the house for which a suitable paper is lacking, whether formality or informality is the purpose.

"The art of using wall paper properly is a special study. Some rooms will double in charm if they are only partially papered, instead of being covered from end to end with a design. The combination of wall paper with wood paneling is a delightful employment of this unpretentious material of decoration. Printed paper borders will often complete the rooms before anything else is placed in them, and bedrooms and bathrooms will always be gay and charming if the right papers are used. On the choice and the employment of the design and the color of the wood trim and the ceiling much depends."

Did This New Orange Juice And BonKora Cocktail Way Make Her Lose 45 Lbs. Fat Fast?

125 lbs.

". . . the thing one finds many a fashionable New Yorker drinking everywhere you go these fine spring days is a BonKora Cocktail, made from Orange Juice and BonKora.

"Its rage seems to have started when it became noised about that a registered nurse, who could no longer work on account of her weak, fatty condition, lost 45 pounds and 10 inches off her hips with the result that she was able to go back to work again mainly by resorting to this pungent BonKora Cocktail method."

No Dangerous Drugs—No Thyroid—No Dinitrophenol No Starvation

How the BonKora Cocktail Way Has Helped Many People to Lose Pounds of Ugly Fat

"Drinking a glassful of chilled Orange Juice mixed with a tablespoonful of BonKora, two times a day, and eating their fill of the delicious foods, as shown in the BonKora package, it is claimed, has made many people lose from 7 to 67 pounds, and has made their waist and bust measurements go down from 3 to 11 inches.

"The reason why this Orange Juice and BonKora way seems to produce such amazing results is first, the Orange Juice provides for the necessary vitamins to maintain health and supplies the elements to counteract the harmful over-acid conditions that develop while reducing and, second, the BonKora helps to provide for the proper elimination of the toxins or poisons which often interfere with normal metabolism and make reduction of weight very difficult if not impossible."

Will You Try This Orange Juice and BonKora Way To See if You Can Lose Pounds of Excess Fat?

"Where any person is bothered with avoidable and reducible overweight caused by poor elimination, overeating or overdrinking, which is held responsible for a large percentage of all overweight conditions, it is said that this new method often causes a loss of excess fat that is little short of sensational—Also, new enthusiasts will probably be much interested to know how much better those who have tried it say they feel, how much better they say they sleep and how much better fitted for work they say they are."

Hepburn and Howard Tours in 'Jane Eyre' and 'Hamlet' Aid General Stage Revival

By Charles Collins.

THE future of the Chicago stage depends, in large measure, upon the development of "the road," i. e., the opportunities for patronage to be found by touring theatrical companies of the first rank in the centers of population outside of New York. If "the road," which was almost destroyed by the depression and the cinema, can be restored to a healthy condition, with playhouses where touring companies can give performances for a night, a half-week, a week, or a run to satisfactory patronage, Chicago will regain much of its former position as a metropolitan theatrical center.

The season now approaching its close has presented considerable evidence of such a revival. In Chicago there has been a notable improvement, both in plays and patronage, over the preceding year. Moreover, the country in general, in cities which form the true "road"—the one-night, half-week, and one-week "stands"—also has testified to a reawakening of the stage as a national institution.

The most interesting tours of the season, from a technical and economic point of view, were those of Katharine Hepburn in the Theater Guild's new dramatization of "Jane Eyre" and of Leslie Howard in his own production of "Hamlet." Both of these players are film stars of the first magnitude, returning to the footlights between periods of cinema activity with ambitions for distinguished achievement in the parent art upon which the movies have been a dangerous parasitic growth. They toured extensively, accepting the hardships of "the road" like old-school troupers, and their box office records have been impressive.

Their success has been a breaking of the chains of Broadway opinion by which the American stage has been enslaved for decades. Neither Miss Hepburn's "Jane Eyre" nor Mr. Howard's "Hamlet" appealed to the public under the ancient and tedious slogan, "a New York hit." Miss Hepburn did not submit her acting as Charlotte Brontë's heroine to New York at all, and will not be seen there until next season. Mr. Howard suffered acutely from the New York verdict on his interpretation of the rôle of Hamlet, as compared to the concurrent Dane of John Gielgud, and withdrew from Broadway with the brand of failure on his sensitive brow. Nevertheless, on "the road" they prospered prodigiously. An old taboo was broken, and a certain amount of light broke through the shadows of impresarios' minds. Many of these gentlemen are now scurrying about, searching for "attractions" that may duplicate the Hepburn and Howard victories on "the road."

Miss Hepburn's five weeks in Chicago, accompanied by its fraudulent and as yet unexplained rumors of an impending marriage, do not need to be recalled. The saga of her tour as a whole, however, is worth telling. She started out in early December, with New Haven, Conn., as her take-off, and continued until early in April, with Baltimore as terminal. Her farthest west was Kansas City. The box office average was better than $20,000 a week.

"Jane Eyre" is a play of romantic sentiment and old-fashioned emotions in the form that is loosely called melodrama. It comes out of the early Victorian period and deals with manners and attitudes which, when presented sincerely, are supposed to be anathema among the flippant "moderns." By snap judgment from prevalent points of view, the play should have been laughed off the stage in its first month. On the contrary, it was much enjoyed by its audiences. Playgoers may have hurried to

Jokes Played by Assistant Director Keep Actors on Hollywood Set in Hubbub

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—(Special.)—There is a terrible hubbub going on out at M-G-M on the "Broadway Melody" set. The uproar is over the gags being put over on the principals, Bob Taylor and George Murphy, by the redoubtable assistant director, Charles O'Malley, brother of our old friend of the silent days, Pat O'Malley. Taylor, who is an agreeable and undemanding young fellow, with no fuss or feathers, has been given a little dressing room on the set. It is made of black muslin stretched over a frame and has no top. A couch to rest on and a dressing table with a chair are the only furnishings, but Bob found them adequate and made no complaint. Then along came O'Malley.

Several swanky new portable dressing rooms are in the process of construction on a nearby stage. They are destined for stars, exactly for whom it has not as yet been determined, in spite of questioning on the part of most folks who pass them. O'Malley, whose genius for ribs and gags has endeared him to Director Roy Del Ruth who always uses him as the assistant on his pictures, nosed about and decided to make something of this new dressing room business.

He approached George Murphy, the dancing star who is teamed with Eleanor Powell in "Melody," and began giving him a buildup. "Murphy," says he, "it's just as well to realize your own importance. Now, with Clark Gable having that handsome new dressing room given him by Carole Lombard, and what with Franchot Tone enjoying that lovely dressing room Joan Crawford gave him after she finished with it and got herself a new one, there's no reason at all why you shouldn't be having one of those nice new dressing rooms they're building over there. And I'm the very man who's going to get it for you." So said O'Malley. Murphy took it all in, was duly impressed, and started to wait for the new dressing room. All the extras on the set began hearing about how O'Malley was getting it for Murphy.

Word got around to the valet who looks after Taylor. So that was it, was it? If O'Malley can get a dressing room for that Murphy, he can certainly get one for Taylor! There was too much chiseling around that set anyway, with the wrong people acting important and demanding. Robert Taylor should have one of those new dressing rooms even if it were the last thing he would do. The idea, Murphy with a dressing room, and Taylor, his boss, a big star, second only to Gable in Hollywood, dressing behind a couple of hunks of wood and a skimpy muslin screen! That O'Malley—he'd show him. With a rush and a bounce, he went to Taylor with the story.

Taylor, amused, decided to look into the matter of the new dressing rooms. He was interestedly looking one over when along came O'Malley.

"You should be having one of these dressing rooms, Mr. Taylor. Aren't they nice?" says O'Malley.

"They certainly are," says Taylor.

"Would you like me to get one for you?" says O'Malley.

"That would be nice of you," says Taylor.

"It's agreed," says O'Malley. "One's for you."

When we left the set, interest was keyed to bursting point as to just who was going to get one of those dressing rooms. O'Malley, least of all, knows who'll get them; but Taylor and Murphy are confidently expecting them, with Taylor's valet in a terrible state over O'Malley's "interference." Now, he figures,

Gags and More Gags by That Man O'Malley

that if Taylor gets the dressing room O'Malley will be taking all the bows.

If Taylor does we'll let you know.

O'Malley has other gags around the set. One of his multifarious duties is to play shepherd to fifty show girls and get them in front of the camera when his boss, Del Ruth says "Let's have 'em."

The day we were there there were so many visitors, most of them from other sets, that the narrow alley for the show girls to pass on to the stage was completely choked up. One of the other assistants and Del Ruth became almost hysterical over the delay, and a lot of yelling and ordering folks off the set began.

Did O'Malley lose his poise? Not he. That benign undertaker's smile played over his dimpled features as he hustled about, getting the girls to hurry along. He missed two of the ensemble, who had remained in their dressing room for a last few puffs on their cigarets, or noses, as the case might be, and sent in one of the girls with a deep voice to call them out.

As the two lovelies appeared, ruffled as only show girls in feathers can be, one cracked—"So O'Malley's taken to coming in the dressroom now, huh?" Poor O'Malley had to take the guffaws that greeted this sally.

Not long ago Del Ruth was directing Madeleine Carroll in a film. The pair had never met, and on the first day O'Malley got things away to a flying start by telling Miss Carroll that Del Ruth was slightly deaf, but didn't like people to notice it, and that he became irritated with players when he couldn't hear them. Then O'Malley pointed out the prop man as Del Ruth, and the fun began. He further pointed out Del Ruth as O'Malley.

Miss Carroll, hoping to start things off well, went over to the prop man and began hollering pleasantries at him. The prop man was amazed and stared at Miss Carroll as if she were out of her mind. A trifle nonplussed, Miss Carroll went over to "O'Malley" and asked him what was the matter with "Mr. Del Ruth." The howls of glee that arose from the company were a trifle disconcerting to Miss Carroll, but Del Ruth got such a laugh out of it that he hadn't the heart to bawl out O'Malley. Miss Carroll still eyes O'Malley a bit askance when they meet around the sets.

George Murphy Well Liked by Others.

Going back to the "Broadway Melody" set, we find this George Murphy boy quite a hit with the company. The first scene made on the set, with the ensemble, was the finale of the film. It often happens that way. This scene shows Eleanor Powell kissing Taylor. When they were rehersing it a lot of the extras who had worked with Murphy through some of the other scenes began hollering, "Give Murphy a break." In the story Murphy loses Eleanor to Taylor, but the extras didn't want it that way. They hated to see such a good dancing team separated, even if it were only makebelieve.

Harold the prop boy is Eleanor's stooge. They call him Harold the Stooge around the set. He fetches and carries and reminds Eleanor when it is time to take her tonic. She takes a tonic so she won't lose weight. She lost eleven pounds in the first "Melody" doing her dancing scenes, and she has learned to take better care of herself since then.

Eleanor does some really clever impersonations which she probably will get to use in her next picture if a spot for them can be found. She does a wonderful Hepburn imitation, and her takeoff of Jimmy Stewart is so funny that word got to Jimmy about it. He came and asked her to do it for him. At first Eleanor begged off, but he urged her to, and she finally consented. It really was wonderful. And as Jimmy watched her you could see the red coming up out of his collar. "Am I really like that?" he asked her.

Ballet Training Aids Eleanor in Her Work.

When Eleanor works out a new series of dance steps, and she does all her own routine, she draws heavily on the five years of ballet training she had before she began tap work. She combines ballet steps, but she makes her own names for them.

The "Rose and Bill" step is one she tried one night when two friends by those names were over. They liked it, so she named the step for them. Another is the Ted O'Shea step, because she did it over at Ted's one night.

She remembers a routine for four weeks, as the taps for her numbers are recorded separately on the sound track and not at the time she does the routine for the camera. On a Sunday she goes over and records those split sixteenth of a second taps, all in perfect timing to fit in with the camera shots made four weeks before. Few dancers could do that.

Eleanor is getting a bit tired of all the heavy work that dancing entails, with eight and nine hours a day of work on her feet. She is looking forward to the day when she will have time to do more dramatic work after the tap dance rage passes. She has had no time for romance. She is in bed at 9, tired to the bone.

"Ma, I want to be a dramatic actress so I can have time for a heartbeat," says Eleanor.

"I'd like a grandchild," says Ma.

"One thing I know, I'll never teach any of my kids to dance," says Eleanor. "It's too hard work."

Miss Cowl's Tour

JANE COWL and her "First Lady" company passed through Chicago recently on tour. She is returning from the Pacific coast. Engagements in Washington, Baltimore, and Newark will keep her busy up to the end of May. She has given up her intention of witnessing the coronation.

'Springtime in Paris' to Open on April 29

Eddie Varzos' Orchestra Starts Spring Season at Bismarck Hotel.

THE opening of "Springtime in Paris," the new revue at the Casino Parisian in the Hotel Morrison has been postponed from next Tuesday to next Thursday. A feature, in addition to the new production will be Lou Breese's "Gay Ninety Revue," to be given nightly at 10 p. m. The players in "Springtime in Paris" include: Arron and Broder, The Four Craddocks, Piroskae, the Lindstroms, Harriet Carr, the Hudson Wonders and Bob Ripa. There will be a large chorus and ballet. Two performances will be given on the opening night at no advance in prices.

- Eddie Varzos and his Continental orchestra began an engagement in the Walnut Room of the Bismarck hotel last Wednesday night. The Duanos, Donola and Antonio, headline the current floor show.

Featured with the Varzos orchestra is the singing of the Walker Trio and the romantic ballads of Lucia Garcia. Dean Murphy, impersonator, is master of ceremonies. Intermission organ music is supplied by Mildred Fitzpatrick. Varzos plays violin numbers during the dinner.

- Jimmy Joy, orchestra leader in the Continental room of the Stevens hotel, shares the spotlight with the new dance team of Ronald and Roberta. Joan Olson, vocalist, is a newcomer to the room. The engagement of the Archer sisters, dancers, continues.

- The new ballroom dancers, Mario and Floria, are appearing nightly in "Coronation Revue" in the Empire room of the Palmer house. Henry King's dance music, also new to Chicago, is popular. The magic of Russell Swann, who is also master of ceremonies; the tenor singing of Joaquin Garay; The Abbott dancers and the Four Aristocrats complete the bill.

- Chick Endor and Charlie Farrell are the current stars in the Congress Casino of the Congress hotel. Bob Crosby and his band, featuring Kay Weber, continue. Halliday and Clark, dancers, and Howard Brooks, magician, round out the show.

- A newcomer to College Inn's "Jubilee Show" will make his bow tomorrow night. He is a trained pony, appearing with his master, Texas Tommy. Heading the show is "Red" Nichols, bandsman, who is supported by Myrus, a "telepathy" expert; Don Amato, juggler-comedian; Coleman Clark, former national and western table tennis champion; and the Muriel dancers. Held over from the preceding show is the vocal trio composed of Arlene Owens, Jack Wilcher and Russell Crowell.

- A new personality has been added to the Blackhawk's floor show which contains Joe Sanders, his Nighthawks, Barbara Parks, and Ruth and Billy Ambrose, dancers. Paul Olsen, former dancing partner of the cinema actress, Esther Ralston, offers comedy dances in which he uses dummies as partners.

- A "farewell party" for Kay Kyser and his orchestra, at the Trianon for the past year, is today's event at that ballroom. Kyser's engagement ends next Wednesday. Corey Lynn's band will assist Kyser today. . . . At the north side Aragon ballroom Freddy Martin's music continues, with Al Morey and his orchestra assisting.

On next Thursday night Freddy Martin will move his band to the Trianon for an 8 day stay. During his absence the orchestras of both Kay Kyser and Ted Weems will be featured at the Aragon, Kyser on next Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, and Weems for the remainder of the time. When Martin returns to the Aragon on March 8, Weems will move to the Trianon for a spring engagement.

- Don Pedro, violinist now playing over W-G-N, has signed a contract to appear in the new Palm room of the Graemere hotel on the west side. He is assisted by Adele Sonders, singer.

- The King's Jesters and Marjorie Whitney continue in the Blue Fountain room of the La Salle hotel. Also in the show is Carl Rosini, sleight of hand performer from the Hotel New Yorker.

- The "Springtime Fantasy" revue at Chez Paree continues with Cross and Dunn adding new songs from their repertory. Wini Shaw is an important personality on the bill. Minor and Root appear in dances, and Thorne and White lead the ballet in gay production numbers.

- The "Coronation Revue" at the Royale Frolics, so called because of an ensemble number with the ballet of 25 girls, is now in its fifth week. The star of revue is Dolly Kay, blues singer, who has been in every show since the café opened last fall. The supporting cast includes Sid Tomack and the Reis Brothers, comedians; Dawn and Darrow, ballroom dancers; Burnet and Walt, a dance team; Frances Wills, acrobatic dancer; Judy Duncan, soubrette; Jack Hilliard, tenor, and the ballet. Two bands—Henri Lishon, and Charles Engles, company of 55.

- Club Alabam—Lillian Bernard and Flo Henrie, original songs; a midget dance team, Buddy and Betty; Effie Burton, soprano; Art Williams; Tonja, dancer. Four dance bands.

- Limehouse—Russian floor show, and Barney Richards band.

- Monte Cristo—Juan Peado's concert and dance band.

- Parody club—Molly Manors, Mildred Travis, Dolly Miller, Al Sanders.

Film Stars on Stage Hasten Drama Revival

it, in the first place, to see Miss Hepburn, the film star, in person, but they remained to enjoy the story that Charlotte Brontë told.

Once more, after many years of change, for better and for worse, women enjoyed a good cry over the troubles of Jane Eyre, the "poor, plain, unconnected" governess and orphan of Lowood. In Minneapolis a man sought the house manager, after the second act, and complained of annoyance from feminine sniffling.

On the last day of the engagement in Boston the prospective ticket buyers who herded into the lobby formed so dense a crowd that a woman fainted. Another woman, instead of expressing sympathy and offering restoratives to the fallen, eagerly made a bid for the ticket that was clutched in the victim's hand.

Many people went to see "Jane Eyre" who were novices at playgoing. They represented the motion picture generation which had never attended a dramatic production. The door keepers in every theater in which Miss Hepburn appeared observed that a high percentage of the customers did not know what to do with their ticket stubs marking their seat reservations. One woman came out into the lobby in an intermission to ask when the audience would go away, because she wanted to find a better seat during the next exhibition.

In St. Paul "Jane Eyre" was the first play to be performed in a handsome, new municipal auditorium. In Kansas City also a municipal auditorium, admirably equipped for theatrical purposes, was used; and while Miss Hepburn and her company were acting another part of the building echoed with the cheers of prize fight patrons over the prowess of Joe Louis. Tickets for both the drama and the boxing match were sold through the same box office. In Des Moines, Ia., a single performance in the Shrine auditorium grossed $6,000.

These municipal auditoriums, many of them new structures, are supplying new links for the chains of theaters which must be established before "the road" can resume its former status. The decay of the stage on tour during the last ten years has been partly due to the fact that the only available theaters in many cities have become picture houses whose managers refuse to give shelter to the legitimate drama.

The thousands of interviewers, professional and amateur, did not have much luck with Miss Hepburn, who likes to lead her own life and to avoid cross-examinations about her favorite flower and her hopes of matrimony. She weakened now and then, however, and among the reporters to whom she gave audience was a young fellow on the Baltimore Sun who sent word in advance that he used to play with her in childhood. At the meeting she discovered that he was her cousin.

Iowa College Out with New 'Chapbooks'

English Club of Cornell Honors Jay Sigmund, Winifred Van Etten.

By the Rev. John Evans.

THE English Club of Cornell College, Mount Vernon, Ia., has just published the seventh and eighth chapbooks in the series edited by Clyde Tull, head of the English department. They are "Heron at Sunset," a collection of verse by Jay G. Sigmund, and "Four Stories," by Winifred Van Etten.

Mr. Sigmund, familiar to TRIBUNE readers of the Line o' Type or Two column, with four published books of verse and two of prose, is an established author. The majority of this collection is reprinted from current periodicals. Mrs. Van Etten wrote "I Am the Fox," which gained the Atlantic Monthly $10,000 prize novel competition last year.

Mr. Sigmund was born at Waubeek, Linn county, Ia., and has spent his whole life within the confines of the county, thirty years of it in the business world. As vice president of a large insurance company in Cedar Rapids, his writings are true parerga which are winning increasing regard by thoughtful critics for their perspicuity and characterization.

His spontaneity raises his verse to the level of poetry. The vacuity of retirement, the surge of spring, the terror of the trapped, the depression of autumn, the futility of senility, the loneliness of winter, all these simple but poignant emotions are aroused in the reader, not by the artifice of cadence, but by the art of creation.

"Last Blue Heron," whence, we assume, the title of the collection is derived, is appended in full; not for its being primus inter pares, but because it shows how peculiarly happy Mr. Sigmund is in his treatment of the sonnet sequence:

A sentinel, he stands upon the bar,
Watching the silver minnows darting past.
At night he watches for the evening star,
Knowing the golden days can scarcely last
Another fortnight; what, O stilted one,
Can you expect if you shall tarry on?
The autumn now is finished, it is done—
The span of mellow days is almost gone.
Take to the south, my bird; get on your way.
Why take the chances of a blizzard's wrath?
The sky divides in two great seas of gray—
Between these huge clouds is an easy path
For you to chart yourself on steady quills;
Winter will soon be rampant on these hills.

"Mr. Sigmund's work is characterized by fine sincerity, a thoroughgoing sympathy for the small town and country folks he portrays so vividly in his stories and verse, and a quiet mastery of technique that attracts little attention to itself but gives pleasure to the discriminating. His observation of nature is accurate and wise."

Thus Clyde Tull, in his editorial foreword to the collection. No summary of Mr. Sigmund's literary output could be more concisely critical.

"Four Stories," by Mrs. Van Etten, was written when, as Winifred Mayne, she was an undergraduate at Cornell college. Even then she showed a facile pen and potential maturity of expression subsequently fulfilled. Two of the stories deal with individuals such as may be found in any college, coeducational or otherwise, and two with personalities to be met in ordinary life. Space precludes the selection of more than the first for extended criticism.

In "Just Average" Diane Nordstrom is grade C throughout her collegiate career, withal repressed with a desire for ineffable expression which she cannot materialize—she is just an average girl. She becomes Mrs. Barstow—just an average husband—and concentrates her introspective yernings on the new life within her. Then, after all, "a fine healthy boy," says the doctor, "entirely up to the average in every respect."

Of course, a clever student of psychology could have evolved a story of this kind from Carl Jung; but the artistry lies here, and this goes for all the stories, in the easy style, good dialog, plausible setting, and a due regard for all the canons of the feuilleton, especially those of sustained interest and delayed climax.

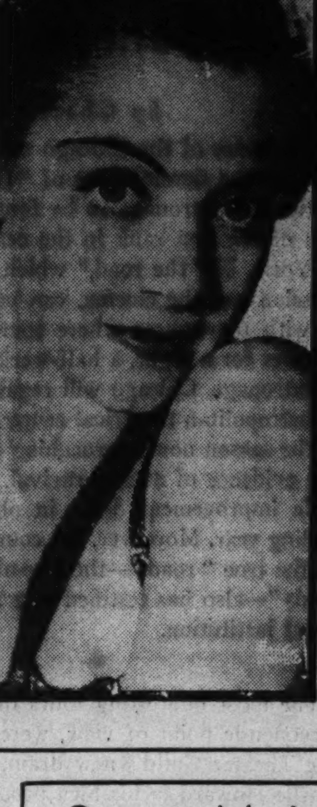
ASSERTING that the social body has suffered from an overdose of specialization, with churches and civic organizations working for better conditions, but so unrelatedly that they frequently came into conflict, Dean Rexford Newcomb of the University of Illinois college of fine and applied arts considers that American communities are entering an era of planned development. With commissions, boards, governmental agencies, and local groups all coördinated, Mr. Newcomb considers that getting rid of duplication of effort means a saving of the taxpayer's money.

"The way out of all this overlapping in civic endeavor," Mr. Newcomb explained, "is through comprehensive planning, which does not mean hiring an expert and leaving everything to him, but is a matter for coöperative action of the various units and citizens, with continuously determined action as the community's problems change."



DANCING LADY AT THE BLACKHAWK

Ruth Ambrose, who has her brother Billy as teammate, is completing the fifth month of her engagement in the Blackhawk restaurant. These dancers are featured on the bill.

Music Critic Describes the Functions of a Conductor

'Personality' Element But One Factor

The Musical Services He Renders Are Complex, Varied, and Important.

By Edward Barry.

WHAT good is a conductor except as a time-beater? Could not the orchestras of the land, many of which teeter constantly on the verge of bankruptcy, save a great deal of money by dispensing with him altogether? They might subsidize some needy inventor and commission him to build an oversize metronome which, instead of ticking, would wave a baton before the astonished musicians and keep them together just as well as the best human leader.

This bright idea, alas, runs up against two hard facts. First, the conductor's personality is a powerful factor in audience building and, unless the needy inventor happens to be a man of considerable genius and able to equip his metronome with a rapt look and an air of majesty, the money saved by the substitution of a robot for a live leader would be lost and more than lost at the box office. The second and most important of these hard facts is this—a conductor does a great deal more than merely beat time.

Duties He Actually Performs Outlined.

Here are the things he actually does. For clearness the various duties are treated as if they were discharged one at a time. In reality, of course, two or more of them often come together.

He decides how a composition should sound—how the composer intended it to sound. In order to make such a decision he must study the score faithfully, and rely on his own innate artistic sense and on his vast background [knowledge of musical history, tradition, etc.] to guide him aright.

The result of such study is an ideal interpretation which the conductor hears in his mind's ear. The next task is to translate the ideal interpretation into actual sound. Hours of rehersal time are devoted to this purpose.

He gives his men the general tempo [speed] of the composition and indicates his ideas as to how gradual changes in pace may be made smoothly. This is a tricky matter. Oftentimes many repetitions are necessary before such smoothness is attained.

Similarly, he tells his men what degree of loudness or softness he believes correct for each passage. As in the matter of tempo, the greatest difficulties are encountered in places where the degree of loudness or softness is changing.

Ideas on Tempo and Dynamics Come First.

When the conductor has succeeded in communicating to his men his ideas on tempo and dynamics the process of polishing the performance begins in earnest. He recognizes the fact that keeping the musicians together is, after all, one of his chief functions and he works tirelessly toward the goal of absolute precision. His hypercritical ear detects the slightest raggedness of attack. He can tell when one or more instruments are shortening or lengthening, even in the smallest degree, any note of a phrase. This phrase is rehersed over and over until it can be played cleanly.

The conductor listens carefully to be sure that the relative loudness or softness of the various instrumental groups is correct. He knows where the most significant music lies and just how the supporting parts should be treated. In a development section, for instance, it would not do to have a suggestion of the theme, even in the gentlest woodwinds, fail to sound clearly through the whole mass of tone. Labor of this sort accounts for countless hours of rehersal time.

The ideal tonal beauty which the conductor hears in his mind's ear can only be translated into reality by means of the trial and error process. He shifts the position of musicians even within the same group, strives to get the men emotionally excited by the beauty toward which he is aiming, sometimes grabs a violin to demonstrate or suggest what he has in mind.

Tempo, dynamics, precision, balance, tone—these are the things on which a conductor works hardest. Closely related to them is the problem of accents [sharp but not too sharp]. Also closely related are such little effects as the deliberate delaying of a tone, its prolongation, subtle changes of tone color in the middle of a phrase—a dozen other devices calculated to add to the eloquence of the music and increase its expressive power.

In the public presentation the average conductor simply reminds the men of the effects which he explained and rehersed in the practice session. At one place a palm held downward cautions the second violins against the rough entrance they made in their first three trials, at another the conductor's beat becomes exaggeratedly emphatic in the hope that the trumpets will duplicate exactly the rhythmic strength which they finally achieved in practice.

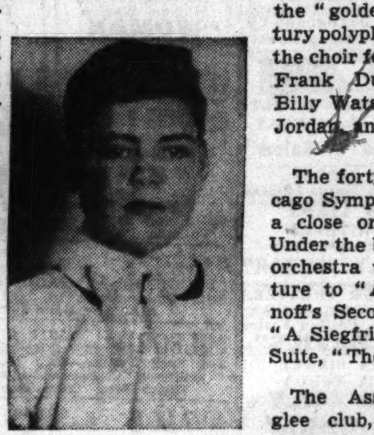
Even aside from the pleasant rustle of money at the box office, do not all of these purely musical services justify us in sending the needy inventor packing and retaining on the conductor's stand a real live man?

MARIAN VAN TUYL

Chicago dancer and choreographer who will appear with her group of three at the Goodman theater this afternoon. Included on the program are several dances whose music was especially written for Miss Van Tuyl by Jean Williams, resident pianist and composer.

Notes of Music and Musicians

Father O'Malley's Paulist choristers of Chicago are to give their annual Orchestra hall concert on Wednesday evening. Here is one of the rarest musical groups in America—a choir which maintains faithfully the traditions and proprieties of unaccompanied liturgic singing. Of all the choirs in Chicago the Paulist choristers consistently give the most valid and understanding performances of the choral music of the masters of the "golden age" of sixteenth century polyphony. Soloists drawn from the choir for more modern items are Frank Dunford, Walter Curran, Billy Watson, John Lynch, William Jordan, and George Lane.



Billy Watson.

The forty-sixth season of the Chicago Symphony orchestra draws to a close on Thursday and Friday. Under the baton of Hans Lange, the orchestra will play Weber's Overture to "Abu Hassan," Rachmaninoff's Second symphony, Wagner's "A Siegfried Idyl," and Respighi's Suite, "The Pines of Rome."

The Association of Commerce glee club, composed of business men who enjoy music enough to reherse seriously, is to celebrate the silver jubilee of its founding by a concert in Orchestra hall tomorrow evening. Viola Gibbons, Chicago contralto, will be soloist. The conductor is Arthur Dunham.

The San Carlo Opera company ends its spring visit tonight with a performance of Verdi's "Il Trovatore" at the Auditorium theater. The principal rôles are to enlist Leonora Corona, who made her debut on Friday in "La Gioconda"; Dreda Aves, Aroldo Lindi, Mostyn Thomas, and Harold Kravitt.

The second week of lectures in the spring series provided by De Paul university is to bring to Chicago Maria Kurenko, a coloratura soprano who sang with the Civic Opera a few seasons ago. The opening lecture is tomorrow night in Fullerton hall. The series is to run nightly through Saturday evening. Mme. Kurenko will listen and offer criticism to vocal students who wish to sing for her, and will occasionally demonstrate principles of interpretation by singing herself. Olga Samaroff-Stokowski, from May 24 to 29, and Josef Lhevinne, from May 31 to June 5, are the remaining lecturers.

Mme. Maria Kurenko.

Modern and Ballet Dance Recitals Today

Programs of Van Tuyl and Celli Both to Begin at 3:30 This Afternoon.

By Cecil M. Smith.

TODAY at the witching hour of 3:30 two recitals by Chicago dancers will compete for public support, one by Marian Van Tuyl and her group and one by Vincenzo Celli and his ballet. Coming at the end of the most vigorous dance season Chicago has ever witnessed, this conflict of dates may be taken as a symbol of the opposing tests of loyalty to which dance enthusiasts have been submitting all winter.

The fledgling movement called "modern dance" has this year for the first time presented a serious challenge to the venerable and widely accepted art of the ballet. During the Christmas holidays the Ballet Russe again offered its familiar wares, and as usual swept us off our feet. In midwinter, however, the Modern Dance series sponsored by Northwestern university brought such eminent people as Hanya Holm, Doris Humphrey, Charles Weidman, and Martha Graham before our astonished consciousness. By sheer force of novelty, if nothing more, we were swept off our feet for a second time.

Both Forms of Dance Are Satisfactory.

In this condition of pedal unbalance we were invited to return to see the Ballet Russe a short time ago. How would it seem, we wondered, after extended acquaintance with the unorthodox, fresh movements of the modern dancers? The answer turned out to be simple: It is not necessary to choose between these two forms of dance art. Both are highly malleable forms of expression, each pursuing its own special investigation into the communicative possibilities of the human body as it moves in space.

This catholic and inclusive judgment does not help at all in this afternoon's dilemma. Nor does the standing of the artists, since each ranks high in his chosen field. Two thoroughly dissimilar events are taking place, which might never have been mentioned in the same breath in this column if I had been able to decide which it was fairer to mention first.

Teaches Modern Dance at University of Chicago.

The career of Marian Van Tuyl has been a Chicago career, despite several periods of study in New York and Bennington, Vt. She is a graduate of the University of Chicago and for several years has taught the modern dance at her alma mater. While today's recital at the Goodman is her first venture in a down town theater, it is by no means her first public demonstration of her art either as a dancer or as a teacher.

At this point I must be forgiven if purely personal enthusiasm engulfs me. It was my privilege to work in close coöperation with Miss Van Tuyl in the production of three operas in the baroque and classic periods, Purcell's "Dido and Æneas," Handel's "Xerxes," and Gluck's "Iphigenia in Tauris." My first apprehension of the power of the modern dance came in the closing chorus of "Dido and Æneas," when my knees turned to water as I watched from the conductor's stand the exquisite threnody of movement Miss Van Tuyl and her girls wove about Dido's bier. In this same mood of autobiography I can confidently say that I have never known an artist more fully genuine, or less in sympathy with sensational and transitory forms of art.

Celli an Idealist with a Purpose.

The history of Vincenzo Celli's rise to eminence is likewise a record of single-minded idealism. Had he been made of ordinary stuff, Celli might still be selling newspapers on a downtown corner. But his own ambition, fanned into flame by the wise encouragement of the late Jane Addams, carried him first to New York and shortly thereafter to Italy, where he studied dancing with untiring zeal and fierce self-discipline.

In due season he became primo ballerino, or chief male dancer, at La Scala opera house in Milan. Here he danced in operas conducted by many of the great conductors of the earth. He frequently appeared under Arturo Toscanini, and he played an important part in premières of works by Respighi and Richard Strauss. In between operatic seasons he was for a time a member of Anna Pavlowa's company. The climax of his European career occurred when he was appointed chief choreographer at La Scala, upon the death of Enrico Cecchetti, one of the most prominent figures in the modern history of ballet.

Now Celli has returned to America and has set to work to develop an important ballet troupe with Chicago as its base. This afternoon's Orchestra hall concert is the opening gun in his new campaign. His program consists entirely of examples of the Italian ballet tradition. Even though Celli enjoys some aspects of the modern dance, he himself does not wish to have any trafic with it. The program will be danced to music by Pizzetti, Santoliquido, Drigo, and other Italian composers, and will conclude with Rossini's "Tarantella Napolitana," a virtuoso dance which Celli frequently performed on Pavlowa's tours.

Nelson Eddy in Recital Here Tomorrow Night.

Nelson Eddy, motion picture and concert baritone, is to make his only recital appearance of the season at the Civic Opera house tomorrow evening. This is a postponement of the recital originally scheduled for Feb. 22 and canceled because of Mr. Eddy's laryngitis. Holders of tickets for the earlier date will be admitted upon presentation of their original Feb. 22 tickets.

Izler Solomon has devised a program chock full of novelties for the Illinois Symphony orchestra's audience this afternoon at the Great Northern theater. Sibelius' remarkable symphonic poem, "Pohjola's Daughter," is to receive its first Chicago performance, along with the "Mediterranean" suite of Anis Fuleihan, a native of Cyprus whose first symphony was conducted by John Barbirolli in New York last December, and the Concertino for piano and orchestra by Leo Weiner of Hungary. Emily Boettcher, gifted Evanston pianist, is to be soloist in the last named work. In addition to these new works, the program includes the Symphonic Prelude of Rossetter Cole, well known Chicago musical theorist, and excerpts from Tschaikowsky's opera "Eugen Onegin."

Drama Festival

THE third annual Mohawk Drama festival will begin its 1937 summer season on July 6 at Union college, Schenectady, N. Y. Thirty-six performances will be given. There were twenty in 1935 and thirty last year.

Mr. and Mrs. Coburn, directors of the festival, will appear in three or four of the plays and will alternate with guest stars. The plays will be as follows: "Twelfth Night," by Shakespeare; "The Beaux's Stratagem," by Farquhar; "The Plutocrat," by Arthur Goodrich [based on the novel by Booth Tarkington]; "The Devil's Disciple," by Shaw; "The Imaginary Invalid" and "The Bourgeois Gentleman," by Molière. The entire repertory will be in the field of comedy.

Broadway Play Has Real Life Counterpart

Prof. Mamlock Inspiration for Protest Drama That Bears His Name.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—A drama walked off the stage into real life this week. It was Frederick Wolf's anti-Nazi propaganda protest called "Professor Mamlock." The Federal theater, WPA project, produced it and the Jewish unit associated with the project acted it.

This was Tuesday night. The Friday following a real Prof. Mamlock who served as the play's inspiration came down the bay aboard the steamer Manhattan and told reporters that it was because of the production in Switzerland of the play bearing his name that he and his family had been driven from Germany.

He had come to New York, he said, to live with his son and daughter. The Nazis, who had overlooked his Jewish blood because of his war record [he had won the Iron Cross for valor], up to the time the Wolf play drew attention to him, had then taken all his savings [a considerable fortune], bought him and his wife one way tickets to America, given them $2 as spending money for the trip, and sent them on their way. Playwright Wolf, however, insists his Prof. Mamlock is a composite character suggested by the experiences of several German Jewish scientists.

Scientist in Play and Dentist in Real Life.

Prof. Mamlock in the play is a distinguished scientist and surgeon. In real life he is a dentist. In the play he clings loyally to the belief that reason will prevail and the attacks of the Hitler fanatics will be overcome by the election of his friend, President Hindenburg. He is disillusioned soon after the reichstag is burned and the drive is started for the reorganization of the civil service.

His son, turned communist, is hounded from the country. His daughter is insulted and placarded in school. He himself is set upon by a mob and publicly disgraced. The surgical clinic he created is taken from him and he and his associates are tricked into an admission that he has spoken treasonably of the Hitler régime. Seeing that there is no hope of his doing good for any one and a good chance of his doing harm to many of his friends and associates, Prof. Mamlock kills himself in his own clinic.

It is the best of the anti-Nazi dramas so far shown in this neighborhood. The story is familiar, but the treatment is simple and sane, and the acting and staging excellent. Morris Strassberg plays the name part.

Meantime the real Dr. Mamlock hopes to establish a dental practice in America. For twenty-five years he was the editor of a continental magazine devoted to dentistry. His children are living on Staten Island.

"Babes in Arms" Starts Broadway Spring Musicals.

The spring musicals start nicely with a youthful romp called "Babes in Arms." No one of the principals is more than 25, probably, and most of them are under 20. So much youth on the stage might reasonably be viewed with suspicion and considerable alarm. But these young people, gathered in from what is left of vaudeville, the radio programs, and a few night clubs, are a mannerly and talented lot, avoiding the smart-alecky attitude and giving what they have to give with the air of professionals of standing.

They are, in a book written by the Messrs. Lorenz Hart and Richard Rodgers, presumed to be the children of touring vaudeville performers. Their mammas and papas, having to fare forth in search of the bacon, are obliged to park them more or less uncertainly in the town of Seaport, N. Y., suggesting naturally, the town of Freeport, which is, in fact, a suburban vaudeville colony.

The sherif of the county feels that he will have to gather in the youngsters and send them to the work farm. They beg a chance to get up a show in the hope of raising money for their own support. The show is artistically all they had hoped it would be, but there is little money raised and they have the work farm experience after all.

Mitzi Green Chief of the Youngsters.

The chief of the youngsters is Mitzi Green, a sort of wonder child of the screen some years back. Mitzi is now an impish little blonde with a fair singing voice, some talent as an imitatrix, and a fund of lively spirits. She is flanked on her right by Ray Heatherton, a lad from New Jersey whom Paul Whiteman discovered some months back and introduced to radio with the Whiteman orchestra. He has had a few minor flings at Broadway musical comedy.

On her left she has a plump blonde darling named Wynn Murray, who comes from Scranton, Pa., and who, at 16, already has done her bit in church choirs and radio studios. She hopes to sing in opera some day and certainly has the chest for it. Duke McHale, who still is in his late 'teens, is one of the veterans among the entertainers. Duke is a dancer of skill. Grace and Ray McDonald are a brother and sister dancing team who smile with satisfaction if any one suggests that they are a little like the Astaires. And there are two brown Nicholas brothers who dance with the wild enthusiasm and perfect rhythm common to their race.

STAR OF SHOW AT CHEZ PAREE

Crusading Quality of Film on Doctors Makes It Worth Seeing

GOOD Morning!

Lives there a fan on movies fed who never to himself has said—"I love to see a cinema whose plot tells of the stage. A film about newspaper folk, my interest doth engage. And tales that sing of hospitals, nurses, me-dics, and such, op'rating rooms, germs, pills, and ills—intrigue me very much."

True, isn't it, that most motion picture addicts go in a big way for any good film dealing with the three aforementioned subjects?

You are accustomed to having stressed in hospital narratives the fact that nurses and doctors are undeviatingly self-sacrificing and unmercenary. "A Doctor's Diary" prances off the beaten track and directs a sock at fashionable practitioners whose eye is on the main chance and who are not always so set on doing good as they are on being done good unto.

I have been told that the film has already aroused considerable antagonistic comment from the medical profession.

Well, the producers showed courage, and any controversy started by the photoplay should correspond to radium treatment on a diseased area, clearing it up and improving general conditions.

Against a background of varied experiences, romance, heartache, and one thing and another undergone by doctors and nurses in a city hospital a central plot develops.

Its hero, a charity case, is a gifted boy violinist brought to the Stanwood hospital with an infected arm. Resident Physician Norris recommends an immediate operation and the great surgeon, Dr. Ludlow, agrees to perform it. He is just about to scrub up for it when a wealthy patient in another city calls for him to catch a plane and come there instanter.

Managing Doctor Stanwood advises Ludlow to go, as this patient is a patron of the hospital.

The operation is postponed—with sad results. The boy's mother brings suit. Norris declares he will testify for her, charging criminal negligence on the part of Ludlow. He is asked to resign—and there's the devil to pay all around.

Norris has been engaged to Miss Stanwood, but his action throws him into the arms of Ruth Hanlon, a crusading nurse who has been dismissed from Stanwood for telling some doctors where to get off.

And so to an ending that you may find logical. I didn't.

The picture is skilfully acted. It should "make" John Trent, the one-time air pilot who plays Norris. It seems to me that he has just about everything that Robert Taylor possesses.

The late Helen Burgess did a splendid job as Nurse Hanlon. George Bancroft gives a sincere and convincing performance as the family doctor who brings little Michael to the hospital. Ra Hould, who plays Michael is a lamb. Talks just like Freddie Bartholomew and has the same sort of appeal.

The director handled nicely a narrative that, occasionally, stumbles and sticks a finger in its own eye.

All in all, though, "A Doctor's Diary" is worth your contemplation.

See you tomorrow.

THE VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Fan Requests Cast of 'The Black Legion.'

Dear Mae Tinée: Could you give me the cast of "The Black Legion?" I mean, of course, the cast and the rôles they played.

Thank you very much.

AN ADMIRER.

P. S. I read your column every day.

Editor's Note: Thank you! And here is your cast.

Frank Taylor	Humphrey Bogart
Ed Jackson	Dick Foran
Ruth Taylor	Erin O'Brien Moore
Betty Grogan	Ann Sheridan
Brown	Robert Barrat
Pearl Danvers	Helen Flint
Cliff Moore	Joseph Sawyer
Metcalf	Eddie Acuff
Mike Grogan	Clifford Soubier
Billings	Paul Harvey

And When It Comes to Casting, What About These?

Dear Miss Tinée:

The film casting of "Gone with the Wind" by the book's readers creates in me another desire to see certain players in film rôles. I'd like to see Charles Laughton or Charles Butterworth as Don Quixote, Madge Evans as Portia, Robert Taylor as a knight of the round table, Joan Crawford as Joan of Arc, and Greta Garbo as Queen Elizabeth.

Yours truly, C. PETERSON.

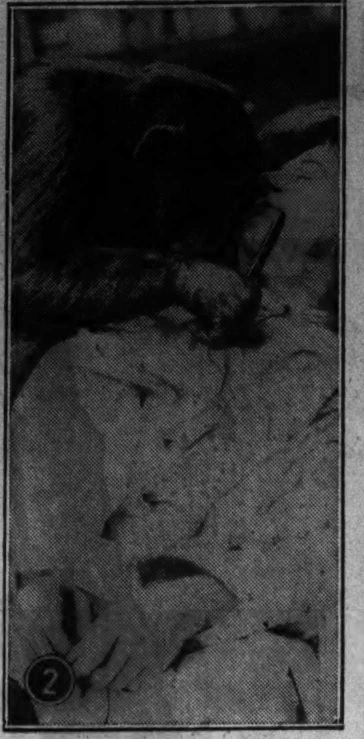
London Zoo Entertains Its Visitors with Circus Act—Swiss Celebrate End of Winter and Coming of Spring

Chimpanzee Peter of a London zoo watched Keeper Harry Brown shave himself several days to get the hang of the act before visitors were allowed to see him wield a razor on his friend. First Peter lathered Brown's face.



Peter's deftness surprised the keeper, who permitted the chimpanzee to go to work only after he had made sure that it was not a real razor.

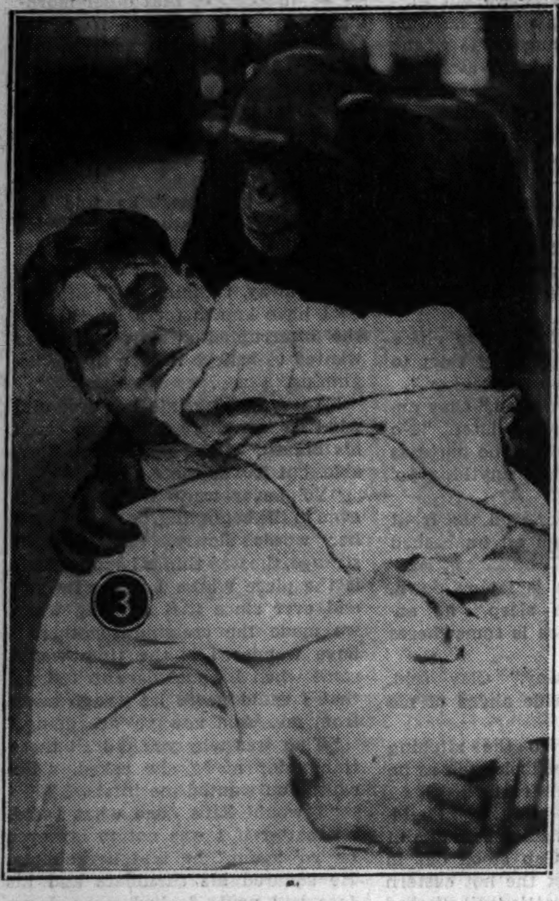
SPRINGTIME IN THE ALPS—Spring weather spreads a carpet of blooms on the lower slopes of snow capped mountains near Davos, Switzerland, and the Swiss realize that winter had ended.

THE BEGINNING OF THE END IN THE PARADE—Throughout the country, celebrations marking the end of winter are held. At Zurich the annual spring festival comes in April and is called "Sechslauten." This effigy of winter is an object of ridicule as the parade passes through the streets.



The jungle barber then waddled over and, with a towel, wiped the remaining lather from Keeper Brown's face, which was drawn as though Peter was not entirely trustworthy.

Peter doesn't know it, but he's applied just a mite too much talcum powder, much in the manner of many others. And it made a big hit with the children, too.

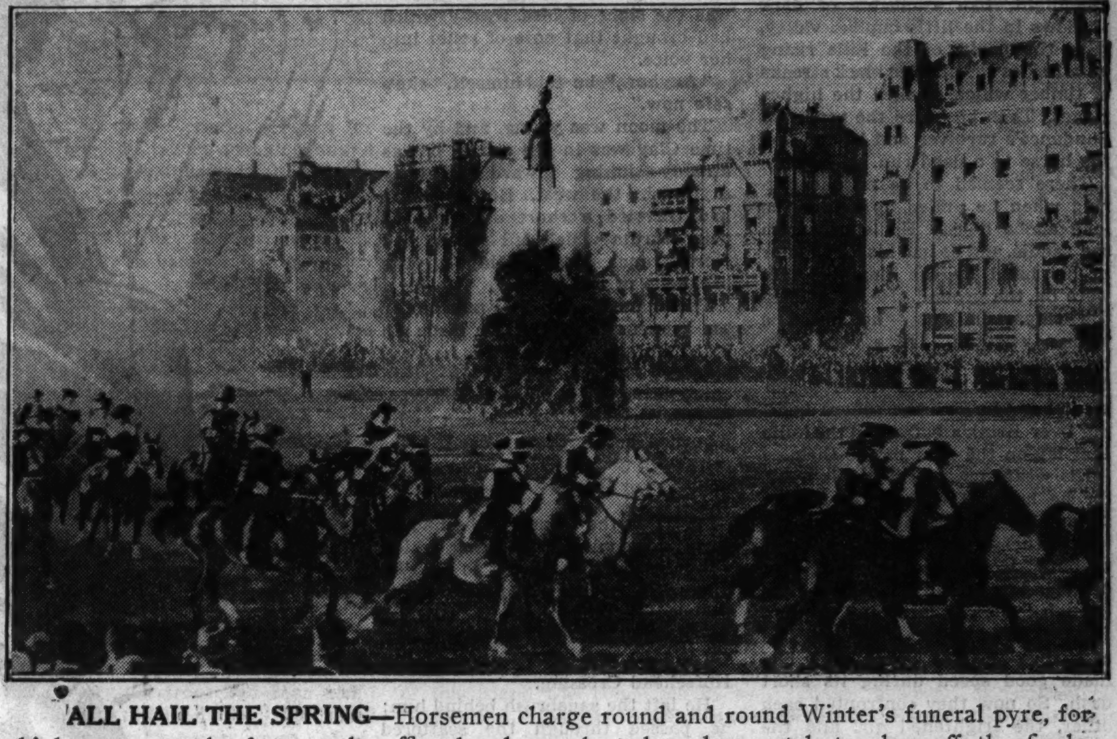
YOUNG AND OLD JOIN IN PARADE—U. S. trade unions send marching delegations out on Labor day, but Swiss guilds choose the celebration welcoming spring. Here are the tailors' representatives in Zurich parade.



ALL HAIL THE SPRING—Horsemen charge round and round Winter's funeral pyre, for high over a stack of straw the effigy has been planted, and a match touches off the finale. With the conclusion of the formal celebration, informal social gatherings are held.

BAB-O
the Amazing Grease-Dissolving Cleaner

This Offer Made Solely to Induce You to Try BAB-O, Science's Grease-Dissolving Cleaner. We Want You to See for Yourself How BAB-O Lessens the Time and Labor Involved in Cleaning

This exquisite "Van Style" Vanity is 2¼ inches long by 1¾ inches wide — just the size you like to carry. It's so smart you'll be proud to show it.

¼ Actual Size af Vanity

It's a double-vanity, one side for loose powder, and the other for rouge, with a fine, hinged mirror between. And don't forget, there's rouge already in your vanity.

THIS smart Double Vanity, equipped with a neutral shade of rouge, is yours at a fraction of its normal cost just to introduce to you BAB-O for your Spring Housecleaning this year.

For BAB-O is a new-day cleaner that does most of your hardest work for you. The idea is this. Old-fashioned cleansers were made to remove surface dust.

But today your main problem is grease. Dirt and stains cling to grease. The old-fashioned cleansers will remove grease, if you scour and scrub it away. But that takes time and back-breaking work.

BAB-O dissolves grease in a few seconds. With the grease gone, the dirt and stains wipe off easily. That is why millions of women are changing to BAB-O once they try it.

How To Get Your Vanity

So to induce you to test BAB-O in your own home, we are making this generous offer of a lovely and costly Double Vanity for only 25¢ when you buy BAB-O.

To get your Vanity, just do this. Buy one can of BAB-O today. Then send the label with your name and address, together with 25¢, to B. T. Babbitt, Inc., Dept. NX, 386 Fourth Avenue, New York City. Your Vanity will be sent you promptly, postage paid.

Meals That Fall Short Of Vitamins Served In Many Homes

You Don't Realize Whether Your Vitamin Supply is Short Until Poor Health Shows It. But, by Adding ONE FOOD to Your Diet EVERY DAY, You Can Make Sure of a Regular EXTRA Supply of These 4 Vitamins

THESE 4 vitamins, A, B, D and G, are needed daily for the best health of vital parts of your body.

Yet—many people are victims of poor health because their meals do not furnish enough of these essential food elements.

The addition of just one food to your ordinary diet assures you a SPECIAL extra supply of these 4 vitamins daily.

That one food is FLEISCHMANN'S fresh YEAST. No other one natural food provides such a rich supply of all 4 of these vitamins combined.

Give yourself the benefit of these extra vitamins in addition to what your ordinary meals supply. Eat Fleischmann's fresh Yeast regularly —3 cakes a day, a cake about ½ hour before each meal. Eat it plain, or dissolved in a little water. Begin today! It's a good plan to order two or three days' supply at a time from your grocer. Fleischmann's fresh Yeast will keep perfectly in your icebox.

G
TOO LITTLE VITAMIN G
Means Poor Growth
PLENTY OF VITAMIN G

POOR DEVELOPMENT, a thin, underweight body are often signs a child does not get enough Vitamin G —the GROWTH VITAMIN. All children need a generous supply of this vitamin to aid in developing strong, well-formed bodies. Fleischmann's Yeast is rich in Vitamin G. Children from 5 to 12 years can be given 1 to 2 cakes daily.

D
DEPRIVED OF VITAMIN D

CROOKED BONES that result in bowlegs and knock-knees can come from too little Vitamin D —the BONE VITAMIN. An ample supply of this vitamin is especially important for mothers during pregnancy and while nursing. It helps to lay the foundation for strong, straight bones, and well-formed teeth in the child.

B
SHORTAGE OF VITAMIN B

A SAGGING stomach (see picture at left), poor digestion and intestinal disorders can come from a shortage of Vitamin B—the NERVE VITAMIN.

A STRONG stomach (see above), healthy bowels and intestines and steady nerves need an ample daily supply of Vitamin B. Fleischmann's Yeast added to your regular diet helps to increase your supply of Vitamin B. It is one of the richest natural foods in this essential NERVE VITAMIN.

A NOT ENOUGH VITAMIN A

INCREASED SUSCEPTIBILITY TO COLDS, a weakened condition of nose and throat membranes and lowered general resistance, can come from a shortage of Vitamin A. Let Fleischmann's Yeast help to keep you better supplied with this necessary Vitamin.

LUCYLE ROBERTS—famous woman Rodeo Bronco Rider—has the glowing health, vitality and stamina that show she is well supplied with these 4 health-building vitamins.

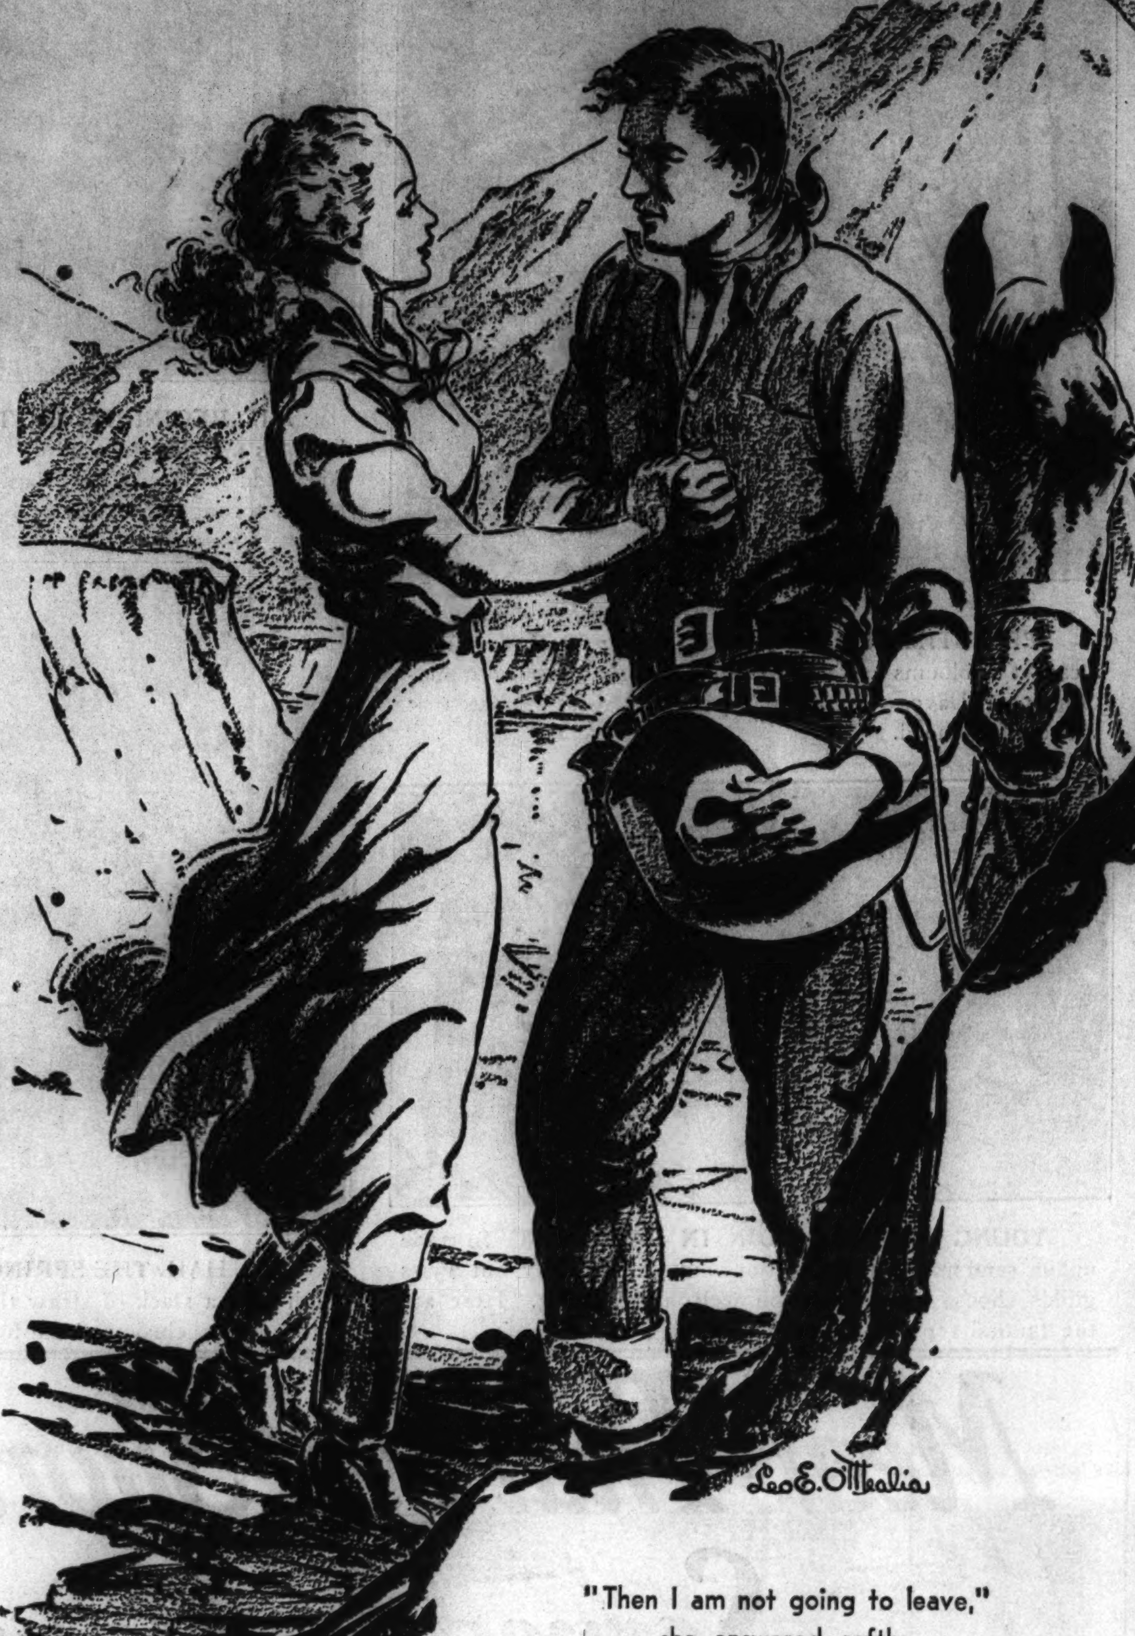
The Tree of Death

By Frederick R. Bechdolt

A Long Chase and a Fight, but at the Last Clay Returns to His Eileen



"Then I am not going to leave," she answered softly.

CONCLUSION

(Copyright: 1937: By Frederick R. Bechdolt)

IT was Clay Stratton's horse that Sundance had heard. The young Texan had been riding fast ever since he left Two Rivers. It had been his intention to take an easy pace, for he knew what lay ahead of him at the Old Horse ranch; and if he were to overtake the men whom he was seeking before they reached the little house on the knoll, there was no foretelling how the course of action might shape itself, what the result would be. But when Swazy had given him the news of Eileen's departure with Brink he had set spurs to his horse.

Ever since he had seen Pedro Vasquez fleeing from the bed of the arroyo, Brink had been in the back of his mind. The fact that the cattleman was allied with Sundance awakened him to the realization that here was an enemy who might prove far more difficult to deal with than the crowd who looted ranches and did murder at his bidding. But it had not occurred to Clay that Brink intended any harm to Eileen.

Clay was crowding his horse when he drew near the ranch buildings and saw them before him in the moonlight, like a cluster of dark shadows in the little cuplike valley, with the flanks of the hills rising on all sides toward the black streaks of timber which cloaked the higher ridges. Then he heard the report of Sundance's revolver and he roweled the horse to a dead run.

There seemed to be no one stirring when he pulled up before the long adobe house. He leaped from the saddle, and he had his six shooter in his hand by the time his feet were on the ground. He started up the steps, and now he heard a woman weeping. There was something terrible to him in the unrestrained grief of that voice. A moment later he saw the señora bending over Brink's body, and the knife that lay on the floor beside them.

His weapon was still in his hand, for he had not thought to replace it, and he was standing over the two of them—the dead man and the sobbing woman—when the door opened. Eileen had taken only time enough to light a lamp and to get a few things on after the shot had awakened her, but Clay's horse had made good speed during its short dash. So now they confronted each other, the frightened girl and the stern faced young fellow with the revolver in his hand.

And when she saw him standing thus over Brink's body she cried out. He heard the horror in her voice; he saw it in her eyes. He had come to her three times before. She had been hoping for him then. Her face had shown the joy his presence brought to her. Now she was closing her eyes to shut away the sight of him.

The sound of footsteps made him turn abruptly, and he was thankful for the presence of Pedro Vasquez. He went to meet the foreman eagerly.

"I ought to kill yo' for what you did today," he said quietly, "but I cain't do it here. Go find some one to help yo' carry him inside the house."

He stood there watching the Mexican hurry away through the moonlight, and his lips were twisted as he realized the irony of his position. The luckless creature behind him was weeping with the abandon of a child. He heard Eileen's voice mingling with her sobs as the girl strove to comfort her. It seemed a long, long time before Vasquez returned with three of the vaqueros. Clay remained behind when they carried the body into the living room, and he picked up the knife. He looked at its clean blade and shook his head.

"I wonder who that was meant for?" he muttered. He was still gazing at the weapon when the Mexicans came out.

"One of yo' take that buckboard and drive into Two Rivers," he bade them. "Leave word at the hotel and bring some one back with yo' to look after these women."

Eileen had gone into the living room with Mrs. Brink. She had passed him looking straight before her; it was not as if he were not there; it was as if the horror of laying eyes on him would be greater than she could bear.

He took his stand before the open door of the room where the dead man lay, for the memory of that knife which he had found abided with him, and he was there two hours after midnight when the buckboard rattled up and Mrs. Swazy climbed down from the seat.

He told her briefly what he had found, and then:

"I'm shovin' on," he said. "I've got time to make the Hoss ranch before the crack of day."

As he was riding away he heard Eileen cry out, and he knew that it was the sight of Mrs. Swazy which had brought that note of relief into her voice.

"Anyhow," he told himself, "she's safe now."

The moon was young, and by the time Clay was in the saddle it was already sinking toward the lofty skyline in the west. But when he had traveled a short distance the pair of ruts which led to the Old Horse ranch was twining up the backbone of a ridge.

The chances were he would never see Eileen again. He had made up his mind to that while he was standing before the living room door, hearing her voice as she comforted the hapless woman who mourned her unworthy dead.

BUT in the meantime he had to accomplish this thing which he had started out to do. To make the country a place where she could live without such dread as she had suffered since the day when he had first met her at the Horsehead Crossing.

He left the sagebrush behind him; he passed through the scattered oaks into the pines. The darkness had crawled up to overtake him; he rode on with the keen perfume of the high country enwrapping him. The wagon track dipped downward. Gradually the depths of the night began to lessen; the blue darkness faded into a gray half light through which the great trees revealed themselves, slowly at first and then more plainly. He had been traveling something like two hours when he came out into the open again and saw that he was nearing the bed of a wide valley. The sky was beginning to grow pale in the east as he approached the ranch house which the luckless Englishman had built with the same high hopes that had lured more than one tenderfoot to his death during these past few years.

The house was made of limestone, like the one where John Lee had met his end. But this was smaller than Lee's house. It stood on the summit of a bare knoll with two round pole corrals behind it. There was a window visible on one side, but the door was the only opening in the end which faced the road. As Mrs. Swazy had said, the ground before it was all bare; and the only semblance of cover here was the bank of a little creek which ran down the bed of the valley, and this was not more than a foot in height.

Clay saw two burros cropping the sparse grass beside the narrow stream. He bent down and drew his rifle from its sheath under the stirrup lether. Just as he was straightening, with the weapon in his hand, his horse threw up its head and whinnied. One of the burros made a raucous answer, which set the echoes to flying among the nearby hills. Immediately things began to happen.

The front door of the little rock house flew open with a bang. A man ran forth; his hands were in the air and his voice arose above the burro's braying. He was calling in Spanish, but the import of his cry was unmistakable.

"One of Brink's sheepherders." Clay had spurred his horse to a run, and by the time the thought had crossed his mind he had reached the creek. He drew rein and threw himself from the saddle. The Mexican vanished around the corner of the house.

Out here the light was comparatively good; within the doorway it was black dark by contrast. A slender tongue of orange licked the gloom and vanished; the report of the rifle followed, and the hills bandied it back and forth. Clay had noticed the glimmer of gray jean breeches in the shadow just before the shot was fired. He held his eyes on the sights and he kept the bead trained upon the spot where he had caught that movement. His finger was crooked against the trigger.

"Always shoot low in the dark."

Just as he was repeating the old saying which had come down from the days when the wild young riders of his native state used to go forth in night forays against the Comanches and Mexicans the glimmer showed again. Between the flat report of his Winchester and the echo which followed he heard the scrape of bootheels on the wooden floor and the thump of the falling body.

The echoes died away as abruptly as they had begun. There was an interval of silence during which he noticed that his horse had shied off at the noise of shooting and was trotting up the rise toward the corral. Then a door slammed in the rear of the house. A man came into sight around the corner.

It was Sundance, and he had his rifle in his hand. He halted once to fire, and the bullet splashed the water from the creek. Clay was rising to his knees, but the soft earth gave way beneath him, and he fell back. He recovered himself in time to see Sundance seize the reins and leap into the saddle.

Clay fired two shots, but even as he pulled the trigger he knew that they were going wild. Then an old stable building shut the horse and rider from his sight, and they were vanishing again in the scrub thickets which reached down the bed of a gully from the pine timber on the mountainside when he caught his next glimpse of them. He started up the hill and, as he drew near the house he took good care to keep out of range of the doorway, but Chilson was beyond harming any man now.

He lay just within the threshold, and his hands were still gripping the rifle; his scarred face was already turning gray, and his lips were moving. Clay dropped on his knees and bent his head in time to catch the last word. It was a curse. He remained there for some moments, and when the breathing had ceased he looked into the sightless eyes.

"Yo' and I have traveled a long way since the day we met at Hosshead Crossing," he said.

Then he went out to the corral and caught up the outlaws' two horses; and while he was saddling them he saw the sheepherder dodging behind the corner of the old stable a few yards away. He called the man to him and he pointed in the direction where Sundance had ridden.

"There is a road off there?" he asked in Spanish. The Mexican nodded.

"It leads across the mountains to the white sands of Tularosa."

"And beyond that?"

"Si, señor. It goes on into the west, to Arizona."

Clay handed the man a five dollar gold piece.

"You will bury that one in the house there, and you will heap rocks upon the grave?"

"Si, señor." The black eyes were sparkling. "The wolves will never get him." He was still calling his thanks when Clay swung into the saddle, leading the spare horse by the tie rope.

Sundance had struck off into the south; and the road to Arizona lay in that direction. The trail showed plainly where the horse had climbed the mountainside, but there would be many places where the tracks were faint; the knowledge of the goal which he was seeking would save much time. Also there was the spare horse.

It was a long climb to the ridge and there were no stops made for breathing; but when he reached the summit, Clay changed to the fresh mount. The sun was up and hard at work; now and again as the morning wore on he caught sight of the fresh imprint of a hoof among the brown needles beneath the pines.

It was nearly twenty-four hours since he had tasted food and the day was hot; there was no water on the long ridges; his eyes were reddened from lack of sleep; and he had ridden far enough to weary the most seasoned horseman. Yet he was not conscious of hunger or thirst or the grueling punishment which the saddle gives in a broken country. Often he searched the ground before him for tracks, but for the most part he watched the land ahead of him; and when he approached those spots where he would show himself against the sky, his vigilance redoubled.

Noon passed and he had shifted horses twice. It seemed to him that the signs which he caught now were freshening. He was descending a long hillside and the pines were drawing apart; their trunks were becoming smaller. The hot sunlight showed brighter ahead of him, as if there might be an opening there. And even as the thought was crossing his mind he came to it.

It lay at the foot of the hill, one of those mountain meadows which the riders of this section of the west called parks; a stretch of level, carpeted with flowers and bright young grass. On the further side a grove of quaking aspens, with their pale trunks and quivering leaves. And at this edge, a narrow tributary to the little stream which was winding its way through the middle.

The rivulet was clouded with mud.

The two horses had smelled the moisture for some time and they were plunging forward; Clay's mount was tugging at the reins, fighting to get its muzzle into the stream. The lead animal had crowded up beside him. He saw the fresh mud and he dropped the tie rope.

THE dainty trunks of the quaking aspens were shaking on the other side of the meadow. He had a glimpse of burnished steel catching the reflection of the sun's rays just before he heard the report of Sundance's rifle. He lurched forward and slid from the saddle.

He had fallen beside the bronze trunk of a great pine and he was lying with his head downhill. His right arm was twisted behind his back and the hand which had held the tie rope was resting within a few inches of the holstered revolver beside his thigh.

The silver stems of the little trees across the meadow were moving again. The head of Sundance appeared, enframed by green leaves that changed color dancing in the sunlight. The arms were moving, swinging the rifle to his shoulder.

Clay was thanking the Mexican renegade who had taught him that trick of feigning death years ago. He snatched the six shooter from its sheath and threw himself to one side. Sundance's bullet threw slivers from the root of the tree where he had been lying and the report of Clay's revolver followed that of the larger weapon so closely that they seemed to blend. The branches of the quaking aspens closed in before the outlaw's face. Silence followed. Clay was watching the spot where the other had vanished when the ugly crack of the Winchester set the echoes flying back and forth along the side of the mountain. The horse which he had been riding fell in the little creek with a crash; its companion threw up its head and raced away through the pines.

There was another interval of stillness. It was followed by the snapping of brush; and this, in its turn, by the rapid beat of hoofs beyond the greenery of the thicket. The sound died away in the distance. Clay got to his feet and the sickness of disappointment was heavy on him. If the shot which had killed the horse had found its intended mark in his own body, he told himself, it would have been just as well. It was a good half hour before he had captured the runaway animal. Then he started on the trail again.

The afternoon was waning when he pulled up the lathered broncho where the pines opened to a bare ridge. The road which led to the White Sands of Tularosa and on to Arizona lay before him. Five hundred yards away a little haze of dust enshrouded the outlaw and his jaded mount. Clay dropped from the saddle and pressed the stock of his rifle to his shoulder. His eyes traveled along the sights; the bead was resting fairly against Sundance's back. So he remained for a moment, and then he lowered the weapon. He stood there until the horse and rider had vanished across the western skyline.

It was early the next morning when Dan Burns awakened from the first sleep that he had gotten since they brought him into the hotel of Two Rivers, to find his employer sitting beside his bed. Their eyes met and before either man spoke Clay glanced at another bed in the little room. This one was empty.

"He died soon after we got in," Dan said. Clay was silent; he was thinking of the young horse wrangler who had given his life away for him with the same carelessness he would have shown if it had been a half a dollar that he was asked for. The foreman's voice broke in upon his musing.

"Get either of those fello's?"

"Got one of 'em." Clay shrugged his shoulders and then he told the story of Sundance's escape. "Somehow I couldn't shoot him that-away."

Dan nodded. "Cheaper to chase a man out of the country than to kill him, to my way of thinkin'."

"I got to be shovin' on," Clay announced a few minutes later. "No time for loafing now. The outfit is short-handed. If the's anything yo' need, draw on me."

Birdlegs was sitting on the front porch and gave him an unabashed greeting.

"The ol' woman is laying down, ketching up with sleep," he announced. "Miss Lee is somewheres around the place."

"I'm on my way," Clay said. "I've got a long ride ahead of me this afternoon."

He hurried on to the hitching rack and he did not look back as he rode up the wide street.

It was a bright morning in midsummer and the distant summits of Castle Mountain Gap stood out in stark relief against the hot eastern sky where the old cattle trail climbed to the Llano Estacado. The breeze which sucked up between the low hills at Horsehead Crossing was like the gush of air from an oven when the door is opened. The leaves of the solitary cottonwood beneath which the two women had made their overnight camp were whispering drearily to the muddy river. The sun glared down upon the headboards whose penciled epitaphs were growing fainter as the weeks went by.

Mrs. Swazy had stowed away the blanket rolls in the back of the buckboard and she was harnessing the team; but there was a lack of briskness in her movements; her face held none of the eagerness which belongs with the outset of a new day's journey. From the beginning of this trip she had looked back many times and when her eyes were turned upon the road ahead they held no light of anticipation.

Eileen was standing by the embers of the dying fire. And as she glanced about her, the place seemed to have the familiarity of a spot where she had lived for years. The bleak wooden headboards, the cottonwood's trunk, scarred near the base by the pressure of many tie ropes, the stream sucking at the muddy bank where the eddy swirled inward close by. The wind which whipped her dress against her limbs was like an old companion. A lonely nook in the midst of a lonely land. But her heart was heavy with the thought of leaving.

For there was something in these harsh open spaces which had taken hold of her, and it was tugging at her now. Sometimes she had wondered whether the close green vistas, which she had known ever since she could first remember, would seem the same to her when she returned to them. And every time that thought came to her it brought the realization that it is not the land alone that grips one's heart. It is the people in it.

She remembered them now. Their faces came before her. Faces of bad men setting out on evil deeds; Bitter Creek, crossing the river holding his rifle in his hand, Sundance with his lips drawn back showing his buck teeth, Brink's pale face without a line upon it. The time had been when these were the only ones that she could envision when she was thinking of the valley; but now the fear which they had once brought to her was erased by the memory of others; Wes and his freckles, the sunburned cowboys trooping up the street of Two Rivers with their six shooters slapping their thighs, Mrs. Swazy sitting in the wicker chair beside her on the hotel porch with a big black cigar clenched in her strong teeth. Her father's face lined with bewildered anxiety——

She wished the flowers would grow upon that lonely grave. But she knew they would not, now that she was gone.

And there was another face. There was no hour of the day when it was not before her. Stained dark by weather, lean as a hawk's. Perhaps there might come a time when she would forget the rest—but never him.

It was hard, the way fate played with people. If she had only known the truth in time! But it had been withheld from her.

He had gone without a word of good-by because he knew the distrust in which she held him. If she had only seen him then she could have told him that the distrust was gone; that it had never reached more deeply than her thoughts; that her heart had remained immune against it.

Two days from now she would be in the train. And a few days later she would be home. But her heart would be left behind her in this wild valley. She looked across the river then and she saw a rider coming down the western bank.

She was standing in the dugway, which the Texas drovers had shoveled to bring the herds down to the river, when his horse came splashing out of the swimming water into the shallows. And when he saw her face he drove in the spurs. So they met again in the same spot where they had first laid eyes on each other.

HE TOOK the hand which she offered him, and she was thinking of that other morning when he had leaped from his saddle to snatch the reins from her father. He had been no swifter then than he was now, when there was no danger to call him to her side.

"I wished that you would come," she said.

"I had to come," he told her quietly. "And I would have gone on until I found yo'. I had to get this straightened out. I couldn't let yo' go away, thinking——"

"I have known for a long time," she interrupted swiftly. "I never wanted to believe it even in the beginning."

He was looking into her eyes and what he saw there made him catch his breath. It did not seem believable, but it was there.

"Yo' never wanted to believe it even in the beginning." He repeated her words slowly. "It is right strange, the way things happen. This is the place where I first saw yo'; and ever since that mo'ning when we made the crossing together, I have wondered if the time would come when I would dare to tell yo' that I could never let yo' go away from me. And now yo' are going."

"That was why you did all these things for me?" she asked. "Because you wanted me to stay?"

"I would have done what I did, no matter if I was not to lay eyes on yo' again," he told her simply. He squared his shoulders and his face had never looked more determined than it did now. "But if yo' leave this country, it will be hard for me to bear. I have got to tell yo' this. I love yo'."

"Then I am not going to leave," she answered softly.

It was some time later when they went to the cottonwood tree and Mrs. Swazy had long since finished harnessing the team. She nodded at Clay as if their last parting had been yesterday. Her eyes went to Eileen and her hard face was transformed.

"Reckon we take the back track to Two Rivers," she said.

Before they departed Clay had the opportunity for a quiet word with her.

"It was blind luck," he told her. "We were making the best time we could on our way home; but we'd run out of tobacco and we stopped off at Las Vegas. That's how I happened to get yo'r letter, saying she had raised the money on her ranch from Brink's widow and was aiming to leave. I cut loose from the boys that afternoon and I shoved on."

"I took a gambler's chance," she shrugged her wide shoulders, "on yo'r getting the letter—and on yo'r showing a little sense at last."

It happened that they arrived at Two Rivers late one evening. And when they passed the Pink Elephant saloon the piano was going. There was no doubt as to the artist and Mrs. Swazy wasted no time looking about the hotel for her husband.

Birdlegs was sitting with his head thrown back and his eyes were on the ceiling; the light of ecstasy was in them for his audience was larger than usual. No members of the line who stood with their backs to the bar were more appreciative than the cowboys of Clay Stratton's outfit. For the pleasure of reunion had warned their hearts. They were slapping their foreman on the back, telling him the fun that he had missed in the mining camps of Colorado, calling him bad names by way of letting him know of the high esteem in which they held him.

All of this was bringing joy to the heart of the little man whose fingers raced along the keyboard. Once again he was tasting the real savor of life. His head went a little further back; his eyes took on a deeper light of ecstasy. He was unconscious of the heavy step behind him; it was the large hand upon his shoulder which brought him back to the realities of mere existence.

"Why, mother," he gasped. "Back already?" And then he saw that there was something lacking in the face which was gazing down into his own. The inflexibility which belongs with discipline was not there. She was smiling grimly as she lifted him from his seat.

"The jestice of the peace," she announced, "is wanted." And when she had explained the reason for her summons he turned to confront his audience with an importance which none of them had witnessed on his part before.

"Sorry, gents," he said, "but the's a couple at the hotel waiting for me to pe'fo'm the weddin' ceremony."

An Open Letter to Beatrice Lillie

BEATRICE LILLIE

Dear Beatrice: Being one of the most versatile of persons, you can do just about everything to which you direct your talents. But there is a department of affairs in which you would do well to proceed with utmost caution—which is just about the opposite of what you will be feeling like doing during the coming three years. That department is executive management; look out for temptations to finance and run a venture of some kind. With best wishes,

WYNN.

Beginning Next Week

A strange group of persons and strange and startling happenings are brought into "Sally Kent's Brothers," an absorbing story by Margaret Weymouth Jackson. The setting is a small town on the Ohio river, and mysterious Lawrence Williams, Sally Kent's brother, has a large part in the dramatic events which take place there.

Allies' Final Drive Forces Germany to Ask a Truce

Last Shot Is Fired on Nov. 11

THIRTEENTH INSTALMENT

By LIDDELL HART

(Copyright: 1936: Random House, Inc.)

● Previous instalments of Liddell Hart's dramatic history of the World war, which has just appeared in book form under the title "The War in Outline 1914-1918," have carried the story of the great conflict through that period covering America's entry into the war on the side of the Allies. This, the concluding instalment, tells of the collapse of the German allies and finally of the German forces themselves, resulting in the signing of the armistice.

"EVERYONE is to attack (Belgians, British, French, and Americans) as soon as they can, as strong as they can, for as long as they can." That was the simple message in which Foch defined his intentions. But in detail his grand offensive showed more design.

The great salient formed by the German front in France between Verdun and Ypres was to be crushed between a giant pair of pincers. The right pincer was to be formed by the American army in the Meuse-Argonne sector. It would strike first, on Sept. 26, and thus might draw off some of the forces facing the left pincer on the Cambrai-St. Quentin sector, where the defenses were strongest and the enemy most heavily massed. This pincer was formed by the First, Third, and Fourth British armies. Each pincer would be supported—if in the event not too energetically—by the French armies on their inner flanks. As a supplementary lever a combined Anglo-Belgian force was to make a forked stroke from Ypres on the 28th.

The American pincer appeared to have the greater promise, not merely because the opposition was weaker but because the thrust was closer to the German armies' line of supply and retreat, starting from a point only thirty miles distant from the eastern end of the main lateral railway. The British pincer, if it could be thrust in deep enough, would threaten the other end of the railway and the line of retreat through the Liége corridor.

Pershing had no small ambitions. His untried troops were expected to break through the enemy's three successive positions in the first day, an advance of nearly ten miles, then exploit the success during the night and by the next morning be half way to Sedan and the lateral railway.

After three hours' intense bombardment by 2,700 guns the American attack was launched on a twenty-mile front with odds of about ten to one. The Germans damped the shock by adopting the spring buffer method of defense, with the main resistance some miles in the rear. The unexpectant Americans ran into this cunning woven belt of fire when their initial impetus had been lost. Inexperience handicapped the attacking troops, and Pershing's orders ignored the experience which his allies had bought so dearly in the past—tying the wings, which pushed past the flanks of the Montfaucon height, to the pace of the center, which was held up. Checked by this self-applied brake, the attack could not regain momentum and the enemy had time to bring up reinforcements. Congestion and confusion on the roads behind helped to retard the advance.

Repeated efforts made small progress, and at last in mid-October Pershing was forced to admit the stalemate, suspending operations in order to reorganize his tattered forces. He had covered only a third of the distance to the railway, and although some 18,000 prisoners had been captured, the cost to the Americans was over a hundred thousand casualties. In addition, according to General Liggett, the number of stragglers was "estimated as high as 100,000" — evidence of the widespread state of depression and confusion. This was not surprising when due account is taken of the risks of launching an untried force into a great offensive; the British as Suvla and Loos and the Australians at Anzac had suffered the same sort of thing on a small scale. Here a whole army, newly manufactured, suffered the strain—not merely a few divisions.

The left pincer proved more effective, though it stopped a long way short of being decisive—in a physical sense. In the misty dawn of Sept. 27 Byng's left and Horne's right assaulted the Canal du Nord. Penetrating on a narrow sector, the attackers spread out fanwise and thus exerted a leverage which broke down the sides of the breach. Next evening they reached the outskirts of Cambrai. This advance brought them past the northern edge of the Hindenburg line and so formed a leverage on that line.

Meantime on Rawlinson's front 1,600 guns, one gun to every three yards, had been smothering the defenses for fifty-six hours—the first eight hours with gas. Thus the defenders were driven to take refuge in their deepest shelters. Rawlinson's assault was to be launched on a nine-mile front, one British (the 46th) and two American divisions (the 27th and 30th) forming its spearhead. The prospect seemed more favorable to the American divisions, for whereas the 46th on the right was faced by the deep chasm of the St. Quentin canal, along the American front this canal passed through a tunnel. But the prospect was marred by a mishap; the 27th American division had made a preliminary attack to clear three enemy advanced posts, and reported success. Then a doubt arose whether the posts were occupied by American parties or were still in German hands. The ill consequence was that on the 29th the artillery put down the barrage half a mile in front of the infantry starting line. And in this fatal interval lay the posts, still with their German garrisons. The morning mist temporarily obscured them, but the American infantry had not been taught to regard it as a friendly cloak. Waiting, many of them were caught as it cleared and were mown down in swaths. The collapse of their advance reacted on that of the 30th division. Nevertheless its men reached and breached the forward edge of the Hindenburg line. But in their ardor they pushed on and were taken in the rear by Germans who emerged from dugouts.

General Ludendorff, German commander, who lost his nerve near end of war.

The day was redeemed by the success of the 46th division. Cloaked by the mist, which was much thickened by smoke, its men had gained the canal and swarmed across it before the Germans realized the situation. Another division then leap-frogged them and carried the advance beyond the rear edge of the Hindenburg line.

By Oct. 5 the British had driven their way through the German defense system into open country and had taken 36,000 prisoners. Mist, smoke, and the method of leverage had been three of the chief factors in their success, which was also helped by the fact that the attack, in contrast to that in the Meuse-Argonne, had opened with the assailants close to the main barrier.

The sequel proved a disappointment. The passing of the Hindenburg line brought no marked acceleration of the advance, no sudden flooding of the open country beyond. Thirty miles still separated the British from the western end of the lateral railway. The British progress was not sufficiently fast or dangerous to produce any general or even local collapse of the German front. One cause was the wide area of reconquered and devastated country over which the British had now to haul their supplies. Another was that they had largely spent their force in breaking the Hindenburg line—another 140,000 men had been lost in the last month's fighting. And the strategic failure of the Meuse-Argonne attack deprived Foch of a counter-attraction which might have drawn off enemy reserves from the Cambrai front, easing the path of his left wing at this promising moment. But numbers were not as big an obstacle as a small machine—when this was handled by a stout-hearted man. Large numbers of the enemy, indeed, were now surrendering freely. But not the machine gunners. They had a weapon which could riddle numbers, and strategic calculations based on numbers.

Unknown to Foch, his offensive had proved more deadly in anticipation than in fulfilment. Its potential menace had made a decisive impression on Ludendorff's military mind by coming at a moment when he was shaken by the news of an indirect stroke in a far-distant quarter.

Ten days before the grand offensive in France a crack had opened in the Balkans which had "sealed the fate of the quadruple alliance." Such at least was Ludendorff's judgment—and on his judgment at the time hung that fate. He had hoped to hold fast in his strong lines in France, withdrawing gradually to fresh lines if necessary, while the obedient German statesmen were negotiating a favorable peace. But on Sept. 15 the Allied army in Salonika struck at the Bulgarian front, using a spearhead of Serbs skilled in mountain war against a sector which was weakly held because it seemed so strong by nature. Back in June the commander-in-chief there, General Guillaumat, had been called back to France as a possible successor to Foch or Pétain, then both under the cloud of the Chemin des Dames collapse. When they were saved by Clemenceau's support Guillaumat was left in the comparative inactivity of the military governorship of Paris. Like Galliéni in 1914, he used it to vital purpose—by seeking and winning permission for an offensive at Salonika.

Preparations had been going forward in Salonika under Guillaumat's successor, Franchet d'Esperey. The attack was launched on Sept. 15; in two days the Serbs had penetrated twenty miles deep. The whole of the enemy's front west of the Vardar collapsed under the converging pressure of the Serbs and French, whose pursuit drove on toward Uskub. East of the Vardar the British attack, on the Doiran sector, was a failure, but it at least helped to pin the enemy's reserves. And when the withdrawal became general the British aircraft, catching the retreating Bulgarians in the Kosturino pass, turned it into a disorderly flight. With their army now split in two, the war-weary Bulgarians sought an armistice. Signed on Sept. 29, it severed the first root of the quadruple alliance and threatened danger to Austria.

That same day came the blow on the Hindenburg line. The early reports were so disquieting as to offset the momentarily reassuring news from the Meuse-Argonne. After wrestling with his problems for some hours Ludendorff broke down. That evening he took the precipitate decision to appeal for an armistice, saying that the collapse of the Bulgarian front had upset all his dispositions; "troops destined for the western front had had to be dispatched there." Ludendorff had lost his nerve—only for a matter of days, but that was sufficient.

At this crisis Prince Max of Baden was summoned to be chancellor and to use his pacific reputation as a pledge of honor in negotiating peace. To bargain effectively and without open confession of defeat he asked and needed a breathing space of "ten, eight, even four days before I have to appeal to the enemy." But Hindenburg insisted that "a peace offer to our enemies be issued at once," while Ludendorff plaintively reiterated, "I want to save my army."

Hence on Oct. 3 the appeal for an immediate armistice went out to President Wilson. It was a confession to the world—and to the German people themselves—of defeat.

Within a few days the German command became more cheerful, even optimistic, when it saw that the breach of the Hindenburg line had not been followed by a break in the human fighting line. More encouragement came from reports of a slackening in the Allied pressure. Ludendorff still wanted an armistice, but only to rest his troops as a prelude to further resistance and to insure a secure withdrawal to a shortened defensive line on the frontier.

In the spring of 1918 Allenby's projects for a renewal of the offensive in Palestine had been upset by the breakdown in France and the consequent recall of a large part of his British troops—replaced by Indian reinforcements. Twice an attempted advance eastward across the Jordan had proved a fiasco—with only the compensation that they persuaded the enemy commander-in-chief, Liman von Sanders, that the British, according to their custom, would try again in the same direction. While Allenby was reorganizing his forces and improving their potential mobility the Arabs continued to spread their raids along the Hejaz railway, drawing the enemy's attention still more to the inland flank. The late summer saw the maturing of Allenby's plans for a new offensive. Liman von Sanders anticipated this and thought of frustrating it by a timely withdrawal. Nearly half the Turkish forces were kept away from the British front by the elusive threats of a few thousand Arabs directed by Lawrence.

During the month before Allenby struck, Lawrence wove a web of feints and fictions to convince Liman von Sanders that the British were going to come over the Jordan again. During the final three days of preparation the Arabs cut the railways radiating from Deraa, the focal point of the enemy's communications. Helped by this distraction as well as by his own string of ruses, Allenby, from his army of a quarter of a million men, was able to concentrate odds of about ten to one on a chosen sector near the Mediterranean coast.

On Sept. 19 the infantry attack here opened like a door on its hinges, sweeping the dazed defenders aside. Through the open doorway the cavalry passed and rode straight up the coastal corridor for thirty miles before swinging inland to close the bolt-holes in the enemy's rear. The only formed remnant of the Turkish forces tried to escape over the Jordan but was caught in a gorge and bombed into chaos by the British aircraft. The cavalry and Arabs then engaged in a race for Damascus, which was occupied on Oct. 1. They then continued to Aleppo and the junction of the Bagdad railway—completing a pursuit of 350 miles in thirty-eight days. Altogether some 75,000 prisoners had been taken at a cost of less than 5,000 casualties.

On Oct. 31, two days after the last bound was achieved, Turkey capitulated. Stripped of her forces in Syria and Mesopotamia, her capital was exposed to an imminent advance from Salonika.

The Italian front had been comparatively quiet during 1918 save for a brief midsummer storm. After successfully resisting the enemy's attempts at the end of 1917 to force his new line on the Piave, Diaz had devoted himself to the overhaul of his forces, determined to abstain from offensives until the the chances were completely favorable. When the crisis developed in France he arranged to send an army corps thither as a token of good will and in compensation for the French and British forces retained in Italy. But he was reluctant to embark on any offensive diversion and found good reason for waiting in the signs that the Austrians were meditating an attack on his line. This came in June and took the form of a converging double thrust—down from the Trentino and straight across the Piave. The former quickly collapsed, the nerve of the war-weary Austrians breaking under the storm of fire that greeted them. The latter succeeded in crossing the Piave but reserves, rushed to the breach by motor, hemmed in the attackers, who withdrew in disorder a week later with a loss of more than 100,000 men.

Diaz, however, was not to be hurried in following up his success—and resisted all pressure from his allies to take the offensive until his chances were amply insured. Not until mid-October, after Germany's urgent appeal for peace, did he decide to move. But the plan was prepared. On Oct. 24, the anniversary of Caporetto, the Italian offensive opened with an attack in the Grappa region; this failed at heavy cost, although it helped to attract the enemy's reserves. And the flooding of the Piave led Diaz to suspend the attempt of the Eighth and Twelfth armies to force the passage of the river. Farther down the river, in the sector of the mixed Tenth army under Lord Cavan, a couple of British battalions had been ferried across by Italian boatmen to an island in midstream under cover of night and a thick mist. Two nights later the capture of this island was completed by a British and an Italian division, and during the following day a thick fog covered the building of bridges. The two other divisions of Cavan's army were brought over, and on the 27th a footing was gained on the far side of the Piave. The Italian advance now became general. Next day, with her forces splitting in two and her troops degenerating into a fugitive rabble, Austria begged for an armistice. It was granted on Nov. 4, after the Italians had drunk their fill of victory to drown the memories of Caporetto.

The same day revolution broke out in Germany. It spread rapidly over a country that was soaked in a sense of hopelessness, its flames fanned by a hot wind of popular indignation against the leaders who had hidden the truth all too successfully. Ludendorff had already been forced to resign. The kaiser only added fuel to the flames by his reluctance to abdicate. The fleet mutinied when its leaders tried to send it out on a death-or-glory ride against the British fleet. On Nov. 6 the German delegates left Berlin to treat for an armistice.

The Allied leaders had been debating for a month what they should demand before agreeing to suspend their advance. President Wilson declared that in order to preserve the existing military superiority the conditions must be left to the military advisers. This gave Foch a chance to make the military terms serve his country's political aims. He shrewdly remarked to Clemenceau that "the armistice should give us full guarantees for obtaining the terms that we wish in the peace negotiations . . . for it is certain that only the sacrifices of territory agreed to by the enemy at the time of signing the armistice will remain final." When Clemenceau rebuked him for intruding into the political sphere Foch sought the support of President Poincaré to reinforce his claim. And he took care to insert the occupation of the Rhine bridges in his draft terms.

Haig, however, considered the terms too drastic. "If it is really desired to conclude an armistice it is necessary to grant Germany conditions she can accept," he said.

But to Foch no peace was of value without the Rhine, and he would not listen to Haig's objections. When the draft terms were discussed by the statesmen on Nov. 1 Foch admitted that the Germans were able to withdraw to a new and shorter line and that the Allied armies were incapable of preventing this. But "the collapse of Austria, Bulgaria, and Turkey" was bound to have an important effect on their situation, so that even if they rejected the terms now the end could only be postponed.

If the conditions proposed by Foch went beyond the reality of the situation at the time they were framed, the situation was fast moving to meet them, although not on the western front.

The British armies, it is true, were still pushing on. By the time of the armistice they had reached Mons, the place where the little expeditionary force of 1914 had fought its first battle. And they had raised their bag of prisoners since Sept. 26 to 88,000. But the Germans were now slipping away faster than they could be followed.

The American advance had been resumed on Nov. 1 and, because of its direction, was potentially more dangerous. The number of American troops in France had now risen to two million, and in mid-October Pershing had formed a Second army under General Bullard from the inactive forces east of the Meuse, handing over the First to Liggett, who thus took executive charge in the Meuse-Argonne. A further 8,000 prisoners were taken, making a total of 26,000 since Sept. 26. [Over the whole period of the Allied offensive campaign from July 18 to Nov. 11 the captures were: British, 188,700 prisoners, 2,840 guns; French, 139,000 prisoners, 1,880 guns; American, 48,800 prisoners, 1,424 guns; Belgian, 14,500 prisoners, 474 guns.] But the advance was too late to be a serious threat to the German withdrawal.

A speedier prospect was offered by a newly prepared offensive against the untouched front in Lorraine, beyond Metz. For this Foch had assembled a Franco-American army, and the stroke was intended for delivery on Nov. 14. But as the Allied armies in the west were running to a standstill, the revolution in Germany was gathering momentum. The ever-tightening pressure of the blockade and the violent recoil caused by unexpected contact with hard facts were the irresistible forces behind it. With revolution in their streets, starvation in their homes, and disillusionment in their hearts, the Germans had become incapable of further resistance.

At 5 a. m. on Nov. 11 the German delegates accepted the terms dictated to them in Foch's railway carriage in the forest of Compiègne. Six hours later the last shots were fired. Thus at the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month of 1918 the war was brought to an end—symbolically suggesting that western civilization had been given a last chance to profit by experience and to disprove Heine's saying, "We learn from history that we do not learn from history."

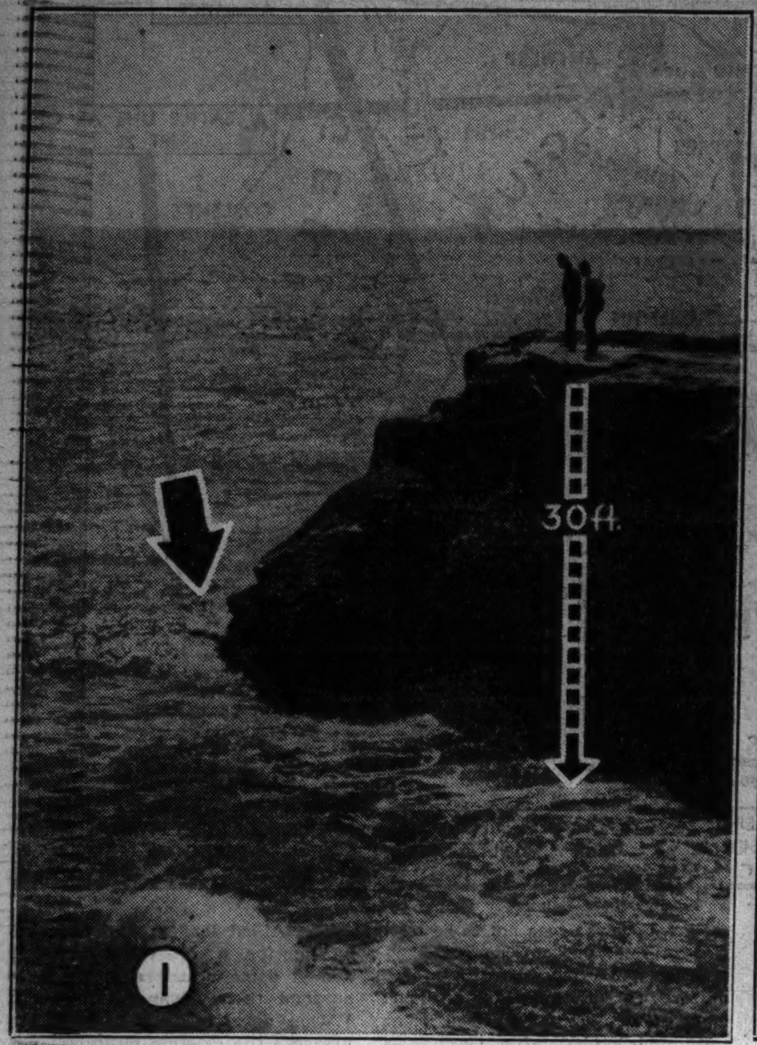
Chancellor Hitler Emphasizes Youth Training in Nazi Program—Germany Builds New Camps for Boys

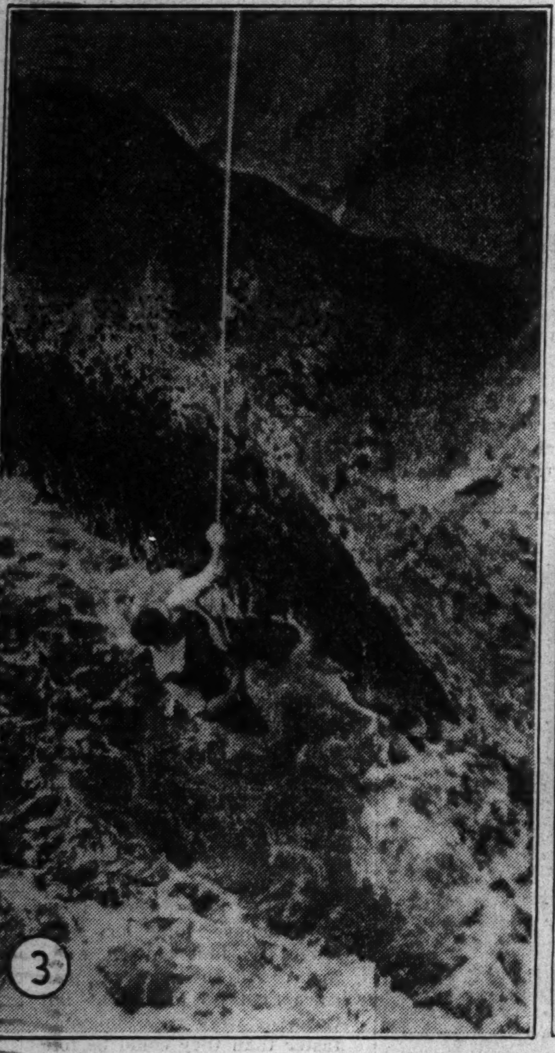
WOULD YOU RISK YOUR LIFE FOR YOUR DOG?



Ross Newfarmer of Mountain View, Cal., and a friend look down on the struggles of his dog Snarky—a speck of black (indicated by arrow—battling against waves after falling from thirty foot cliff into the ocean.

[Acme Photos.]

Realizing the dog's helplessness, Newfarmer, with the aid of passing motorists, begins descent into the pounding surf.



Despite the battering, Newfarmer manages to grasp the dog and shouts to his helpers to haul away. Now it becomes a question of holding on with the added weight of the dog in his arms.

The owner and his pet are hauled over the top of the rock cliff. "Whew, that was close," says Newfarmer as he gasps out his thanks to the motorists. But his pet, no pedigree, is safe.

Newfarmer sits on the running board of his auto and holds Snarky. There is none of the reproachful words a father might utter to a careless boy. Instead: "It was worth it, just seeing the pooch's eyes light up when I collared him." Snarky can't speak, except with the steady eyes with which he regards his master, returning love for love.

THE HIKE—Nazi leaders prescribe a vigorous physical program designed to strengthen the bodies of young Germans. These youths are leaving the camp at Urfeld.

END OF DAY—Scenes such as this will become common if the current campaign of Chancellor Hitler is successful. After a long hike these boys seek rest at Adolf Hitler camp in Berchtesgaden.

Don't dismiss that tinge of "Pink" too lightly—See your dentist—

Don't be a "DENTAL CRIPPLE"

Too much soft food—not enough hard chewing—that's often how gum troubles start!

Change today TO IPANA AND MASSAGE

ONLY a faint tinge of "pink" on your tooth brush. It does seem trivial—unimportant. But before you dismiss it so easily—see what your dentist has to say!

"Pink tooth brush" is a warning—nothing more. But the first time you see it—see your dentist. You may not be in for bad news—shocking news—but the only sensible move is to play safe. Usually, however, you'll find your dentist reassuring. Your gums are probably only the victims of our modern soft-food menus—gums robbed of work and exercise by our soft, creamy, well-cooked foods. And generally his advice will simply be—"vigorous chewing and more work for lazy gums"—and very often the excellent suggestion—"the stimulating help of Ipana Tooth Paste and massage."

Ipana and massage is a modern way of helping to promote solid, healthy gums—as well as sparkling, lustrous teeth. Massage a little extra Ipana into your gums each time you brush your teeth. You'll feel those lazy gums awaken. Circulation quickens within the gums. They tend to grow firmer. They become healthier, more able to resist dental disorders.

Change to Ipana and massage, today. Adopt this oral health routine and make your smile one you can be proud of—a smile that's brilliant, gay, sparkling white.

Remember A good tooth paste, like a good dentist, is never a luxury.

Opening of San Carlo Opera Gala Benefit

By Cousin Eve.

EVERY box seemed to be taken at the San Carlo opera opening Monday night at the Auditorium. It was a gala Episcopal audience gathered to benefit the "Church Mission of Help," with pretty girls passing programs and bouquets of roses for the stars. One saw Valeria Harris, Mary Alice Bacon, Patricia Kelley, Margaret Mitchell, and Madelon Search, chairman, ushering gracefully and with dignity. The audience was dotted with clergymen. Bishop George Craig Stewart, honorary president of the mission, was there and, naturally, Mrs. Dudley Stark, who organized the benefit, and her co-chairmen, Mrs. Mark Cummings, Mrs. Bruce Borland, Mrs. James R. Offield. Also Mrs. Theodore Robinson, Mrs. Duncan Browne, and Mrs. Nathaniel Owings. Two short operas and an act of ballet—the latter showing how liberal church people are getting. Exciting, too, was the pigtail murder in the up to date opera "L'Oracolo," and lovely the fresh young voices throughout.

Another case of Episcopalian broadmindness is the Summer Fashion tea, May 4, run by the social service committee of St. James church. Instead of taking St. Peter too seriously about "that outward adornment of plaiting the hair, of wearing gold, or of putting on apparel," the ladies have tied up with a fashionable dress shop and its mannequins to see what is what for spring. I already have seen Mrs. Simpson's "going away" coat in repliqua, a nifty black braided number with belt. Steering this benefit, in the Woman's Athletic ballroom, are Mrs. Duncan H. Browne, Mrs. Alan C. Dixon, Mrs. Hayden Harris, Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr., Mrs. Clarence McCarthy, Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, Mrs. Orville J. Taylor, Mrs. P. A. Valentine, and Mrs. George Wilson.

Going to see the Quadrangle players, in the University of Chicago sector, often saves me money. Once one has seen these clever amateurs do a new play, box offices are out of luck as far as I am concerned. Thus when Katharine Cornell comes along in "The Wingless Victory" I shall be calm because of Florence Hopkins, wife of Albert Hopkins, who did the rôle of Ophar in "The Wingless Victory." Whether it was Mrs. Hopkins' southern beauty, her lovely voice, or her capacity for emotion, the audience was in tears Sunday night.

Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Woodward made the party in their big living room for half a hundred friends. There had been no rehersal before this performance, which made it all the more remarkable. Book in hand, they read the parts and gave us a thrill. Katharine Cornell has been playing Ophar all winter and I wondered how much she could have done with the rôle of the dark skinned Malay princess married to a Salem sea captain had she worn a pair of horn rimmed spectacles on her nose.

Usually the Quadranglers wear the black tie and informal dress for chair plays, but Mrs. Hopkins did Ophar in oriental broideries of yellow, a fillet of gold holding her dark hair. The play is a closely written theme by Maxwell Anderson against unequal marriages, and a bit somber for an audience wanting to roll off its chairs. But this was a serious university group enjoying deeply the roguish sea captain and his pharisaical brother, Philander. These dramatic evenings usually close with a buffet supper and are a fortnightly winter amusement in Hyde Park.

SORROWFUL indeed are the friends of the Schweppe family at the sudden death of Laura, wife of Charles Schweppe, at the Ambassador hotel. Coming in from a small dinner late Monday night, she slipped away in an instant, and Chicago was the poorer for one of its most generous, vivid, and liberal-minded citizens.

Mrs. Schweppe was Laura Shedd. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. John Shedd; her sister, Mrs. Kersey Reed; her husband, Charles S. Schweppe; a son, John Shedd, and her daughter, Jean, now Mrs. Watson Armour III. It is not easy to write adequately of Laura Schweppe. Conventional words are unsuited to one so natural and gay, so witty and original in her view of life. She radiated kindness, and scores of devoted friends will mourn her loss. Mrs. Schweppe was left a large personal fortune by her father, the late John G. Shedd. In the last year she made many important and beautiful gifts to the various societies she was interested in, as though sensing that her time was short.

More changes in upper Astor street, which is one of the loveliest short thoroughfares in our town. The Francis Farwell house, a beautifully planned dwelling, now occupied by Robert Stevenson and his family, has been sold to Paul Welling. Harriet Welling, who has another beautiful young daughter to introduce soon, expresses pleasure at the prospect of living under her own roof again.

Further down on the same street Adlai Stevenson has leased the house at 1430, where Mrs. Westover Channon has lived these many years. The Stevensons were happy when they were in State street, near the Kellogg Fairbank, but Mrs. Stevenson put so much charm and chic into the house that somebody came along and bought it.

MRS. ARTHUR MEEKER was at home Monday afternoon, late, in honor of the ladies putting over the ticket selling end of Evanston's May Musical festival.

Chairs were ranged cozily in the Georgian living room at 1120 Lake Shore drive, and the two storied tea table purred to itself in the corner waiting for Pussy Paepcke to come and pour out the tea. Which she did later on. Vicky Baum [Arthur Jr.'s dachshund] gave me a peevish look when we met in the hall, and the hostess said that Vicky did not even try to hide her aversion for guests. I secretly thought that Vicky had lost her figger, and that it behooved her to be sweet, whatever her reactions to company. Mrs. Walter Kirk, in gray tailleur, urged her committee on—they had already done marvels—and so did Mr. Hill, the only man present. Kate Bartholomay Osborne, lately up from Florida, proved the sensation of the hour. Down at Hobe sound she somehow acquired the complexion of a North American Indian; which, with her violet blue eyes, was rather startling.

Some of the young and lovelies there were Jean Harvey, Lydia Swift Rowan, and Mrs. Edward Hurley, Mrs. Mark Trude, Mrs. Walter Wolf, and Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick.

Mr. and Mrs. Meeker have just returned from a cruise on the ocean-going yacht of Ira Copley, Happy Days, which took them through the Canal Zone. They came back from California by train via tremendous dust storms which are raging.

MRS. RALPH JAMES has many friends. By and large she probably is the most popular woman in Chicago. So it was not surprising that there was standing room only Thursday afternoon at the Alliance Française when France decorated her. It was one of those glorified causeries at which members put away their Red Cross baby jackets and are attentive to music and the dance. The large tapestried, high ceiled room with book lined walls fairly vibrated with new spring hats and print frocks. Mrs. James herself, as vice president, did the honors in costume of gray blue, with orchid bouquets depending from shoulder, where was a luxurious spray of pinky beige; waist, where were others pink and mauve, to an armful of all colors and many gardenias as well. René Weiller, French consul general, bearing the magic box containing the decoration, bustled into seats in the front row with Mme. Weiller. In this box, on a velvet cushion, lay the crossed silver palms on purple ribbon awarded Mrs. James by the French minister of education.

First there was a song recital by a slim coloratura, Mlle. Warshawska, who billowed on in sweeping black taffeta with peeping flounces of white and long, black ringlets. The aria was from "Lakme." The more one hears coloraturas the more one wishes they really wouldn't—it is an act so obviously against art and nature. The lower notes of the young Pole were admirable.

Dance numbers by Elise Moore, a clever youngster who interprets poetic fragments in motion, was followed by the investiture. In that pure Parisian of M. Weiller, which gives everybody the jitters, it is so impeccably smooth and lovely, we heard all that Mme. James had done for the alliance, of the new members she had brought, the lovely music she had arranged, the success of her administration.

Instead of the traditional accolade or kiss upon both cheeks, Mr. Weiller bestowed two kisses upon the fair hand. In perfect French the new member of the French academy made her thanks. Present during the ceremony were Col. Ralph James, William M. Scudder, and Ralph Purchas.

Mrs. Chauncey McCormick was hostess for the tea which followed. Seated at the lace covered refectory table were Mrs. Walter Brewster and Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, while Mrs. Howell Erminger, Mrs. Ralph Winston, Mrs. Charles W. Dempster, and Mrs. Paul Welling were assisting hostesses among the many guests.

A MORE than interesting engagement of last week was that of Mabel Linn, elder daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William R. Linn, to Sterling B. Lacy, a prominent Denver banker. The engagement was announced by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Linn, sending out cards for the wedding. Miss Linn has been living for the last year or two in a small house in that fascinating quarter of London, Chelsea, and she returned only recently from England with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Howard Linn. The bride-to-be has a fascinating type of loveliness—heart shaped face, large, dark eyes, regular features, a pensive, poetic, dreamy look; in fact, a typical Greuze head. She is a small, slight woman, intellectual rather than outdoor in her pursuits. Her younger sister, Dorothy, married Cyrus H. McCormick many years ago, a match that ended in divorce. Mabel, however, was the beauty of the family and always picturesquely dressed in a way that stressed her loveliness.

The divine Lucy Linn came home from England with an armful of small pet dogs, demonstrating the latest of continental fashions. No woman who likes dogs goes about nowadays with less than three. A young Parisian acquaintance of mine, of the great world, walks in the Bois these spring mornings with four small Pekes at her heels.

The latest photographs of European beauties in sports dress show conclusively that to be utterly smart one must have a multiplicity of bow-wows. Mrs. Bruce Borland of Astor street long ago set the style in Chicago for walking out with four little Pekes in attendance. Her pets are beautiful little animals with long, glossy fur the color of horse chestnuts.

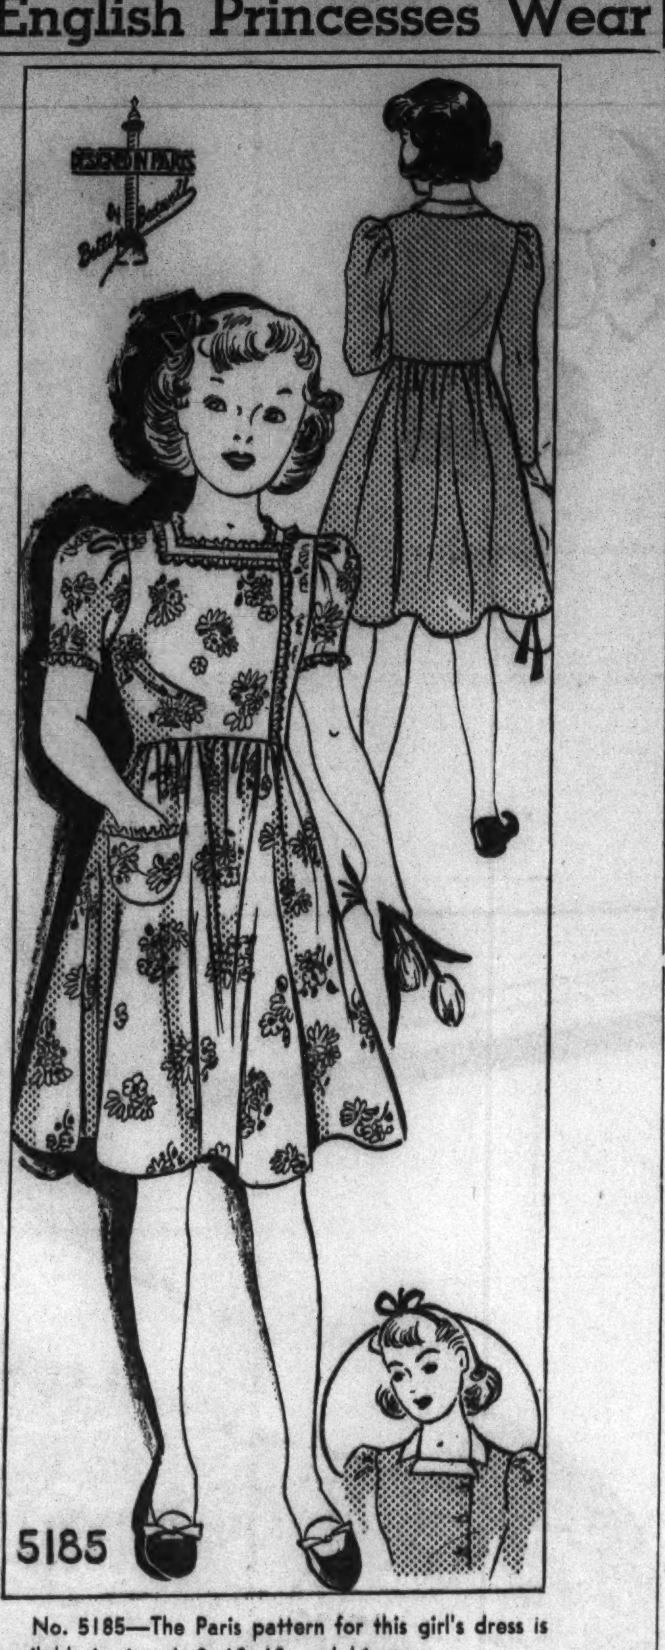
MR. AND MRS. HERMAN GADE sailed for Europe last week with their daughter Alice to spend what is left of spring in Paris. They were in Charleston for the late winter and attracted much attention with their rather foreign appearance in that ultra-American town. Herman Gade left no sightseeing stone unturned. One day, in a famous old house where visitors sign in the guest book, the debonair Norwegian left his card instead of signing. And this was such a gorgeous card, all about the king of Norway, and the bearer being envoy plenipotentiary, en disponibilité, that newspaper men and photographers flocked to the hotel. Soon Mr. Gade was making speeches in the schools, handsome snapshots came out in the papers, and the gallant Herman was quite the hero of Charleston. Mrs. Gade, who was Alice King of Chicago, sister of Mrs. Arnold Klebs of Nyon, Switzerland, and of Charles Garfield King, is going back to France to sell her beautiful château, Mesnil-St.-Denis. The Gades have lived a dozen years in the 16th century house, southwest of Versailles, a short run out of Paris. Built by Baron Habert de Mortemar in early 1500, it has a charming roof and façade and a double moat with round towers, and all the gardens and farm buildings and great trees and orchards an landowner could desire. Down th centuries the château has house many visitors from the nearby roya palace of Versailles. Mme. de Se vigné in her letters tells of a visi there, also of the good pastry cook Molière slept there. Of these peopl one muses when one tucks onesel away o' nights in the guest wing.

While Mesnil-St.-Denis has bee made comfortable with heating plan and electric fixtures, the Gades hav purposely left it quaint and simple if one can call simple the marvelou ancient furnishings. The chapel ha become a banquet hall for their larg er parties, and magnificent flower from the gardens brighten the tapes tried spaces. To visit Mesnil-St.-Deni no more will be a minor tragedy.

Paris Pattern Frock One English Princesses Wear



No. 5185—The Paris pattern for this girl's dress is available in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—This Paris pattern, No. 5185, is a replica of the summer dresses which the little English princesses will wear and which they have by the dozens in flowered cotton or in pastel colored gingham or cotton. The pattern is easy to follow, and you mothers can make up a child's frock from it in a few hours, a frock with all the distinction that can go into the dress of a princess. It is suitable for girl from 6 to 14 years old.

Choose a dainty flowered cotton, preferably in a pastel color on a white ground, and for the ruffle trimming you may use cotton lace, white lingerie material, or simple bands of the lace or the lingerie, if you prefer. These ruffles make a double border for the square neckline, edge the sleeves and the one pocket, and one ruffle is placed down the left side of the front to the waistline.

The material may be in one color, if you prefer, with white trimming. Favorite colors of the English princesses are primrose yellow, pastel blue, bright red, beech brown, apple green, and rose pink, all charming for a child.

D. A. R.'s Vote Against Court Packing Move

By Ruth De Young.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Following close upon the declaration of the Daughters of the American Revolution against President Roosevelt's court packing proposal, it is expected that the General Federation of Women's Clubs will take similar action next week at its annual spring council meeting in Tulsa, Okla.

Here last Wednesday the D. A. R.'s almost unanimously declared that the Supreme court should be changed by constitutional amendment only. The action was looked upon as a particular achievement for Mrs. Vinton E. Sisson of Winnetka, who worked for more than two months to arouse the organization to the gravity of the issue involved.

MRS. WILLIAM DICK SPORBORG of New York, already put forward as a candidate for the first vice presidency of the general federation at its triennial elections a year hence, will present the Supreme court resolution in Tulsa. Mrs. Sporborg is chairman of legislation for the general federation.

A large and important delegation of Illinois women left Chicago by special train this morning for Tulsa. They will be joined in St. Louis by another contingent, while delegates are leaving the east today in time to reach Tulsa by Monday, when the council meeting will convene.

Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the general federation, will be hostess to the delegates in a true sense, since Tulsa is her home city. An unusual feature of the four day program will be a visit to the Indian museum, which forms a private collection in the home of Mrs. Lawson. This treasure house, valued by collectors at a quarter of a million dollars, is opened only on special occasions. Mrs. Lawson has taken an active interest in the American Indian, as she is a descendant of the tribe of the Delawares.

The list of speakers scheduled to address the council meeting is headed by Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, chief of the children's bureau in the United States department of labor.

Of particular interest in the light of the federation's interest in conservation will be the address of Ferdinand A. Silcox of the forest service in the United States department of agriculture. Harvard university's bureau of trafic research will contribute Maxwell Halsey to the program. Recently Mrs. Lawson committed the general federation to a program of coöperation with the American Automobile Manufacturers' association in its drive to foster passage of uniform state trafic laws throughout the country.

STILL other speakers at the council meeting will be Miss Margaret Cuthbert, director of women's activities for the National Broadcasting company; Adela Rogers St. Johns, writer; Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson, director of the Good Citizenship bureau of the Woman's Home Companion, and Mrs. T. Grafton Abbott of Boston, who will discuss her work as consultant in parent education for the division of child hygiene of the Massachusetts state department of public health.

The closing session of the council meeting will be marked by the informal presentation of candidates for office in the general federation. These elections will take place next spring at the triennial meeting in Kansas City. It is generally conceded that Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar of Portland, Ore., first vice president, will succeed Mrs. Lawson in the presidency. Illinois has endorsed the much beloved Mrs. Walter Webster Seymour of Chicago, now second vice president, for the first vice presidency, while New York is casting its support to Mrs. Sporborg. Mrs. La Fell Dickinson of New Hampshire is the popular choice for the second vice presidency, according to early report.

Mrs. Seymour will lead the delegation from Illinois at the Tulsa meeting. Other leaders in attendance will include Mrs. William F. Farrell, general federation director; Mrs. Edward J. Lehman of Sidney, president of the Illinois federation; Mrs. William J. Piggott, chairman of music for the general federation, and Mrs. Fred R. Lufkin, vice chairman of publicity for the national organization.

Sea Island, Ga., Tennis Fans Are to Have Contest

SEA ISLAND, GA. Tennis enthusiasts at Sea Island, Ga., will assemble on Wednesday at the Cloister courts for a round robin featuring mixed doubles. Unusual interest has been exhibited here this season in tennis.

Softball on the broad beach in front of the Casino will attract numerous spectators as well as participants on Friday, April 30, when Cloister guests and Sea Island residents will compete. Paddle tennis and beach jai alai also are popular games on the beach, which also furnishes a grand course for cyclists.

Among recent arrivals at the Cloister are S. O. Hansen, Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Anderson, Miss Katherine Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Lynn A. Williams, all of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Dewitt Davis, and Mrs. L. H. G. Bouscaren, of Winnetka; Mr. and Mrs. Willard N. Boyden, and Mr. and Mrs. Bernard F. Rogers of Lake Forest.

Pasadena Hostess Gives Effective Pool-Side Party

PASADENA, CAL. Covers were laid for 16 guests when Mrs. George Marcy entertained on Saturday at another of the Huntington hotel's pool-side luncheons. On the shaded side of the water, under the oaks, the long table was spread and decked with three large bowls of spring flowers. Flowers bloomed near by in the terraced rock garden just below some of the hotel cottages, and across the pool in brilliant sunlight were a mixture of growing snaps and stocks, ranunculas, poppies and marigolds.

Mrs. Marcy's guests included Mrs. Harry N. Hall [Anne Russell], formerly of Chicago, now of Wichita, Kas., who is here visiting Mrs. E. H. Fennessy; Mrs. Leroy A. Goddard, Mrs. William A. Maggie, both of Chicago; Mrs. James A. Rankin, Mrs. Ida Mortenson, Mrs. Charles J. True, Mrs. George Ogle, all former Chicagoans; Mrs. H. G. Young and Mrs. Alfred Costello of New York; Mrs. Heaton Owsley of Philadelphia; Mrs. Harry L. Evans, Mrs. Henry C. House, Mrs. H. R. Lyon, and Mrs. Frederick H. Horn.

Dr. and Mrs. Robert M. Hutchins were registered at the Huntington last week, leaving Friday for Phoenix, Ariz., and thence home. The young president of the University of Chicago made a hasty trip to Fresno, while here to deliver an address. They were much fêted during their brief stay.

Coronation Limelight Falls on Many Distinguished American Born Women

LONDON In the official and social splendors of the coronation, many women of American birth or descent cannot, even if they would, escape the limelight. One of the spectacular rôles falls, by incidence and coincidence, to Lady Ancaster. In 1905, before bustles had gone out, and while rats still were worn to make a great sweep of the front hair, Eloise Breese, from the banks of the Hudson, became the bride of Gilbert Heathcote Drummond Willoughby, second earl of Ancaster. The present is not the first coronation in which she was destined to figure. In December, 1910, a few months before George V. was officially crowned in Westminster abbey, her father-in-law, the first earl of Ancaster, was gathered to his ancestors.

For generations her husband's forbears, although with other titles, had held the post of joint hereditary lord great chamberlain. This high sounding function gathers its full meaning at a coronation. To be sure, he accompanies his sovereign to the opening of parliament, or at one of the rare trials of a peer or peeress. But on coronation day he attends the king in his bedroom and hands him his clothes. In Westminster abbey, at the great ceremony, he fastens the clasp of the imperial mantle, and arrays the king in his purple robes. He receives forty ells of crimson velvet for his own robes, is entiled to the gilt basin and the towels used at the king's hand washing and, in lieu of a former perquisite entitling him to the furniture of the king's bedroom, now receives a money gift equal to about $1,000.

FOR this coronation it is Lord Ancaster's turn to play the part that sometimes devolves on the marquis of Cholmondeley or on others. [When some one asked Mark Twain how to pronounce M-a-r-j-o-r-i-b-a-n-k-s, he replied "Chumley." George VI. has indicated that this is Ancaster's year for the high dignity. And if you walked down to the house of lords a few days ago you would have seen a sign bearing his signature, "Ancaster, G. C."

The Heathcotes first began to acquire notice through their flair for trading. About the middle of the 17th century Gilbert Heathcote had eight sons. All of them, except one who died very young, became merchant adventurers. Of this enterprising group son Gilbert was one of the projectors, and one of the first governors, of the Bank of England. Knighted by Queen Anne, he was said, with his wealth computed at $3,500,000, to be the richest commoner in England.

For several generations the succeeding baronets, from father to son, were members of parliament.

The fifth baronet, Sir Gilbert John Heathcote, not only had himself eventually made Lord Aveland but in 1827 married Clementina Drummond, daughter, so to speak, of a thousand earls, who succeeded to the barony of Willoughby de Eresby fallen for a time into abeyance. Their son, in addition to his other titles, was made in 1892 earl of Ancaster. From his mother he inherited the succession to the joint hereditary great chamberlain which her ancestor, the 13th Baron Willoughby de Eresby, had claimed about 1630 in right of his mother, Lady Mary Vere, sister and heiress of the earl of Oxford.

It would take a Philadelphia lawyer to tell of all the claimants to the lord great chamberlain, and it would almost seem, with the office more than once divided between heiresses, that a woman, on the fateful coronation day, must have handed to the monarch to be crowned, his shirt. Be that as it may, the present earl of Ancaster will be at the center of the ceremonies in the abbey and his wife will have a notable place.

THE earl of Ancaster and his American countess have remarkable facilities for entertaining. In London their Eaton square house, not far from the chancellery of the American embassy, is in the heart of Belgravia. In Lincolnshire they have Grimsthorpe castle, a pile of various epochs. It is in the Fen district, in a region where Worth, the celebrated Paris dressmaker, was born. The art treasures of Grimsthorpe include some magnificent Holbeins. In Scotland they have Drummond castle, in Perthshire, with superb gardens.

Lady Ancaster, who is a justice of the peace, and was named in 1920 to the Order of the British Empire, spends much of her time in what she calls her own special home at Richmond, in the part of the ancient historic home of kings and queens known as Wardrobe house.

Their son and heir, Lord Willoughby de Eresby, who is 30, was much fêted on reaching his twenty-first birthday by the tenants of the Ancaster estates. He celebrated 1933 not only by being elected to parliament as a Conservative but by marrying the Hon. Nancy Phyllis Astor, daughter of the second Viscount Astor and his irrepressible wife, Lady Astor, the former Nancy Langhorne, who is remembered for her recent attempt to defy the rules of the American congress by calmly taking her place on the floor.

Among the American born women prominently associated with the coronation by virtue of their titled marriages is Lady Granard, wife of the earl of Granard, who was master of the horse under King George V., retired under Edward VIII., and reinstated under the present monarch, George VI.

Lady Granard, whose chief interest is horses, is the daughter of the late D. Ogden Mills, from whom she inherited a large fortune and stables in France.

A great figure at the coronation will be the Aga Khan, head of the Shiite Moslems, who claims descent from Fatima, daughter of the prophet. A divinity in Islam, he has traveled widely in the last year, among other places to Madagascar, and he recently was in Africa, where his followers brought him his weight in gold. A great turfman in the occident, he and his attractive wife, formerly of Grenoble, are to be seen on the leading race courses of Britain and France.

The Princess Karam of Kapurthala, wife of a junior son of the maharajah of Kapurthala, will create as much interest in London as she usually does in Paris, where she has figured, during the last few years, during the grand season. Petite, she is extremely handsome, and her natural chic and flair for wearing with consummate art adaptations of her rich native dress, coupled with her vivacity, beauty, and charm, make her appearance everywhere a kind of sensation.

Mary Borden Spears, the novelist, wife of Brig. Gen. Spears, is well known on both sides of the channel, as well as in the United States. She met and nursed her husband, later becoming his wife, at a hospital which she maintained for a long time near the frontier between France and Belgium.

Flower Show Now History in Pasadena

By Ruth Billheimer.

PASADENA, CAL.

Now that the exhibitors have hauled away their flower pots and luster bowls from the scene of the spring flower show at Carmelita Gardens, there is time to count their laurels. A census shows at least six former Chicagoans among the prize winners.

A prominent ex-Chicagoan, Dr. Phillip Schuyler Doane, was generalissimo of the Pasadena Flower Show association's second venture this spring and his former townsmen rallied around him in royal fashion to help put the venture over. But no social nor civic event of any proportions can happen in Pasadena, it seems, without a goodly smattering of Chicago folks taking part.

THE Diggers club, with Mrs. Alson Clark as its president, executed a Devonshire garden with a real wattel fence which they made from willows they had begged from the forest rangers. Mrs. Clark, herself, took a second prize for her miniature desert garden, inspired by her artist husband's fondness for desert subjects and frequent sojourns in their cabin at Palm Springs which they built long before the resort became considered a smart place to go. A single geranium bud served as a cactus blossom in her miniature display, and everything was thus kept down to scale. Mrs. Clark also received honorable mention for her yellow-flowers-in-a-blue-container entry.

In that class, Mrs. Carlton Swift took first prize. First prize for green things in white containers went to Mrs. Frank H. Sellers, last year's president of the Diggers, and the town's most exclusive decorators "went wild" over it. Mrs. Sellers insists that it was purely accidental, that in the last hectic moment, with only a vague plan in mind, she assembled in an old sandwich glass dish the green bananas, limes, lemons, apples and avocados with a single rosette of green magnolia leaves for a garnish that she asked Mr. Sellers to pass on while she busied herself with a dozen other things.

But anyone who knows Mrs. Sellers' innate cleverness and her long experience with flower arrangement, knows her prize winner was no accident, and experience counted in the eleventh hour! She also won honorable mention for her early American farmhouse bouquet of mixed flowers in a pink luster bowl. In the miniature division, she entered a pair of old opium bottles which held tiny flowers.

It was Mrs. Edward F. Robbins, however, who carried off the honors in miniature arrangements, which were required to be under five inches in height. And indeed she should, for she is a collector of miniature antique vases, having probably 25 pairs and, furthermore, she makes use of them as well as keeping them in cases and she grows little flowers especially for them.

Of the seven pairs she entered, Mrs. Robbins, formerly of Lake Forest, won ribbons on three and honorable mention on a fourth. Others who made miniature entries included Mrs. Edgar F. Washburn.

For the vegetable-in-wooden-container competition, Mrs. Robert H. Ripley from Chicago, sojourning at the Vista del Arroyo hotel, put her tongue in her cheek and filled a battered wooden mortar with green onions . . . roots up!—and won third prize! The splintered pestle lay carelessly beside it.

OUT in the cut flowers exhibits were entries of roses from the 67 varieties that grow in the gardens of Mrs. A. C. Thorsen, another former Chicagoan. Her Talismans took first, second and third prizes; her Golden Emblems, second; her Hoover, Los Angeles, Hadley, and other roses also placed.

Although Chicagoans were fewer in the ranks of prize bloom winners, many prominent names figured. Mrs. Henry M. Robinson won many awards for her roses, iris, stock and snaps. Mrs. W. E. Upjohn, widow of Dr. Upjohn of Kalamazoo, Mich., won the sweepstakes with at least nine firsts and several lesser prizes.

And among the Chicagoans and former residents who meandered down winding paths between flaming masses of azaleas and rhododendrons, borders of stock and tulips and past the symphony of color given out by blue, purple, magenta, rose, pink and white cinerarias, were Mr. and Mrs. George Marcy, Mrs. Fred W. Upham, Mr. and Mrs. R. Stephens Wright [Glee Louise Viles] and their children, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ackert Banks and Mrs. Edward W. Bodman.

All in all, Pasadena and, indeed, all southern California is taking off its hat to Dr. Doane, acclaiming this the best flower show ever. No small part of its success was the happy choice of Carmelita for the site.

EDUCATIONAL lectures on gardening, flower arrangement and kindred subjects were given in a tent in one corner of the grounds. Tables under bright umbrellas gave a festive touch to another space close to the house where Mrs. Doane, as head of the commissary, took charge and her daughter, Phyllis, played cashier, while sister Dolly [Mrs. Miles Hubbard] assisted in the kitchen and sister-in-law Jane [Mrs. Graeme Stewart] Doane, wore one of the green frocks and white caps of a waitress.

Mrs. Doane's sister, Miss Mercedes Stewart, and her friend, Miss Kathleen Warren, also were pressed into service, as also Mrs. Jerome Holland Bishop [Helen Chapin of Chicago].

Over the nursery presided Mrs. Herbert Hoover Jr., and Mrs. Aubrey Bullock-Webster. A real hurdy-gurdy man fitted into the gala picture. Leading department stores put on exhibits of garden furniture and toggery and even added to the gayety with a badminton exhibition.

The Pasadena Shakespeare club had followed the English theme of the flower show appropriately by collecting, with quotations, all the flowers and herbs mentioned in Shakespeare's works, from roses to fern seed.

Some one has been about in the night
Dropping something yellow and bright;
Round little disks like pennies of gold
Smile from the corners where they have rolled.
In the grass, wherever it grows,
The stream of these golden pennies flows.
The giver is Spring—with a lavish hand
She is scattering dandelions over the land.

Three Sterling Art Exhibits About to Close

By Eleanor Jewett.

THERE are several exhibitions which will close shortly that should be enjoyed to the full before they have vanished into the golden mist which invariably enshrouds pleasant events when they have become yesterday's adventure. One of them is the International Water Color exhibit at the Art institute. Another is the brilliant exhibit of recent paintings by Louis Kronberg in the Carson, Pirie, Scott gallery. And the third is the stunning show of Paris scenes and portraits by A. G. Warshawsky in the Anderson gallery, 530 South Michigan avenue.

The last of these to open is Warshawsky's, but being last makes it by no means least. There are some glorious pictures here. Mr. Warshawsky has lived in Paris during the last thirty years of change, years that have seen every possible exaggeration and confusion of painting and sculpture called "art," and he has kept his head through them all. He has not been swayed in his course nor turned from it by any of the pestiferous voices that have asserted from year to year: "This is Art." It seems today that those voices which were loud in derision of informed and skilled creative work just a short time ago have now caught up with Warshawsky [and the others of his caliber continued to turn out sound pictures] and his kind of beautiful and intelligent painting now is art.

However that may be, the fact remains that one gets a thrill from these Paris streets and French peasants of Warshawsky that Matisse and Modigliani never gave one. "Pont St. Michel," "Pont Neuf," the "Pantheon" [seen over a fountain], and "Boulevard St. Michel," bring into instant life memories of Paris in spring. The gray buildings and the gray river, the fresh green trees, the crowded streets and that atmosphere which is the peculiar birthright of Paris, are strongly felt in canvas after canvas.

"The Thaw—Uzerche," is a little picture but one of the most perfect. It has depth, quality, and individuality, and reveals the full extent of the artist's genius. It is a gem of a painting. In a different way the little "Joanna" is equally perfect. The "Breton Mother" is another exquisitely painted head, done with a touch that is reminiscent of Franz Hals.

This exhibition will continue to May 3.

LOUIS KRONBERG has a most intriguing and fascinating exhibition in the Carson, Pirie, Scott gallery to the end of the month. Mr. Kronberg is famous for his magnificent portraits and for his studies of ballet girls. There is in the current exhibit a series of paintings that plays about the activities of a little, serious 14 year old girl, a student of the ballet. Mr. Kronberg shows her at her lesson, resting, having the last touches put to her costume, and working at the bar. She is a most engaging young creature, simple and wholesome—so young and so serious, that she completely wins one's heart. You almost forget in the interest she arouses the ability of the painter who has made her so vivid a personality.

Leo Dabo, a New York artist who lectures on art, wrote this about Mr. Kronberg's painting: "Louis Kronberg's art is a composition wherein a great deal of poetry dresses a great deal of truth." And also: "It is with a strange mixture of realism, of an art based on sound drawing and then on the divine folly of the dance, that Kronberg's art fascinates us. He believes he paints what he sees, yet so incurable is the poet in Louis Kronberg that he actually gives us the impression of an illusion, of the eternal fairy tale."

There is more than just the painting of ballet girls in this exhibit. There are several brilliant portraits rich with glamorous color. No one can paint a Spanish shawl more beautifully than Mr. Kronberg. He never forgets that the eye travels from the face to the throat, the dress, the arms. He paints for composition as much as for the likeness, and he paints [gratefully we acknowledge this] more for the unity of his canvas than its pattern.

When you are visiting this exhibition do not overlook "Repose," the figure of a slender nude against a colorful background. It probably is the most beautiful painting of its kind we have seen in Chicago for years. It is lovely.

The Hobby Collectors' show, Club Woman's bureau, Mandel Brothers, is to continue to April 30 and has many amusing and interesting items. Among the articles are the collections of samplers of James W. Walker, the Currier and Ives prints of Stuyvesant Peabody, and the dry point etchings of Bertha Jaques. Dr. F. P. Thompson is showing a picture made on the back of a sugar cane bag [using dyes made from grasses for paint] of an English Tommy and his horse, done by a native of the east coast of Africa. Another similar work shows a lion hunt. Dr. Thompson acquired these curios on a recent visit to Africa. Two excellent collections of book plates add greatly to the interest of this exhibit.

By the way, boys might be interested in the collection of police badges from all the large cities in the world, some of gold, some of silver, some of metal, and three from China made of cloth, because in China metal is so scarce not even a police official merits a metal badge. Jack Ellis of the Kansas City, Mo., police department wrote letters to all parts of the world in creating his collection.

The latest acquisition of the Vanderpoel Memorial gallery is a portrait of the great Irish painter, Edward Gay. Gay is represented in the Metropolitan museum of New York by "Time and Tide" and his "Summer at Sound Beach" hangs in the Chicago Art institute. Harriet Blackstone painted the portrait, which is to be placed on exhibition in the Vanderpoel gallery Sunday, May 2.

Tennis Bug Bites the Sports Fans in Hot Springs

HOT SPRINGS, VA.

Springlike activities fill this week's calendar at Hot Springs. Of paramount importance is the playing of the seventh annual spring tennis tournament, which will start tomorrow and will continue throughout the week. There will be men's and women's singles, men's and women's doubles, and mixed doubles. It is expected that "Bitsy" Grant will be here, playing in his only spring tournament. Other entries include ranking players: J. Gilbert Hall, Wayne Sabin of California, Martin Buxby of Miami, Pacific Northwest Champion Elwood Cooke, Mace Gwyer, Edward de Gray and Champ Reese. Among the women players are Eunice Dean of San Antonio; Florence le Boutellier, Virginia Rice Johnson, Mary Cootes and Ellen Bates.

Hardly of secondary importance to the tennis tournament is the annual pilgrimage to historic Virginia gardens, made possible by the efforts of the Garden club of Virginia. Garden week in Virginia is from April 26 to May 1. Many of these gardens are easily accessible from Hot Springs—Lexington, Charlottesville, Staunton, James River [south side], Lynchburg, Harrisonburg and Roanoke.

The proceeds from garden week are used for the restoration of grounds and gardens of publicly owned historic places throughout the state. Among them Kenmore, the home of Col. Fielding Lewis and Betty Washington Lewis; Stratford, the home of the Lees and birthplace of Gen. Robert E. Lee; The Manse, at Staunton, the birthplace of the late President Wilson; Wilton, built by William Randolph in 1750; Smith's Fort Plantation, in Surry county, which was given by Powhattan to John Rolfe when he married Pocahontas. John Rolfe, on his return from England, is said to have built the charming, small brick house in 1652.

Among those from the Chicago area now at the springs are Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Durbin, the Weymouth Kirklands, the junior James S. Kempers, Mr. and Mrs. H. I. Markham, Miss Florence Markham, the Hiram Fosters, Mrs. Albert B. Dick, the John I. Shaws, Miss Elizabeth Patterson and the W. J. Foells and daughter.

Japanese Bride Reverses Custom of Wedding Gifts

REVERSING the usual custom of presents for the bride, Miss Yoshiko Tokudaiji distributed 1,500,000 classical Japanese fans as her wedding present to the people of Kyoto. Printed on the fans was a seventeen syllable Japanese poem written by the bride, who recently married Count Kocho Otani, hereditary abbot of 13,000,000 Buddhists.

Shelter Aiding Women Now Is 31 Years Old

A REFUGE originally provided by a woman physician for the unfortunate women whom she encountered in her work, the Chicago Woman's Shelter for 31 years has kept impoverished families together, has helped needy women and unmarried mothers to get on their feet, and has guided underprivileged children to good citizenship.

It was Dr. Jean T. Zimmerman, a physician's daughter, and herself a young physician, who first saw the need for a home for friendless women. The Chicago Rescue Mission, established by her in 1906, under its present title has been located since 1923 at 1516-1518 West Adams street in a fine old mansion of the last century.

BESIDES providing a home for entire families, single women of all ages, and unmarried mothers, the Shelter aids families beyond its walls with food, clothing, and advice. Last year destitute women and children from 28 social agencies in the city were taken into the Shelter and were helped to regain their normal place in the community. A kindergarten, founded in memory of the late Theron Logan, takes care of children too young to go to school.

The monthly meeting of the board of directors which governs the Shelter will occur at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning at 1514 West Adams street. Mrs. Robert W. Balderston is president of the board and Mrs. Christine M. Kuppinger, who was Dr. Zimmerman's assistant for many years, has been superintendent of the Shelter since her death in 1927.

Two of the most important events of the week, the final meeting of the women's division of the Jewish Charities and the annual meeting of the Conference of Jewish Women's Organizations, are being combined in a breakfast and program tomorrow at the Standard club.

The breakfast will be held at 11:30 o'clock under the auspices of the women's division, with a reception beforehand to introduce presidents of member organizations and members of the executive board of the division.

• • •

MISS FRANCES TAUSSIG, executive director of the Jewish Social Service association of New York and formerly prominent in social work in Chicago, will speak on "Jewish Philanthropy—Yesterday and Today." Mrs. Charles P. Schwartz is acting chairman of the women's division.

Mrs. Moses L. Purvin.
[Hendershot Photo.]

The 28th annual conference meeting will follow the breakfast at 2:15 o'clock. Delegates and committee heads will submit reports and Mrs. Moses L. Purvin will speak on "Whither Jewish Women's Clubs?" Mrs. Purvin is trustee of the Chicago public library. Mrs. Harry L. Canmann, president of the conference, will conduct the session.

The Chicago Milk Fund association, organized this winter to provide undernourished children with milk they could not otherwise obtain, is to benefit from a dance pageant to be held the evening of June 6 at the Chicago Civic Opera house.

Some 1,200 Chicago boys and girls, pupils of the First National Institute of Allied Arts, will take part in the production, which has been called "Swing Hi." Included on the program will be an Indian scene featuring a war dance in a mountain camp; an 18th century ballroom scene in which hoop skirted and beruffled dancers will perform the minuet; a modern number called "Symphony in Black and White," and "College Parade," in which five midwestern universities will be represented.

OSCAR WIRTHEIMER and Miss Marie Donnelley respectively are directing the music and the dancing for the performance. The Milk Fund association is sponsored by a number of prominent clubwomen, physicians, and civic leaders, with Mrs. Burnett D. Warner, former president of the Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs, as president.

Mrs. Ruth Mannow Olsson was elected president of the American Daughters of Sweden at its recent annual meeting. This organization was founded by the late Othelia Myhrman to further the civic and educational interests of women of Swedish-American origin.

[Sallman Photo.]

Serving with Mrs. Olsson will be Mrs. Rena Elrod, first vice president; Miss Edith Mattson, second vice president; Mrs. Alma Swane, third vice president and historian; Miss Anita Engberg, recording secretary; Miss Selma Nelson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Hedwig Melinder, financial secretary, and Miss Elin Burgeson, treasurer.

Mrs. Olsson is a member of the Alliance of Business and Professional Women of Chicago, the Loop Zonta club, and the ladies' auxiliary of the Swedish club of Chicago.

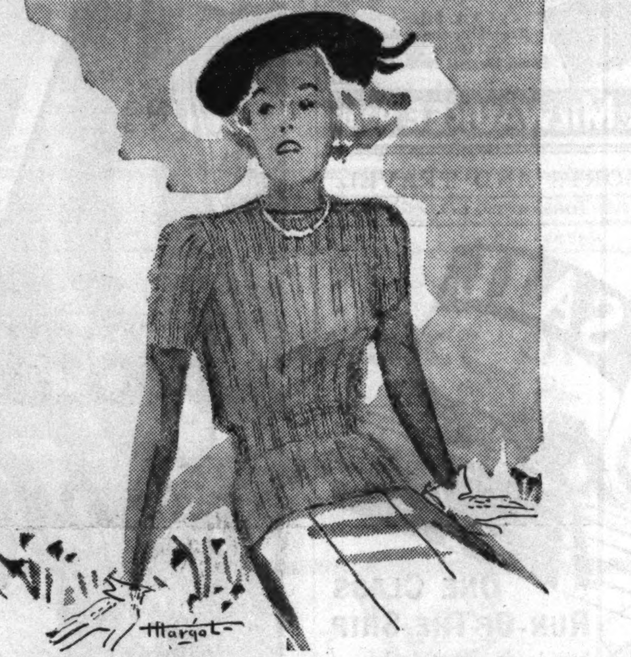
Knitted-In Beltline Novel Touch for Sports Sweater



By Jean Macdonald.

SOME of the new summer sport sweaters are adding a touch of variety to the beltline by including the belt in the sweater. With a longer line at the hip, the belt may be easily knitted into the blouse to create that slim, snug fitting line for which every woman strives.

The soft green, angora sweater illustrated today is knitted in a simple pattern stitch throughout. The belt line is knitted in ribbing of knit two, purl two. This ribbing motif is carried out at the shoulder line with two inches of the same forming a yoke. The high neck is simple to make and becoming to almost every woman. The sleeves are slightly puffed, and narrow bands of ribbing form the cuffs.

With the attractive, fine angoras on the market today, it is not an extravagance to purchase enough of this yarn for a blouse or sweater, since manufacturers have been able to reduce the price of their angora yarns. Cool green and blues are ideal to wear with white two and three piece suits.

HOW TO ORDER

If you wish instructions for knitting the angora blouse with knitted-in belt illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean Macdonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

It is necessary that the following measurements be included:

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, July 4, 1888.

DEAR JULIA: You are in Newport, I suppose, by now. I hope you are finding it cool there. Chicago never is really uncomfortable, for our lake breezes fan the air, but I should be glad to be in a cleaner place. Now that we are a city of about 800,000 people—the estimate I saw lately—the smoke from our great factories spreads like a dark blanket over what was once the "Garden city." But then, as Will says, we should welcome the smoke, since it is only an ugly form of gold.

We attended the Theodor Thomas outdoor concert, first of the season, this week, and enjoyed the fine music. The sale of tickets is larger this year than ever before. The concerts have the advantage of being managed by Mr. Milward Adams, an expert in his work.

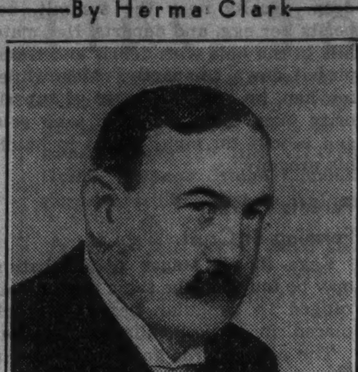
Mr. Adams has been the leading spirit in organizing the Thomas concerts, making them the great musical events of Milwaukee, Cincinnati, and Chicago.

His wife, Florence James Adams, is no less remarkable. An exponent of the Delsarte method, which she studied under Steele Mackaye, she is also a graduate of the famous Boston School of Oratory, and has been a pupil of Henry N. Hudson, the great Shakespearean scholar, and also of Mme. Rudersdorf of New York. Mrs. Adams sat near me at the Thomas concert and I asked her about her work, finding her most interesting. Martha Jr. has been taking lessons of her at her school in Central Music hall. Mme. Rudersdorf has been so successful that she isn't able to accept all who apply as pupils.

Do you remember Gen. McClurg, whose book store is one of the leading ones in the west? He sat next us at the Thomas concert and we had a pleasant visit during the intermission. He said that last winter during the opera season one of our fashionable women entered the store and asked for a book on the opera. The obliging clerk inquired what opera she wanted, and she replied that she believed it was called "The Libretto." Another customer asked for Dickens' "Enoch Arden." Gen. McClurg said the clerk was tactful enough to tell her that it was out of print. Still another inquiry was for Longfellow's "Lucilly."

Gen. McClurg told us that Howell's novels weren't selling so well nowadays, and that in poetry, James Whitcomb Riley was the most popular. That pleased me, for Riley is so distinctively American, blazing a new trail in literature, not just copying English classical types.

Have you read Amelie Rives' "The Quick or the Dead?" I heard that the book was so successful that a publisher offered her $25,000 for her next work, whatever it might be. Gen. McClurg ridiculed that statement, saying that no publisher would take such a chance, though he thought she had great promise and probably would do even better work in future.



Milward Adams, manager of the Auditorium theater for more than 20 years.

Excuse this large blot. A great fireworks piece burst near our house just then, causing me to jump. I shall never spend another Fourth of July in the city. Too noisy and disagreeable! We didn't dare take the horses out for a drive, but walked up Lake Shore drive and watched the fireworks being set off in the Potter Palmer yard, where Mrs. Palmer was entertaining a group of children for her small nephew, Ulysses Grant, son of Frederick Dent Grant. Her niece, Julia Dent Grant, helped receive the little guests. Mrs. Palmer is devoted to the children of her sister and has them with her as much as possible.

Much love,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOTNOTES.

Millard Adams [1857-1923] will be remembered as manager of the Auditorium theater for many years.

Many letters have come to us from readers who recall vividly the Republican convention of 1888.

Charles Ulysses Gordon writes that he sat on the platform next to William Walter Phelps of New Jersey. Charles M. Moderwell, a student in an Ohio college, came to Chicago on a train chartered by John Sherman of Ohio, a candidate for the nomination for the presidency. Mrs. C. B. Reed, Downers Grove, remembers, as a child, attending the convention, remaining away from school for the purpose. Mrs. E. Murray, Evanston, remembers a concert held in the Auditorium the night before the convention, when old songs were played and the audience sang. Mrs. Murray owns a tiny log cabin pin which her brother wore during the campaign. Mrs. Thomas Farrell, Oak Park, writes that her father was present at the convention and described the excitement to her.

Rufus F. Chapin informs us: "Impressions associated with the convention: The delightful odor of fresh pine lumber; the climbing of endless flights of ladder like stairs to reach my seat; the ghastly light from many spluttering arc lights; a veritable sea of faces.

"So enthused was I by this convention that I assisted in the formation of a Harrison and Morton Marching club, with headquarters in Brown's hall over Mr. Brown's livery stable on West Madison street, opposite Ann street. Our uniforms consisted of white cotton duck trousers with red stripes on the side, blue shirts, with H. & M. on the breast; silver oilcloth capes and hats, and blow torches, called flambeaus. Our drilling was done mostly on the macadam pavement of Ashland avenue, and our chief tactics were to march past the house of Carter Harrison Sr., and let out a few lusty Republican hoots! Them was the days!"

Even Saloons Close Sundays in Melbourne

By Mason Warner.

MELBOURNE, Victoria, Australia.—This city of more than a million people is a shining example of Sabbath observance as it can be done where there is a will to do it.

Staid and dour Edinburgh is free and easy of a Sunday compared with Melbourne. Of course, the saloons are closed—shut up tight, no fooling! So are all stores, including drug [chemists' shops]. No barbers work. Doors are locked on confectionery and tobacco shops. No fruit stands display merchandise.

Restaurants and cafés are not open; hotel dining rooms are the only places where the hungry traveling public can dine. Even the attractive and innocent fresh milk bars take a day off. There is no place where one can buy a package of cigarets, a soft drink, fruit, or candy. Naturally, as soon as you awaken to the fact that you cannot get these items, you want one or all of them, but there are no bootleggers, and the only thing to do is to wait patiently for Monday morning.

Like a Cemetery at Midnight.

No newspapers are published on Sunday in Melbourne. "Trams," or street cars, do not run until 1 o'clock in the afternoon. A few lonely looking pedestrians move about the silent streets. A cemetery at midnight is as gay and sprightly.

But there are compensations. While some train schedules are deleted, there are a number of excursions provided by railways, river boats, bus lines, and government tourist bureau sedan cars.

Australians in the mass are an easy living, free spending people and are more given to relaxation and recreation than are Americans. Amassing a huge fortune is not a popular aim. They work sanely, do not scrimp to save, and enjoy life to the limit. Perhaps we could learn something to our advantage from a study of the Australian philosophy of life.

I am wondering if such strict observance of the Sabbath day is caused by a deep feeling of devout reverence or by the unanimous demand of the humblest workers for their day of rest, too. Anyhow, everybody who can do so leaves the city on pleasure bent from Saturday noon to Monday morning.

Where Australia's Queer Fauna Are Shown.

The Melbourne zoo in Royal park is open on Sunday afternoon, and electric trains make it easy to visit. An unusually complete collection of wild animals from Africa, Asia, Europe, and the two Americas is to be seen there, but this zoo's chief claim to distinction is the outstanding showing of the marvelous fauna of Australia.

In addition to kangaroos, wallabies, koalas, wombats, bandicoots, frill necked and barbing lizards, emus, cassowaries and kookaburras, the zoo has such rare exhibits as the echidna, or spiny anteater, brush turkeys, or bird mound builders, and a platypus, or ornithorynchus—strangest of all living creatures.

Australia's bearded lizard, rather a fearsome looking creature, but quite harmless.

The little platypus is not a practical exhibit, for it is so timid, nervous, and frail that it is not displayed for public view. It remains in seclusion in its burrow, hidden underground. The Sydney zoo has a temperamental platypus of the same retiring nature. But I learned where there is one not so shy and fearsome, and I am going to see it and write about it in next week's letter.

The echidna is a clumsy and ungainly creature, about 18 inches long, and is covered with hair and short, sharp quills, like a porcupine. It has no teeth, but a long and slim tongue protrudes from a projecting, pointed snout. The tongue is covered with a sticky fluid. The animal pushes its tongue into an ant hole and draws it back into its mouth with adhering ants.

A Ball Shape for Protection.

Equipped wih sharp digging claws, the echidna can dig into the sand in a hurry to disappear from enemies. Caught unawares, it rolls into a ball shape, with his protecting quills pointed outward in every direction. Zoo attendants handle the animal very carefully.

The echidna is one of two surviving monotremes, or egg laying mammals, that were once common in far back geological ages. The platypus is the other so-called "living fossil." The echidna's egg is soft shelled, small, and cream colored. A single one is laid and deposited in the pouch, where it is carried for some months, with life sustained and growth promoted by milk extracted somehow from its mother's glands. When the young reaches a stage where it is covered with coarse hair the mother leaves it in a sheltered nook, where it remains semihibernating for a time. It is doubted if the mother returns to her offspring.

A bit wild, fidgety, and fluttersome, nevertheless brush turkeys take kindly to confined life in the Melbourne zoo, where they build their mounds, lay their eggs, and rear their young for the entertainment and education of multitudes of visitors.

Huge Natural Incubators.

Brush turkeys are big enough and good enough for a Christmas dinner. They build immense mounds for incubators to hatch their eggs. These mounds are pyramid shaped, four to six feet tall, and forty feet in circumference. The zoo management provides the materials—sand, dirt, sticks, twigs, leaves, and decaying vegetable matter—and the turkeys do the building.

Seventeen young birds emerged from a mound one season. In another year, when several birds were kept in the enclosure, 56 eggs were deposited in the huge mound, but, owing to an insufficient quantity of vegetable matter being furnished, the hotbed fermentation failed to develop enough heat to incubate the eggs.

From twelve to sixteen eggs are deposited in a mound when occupied by a single pair of brush turkeys. But the birds are social minded, and five or six hens may lay sixty or more eggs in one structure. The hen scratches a hole eight or ten inches deep, usually near the summit, deposits her egg, and departs. Her mate fills in the hole with débris and tramples it down compactly. Meanwhile, mayhap, he enjoys a sense of superiority over the male emu, who sets and broods for eight weeks to hatch his progeny.

Parents Prevent Forming of Crust.

Eggs in all stages of incubation may be found in the same mound—arranged in irregular tiers, and each placed in a perpendicular position.

The parent birds go there frequently during the period of incubation, and some naturalists are of the opinion that these visits are for the purpose of watching and preventing the top from forming a crust too hard for the young to break through. On emergence, the newly born brush turkey is partly feathered, nimble footed, and equipped with beak and claws strong enough to enable him to fend for himself.

De Rosa in Charge.

Jimmy de Rosa is the new manager of the Chicago office of C. I. T., succeeding R. A. Savorian, who has resigned.

Passport Officers to Expedite Trafic

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, April 24.—[Special.]—To avoid delay for passengers sailing on the Queen Mary on May 4 to see the coronation ceremonies, arrangements have been made to send three British passport officers here.

It is expected that the liner will have 675 cabins, 500 tourist, and 600 third class passengers. It will go to Southampton without calling at Cherbourg to catch the morning tide. After it leaves this port the three officers will start examining the passports, so that all passengers will be able to land immediately at Southampton.

Ships to Liverpool.

George Gleaves of Liverpool, manager of the Cunard-White Star Line's cabin department, was a Chicago visitor last week. His company, he said, now has a large fleet of 20,000 ton ships plying between New York and his home city.

ESCORTED TOURS

DETOUR

By Frederic Babcock.

WILLIAM R. BOYD, Chicago clubman and western head of a national publishing house, flew to Manila and return this winter, and when he got back he had so much to talk about that he didn't have time to do much of anything else. . . . So he sat himself down and wrote out his story, and had it printed, along with some of the pictures he took en route.

Now—says Veronica Collins, who relays the story to this department—when people ask about his flight all he has to do is to hand them the printed recital. . . . If they're really intrigued, they can take it home and read it. . . . If they aren't, at least they don't have to sit around and listen and say, every once in a while, "How interesting!"

● Mr. Boyd's journey was made on the Philippine Clipper. . . . Copies of his booklet, appearing last week, reveal that he has the gift of making things sound exciting. . . . Take this passage, for instance:

"In ancient times there was a sultan of India who had a beautiful niece by the name of Princess Nouronnihar. The princess had three suitors whose names were Houssain, Ali, and Ahmed. The sultan, unable to decide which of the suitors was the most worthy, promised the princess in marriage to the one who brought him 'the most extraordinary rarity.' Prince Ahmed, the youngest and handsomest of the princes, returned after a year's search of the countries of the world with the Magic Carpet. The Magic Carpet had this virtue—that whoever sat upon it was transported 'withersoever he desired without being stopped by any obstacles.'

"The fantastic imagery of the ancients becomes an actuality today in the Pan-American Clipper ships. Thirteen thousand feet over the Pacific ocean, a thousand miles from any land, fifteen human beings and 52,000 pounds of dead weight being propelled through space—limitless space never before penetrated by man; four motors droning through the night picking up those tiny dots of land out of millions of square miles of water with the accuracy of the finest rifle; joined to two continents, the islands of the Pacific, and numerous ships at sea by that fine thread of radio which at times seems the only tangible in a strange and unfamiliar world."

● After recounting the thrill of each new discovery, Mr. Boyd reserves his best descriptive passage for the finish. . . . Witness:

"We landed in San Francisco on a cold and foggy day—rumor about the weather to the contrary. I caught the plane for the east and four hours later was grounded at Salt Lake City for the night on account of the snow. Next morning we got as far as Cheyenne and were delayed several hours more on account of the weather. From Cheyenne we flew to Omaha and arrived in a howling blizzard. So all the passengers were put aboard the train and we limped on in to Chicago. There was a taxi strike, and hoodlums were overturning cabs and blacking passengers' eyes. A biting cold wind was whipping off Lake Michigan; snow flurries and rain were beginning to fall.

"I screamed for the warm, friendly, coral beach at Midway Island, for the gooney birds and their superhuman antics, for the droning of the four motors of the Clipper ship, for moonlight nights 13,000 feet over the Pacific, for the isolation of Wake Island, for the coral reefs unnamed where huge swells of tons of water break and spend themselves in useless effort, for a quiet meal at the mess house of Guam, for breadfruit trees and papaya and mangoes, for the first sight of land after 20 hours aloft, for the flash of the spray on a choppy take-off, and for the swish of the water on the surface of the bay as the Clipper comes to rest again in a safe harbor."

THEY SWIM THERE IN ALL SEASONS

A view of the pool and surroundings at one of the luxurious hotels in Bermuda.

Predicts Tourist Boom.

DENVER.—[U.P.]—Colorado's tourist business will be double that of last year, according to estimates of Allen B. Spencer of the Denver convention and tourist bureau. He estimates that tourists will spend between 35 and 50 millions.

TIPS TO TOURISTS

What's your travel problem? Address queries regarding where to go, how to get there, costs, and accommodations to the Travelers' Guide, Chicago Tribune, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Is it true that all the hotel accommodations in London have been booked for the week of the coronation?—G. S.

No. The latest word from the Coronation Accommodation committee, formed with the approval of the government to assist visitors to London, is that nearly 75,000 rooms are available for the big week. These range from rooms in private homes at $1.25 a night to luxurious apartments and houses in fashionable quarters. There is still space in boarding houses, hotels and service flats with modern equipment.

Is Westminster abbey now open to the public?—F. G. M.

No. It has been closed to permit alterations for the coronation on May 12.

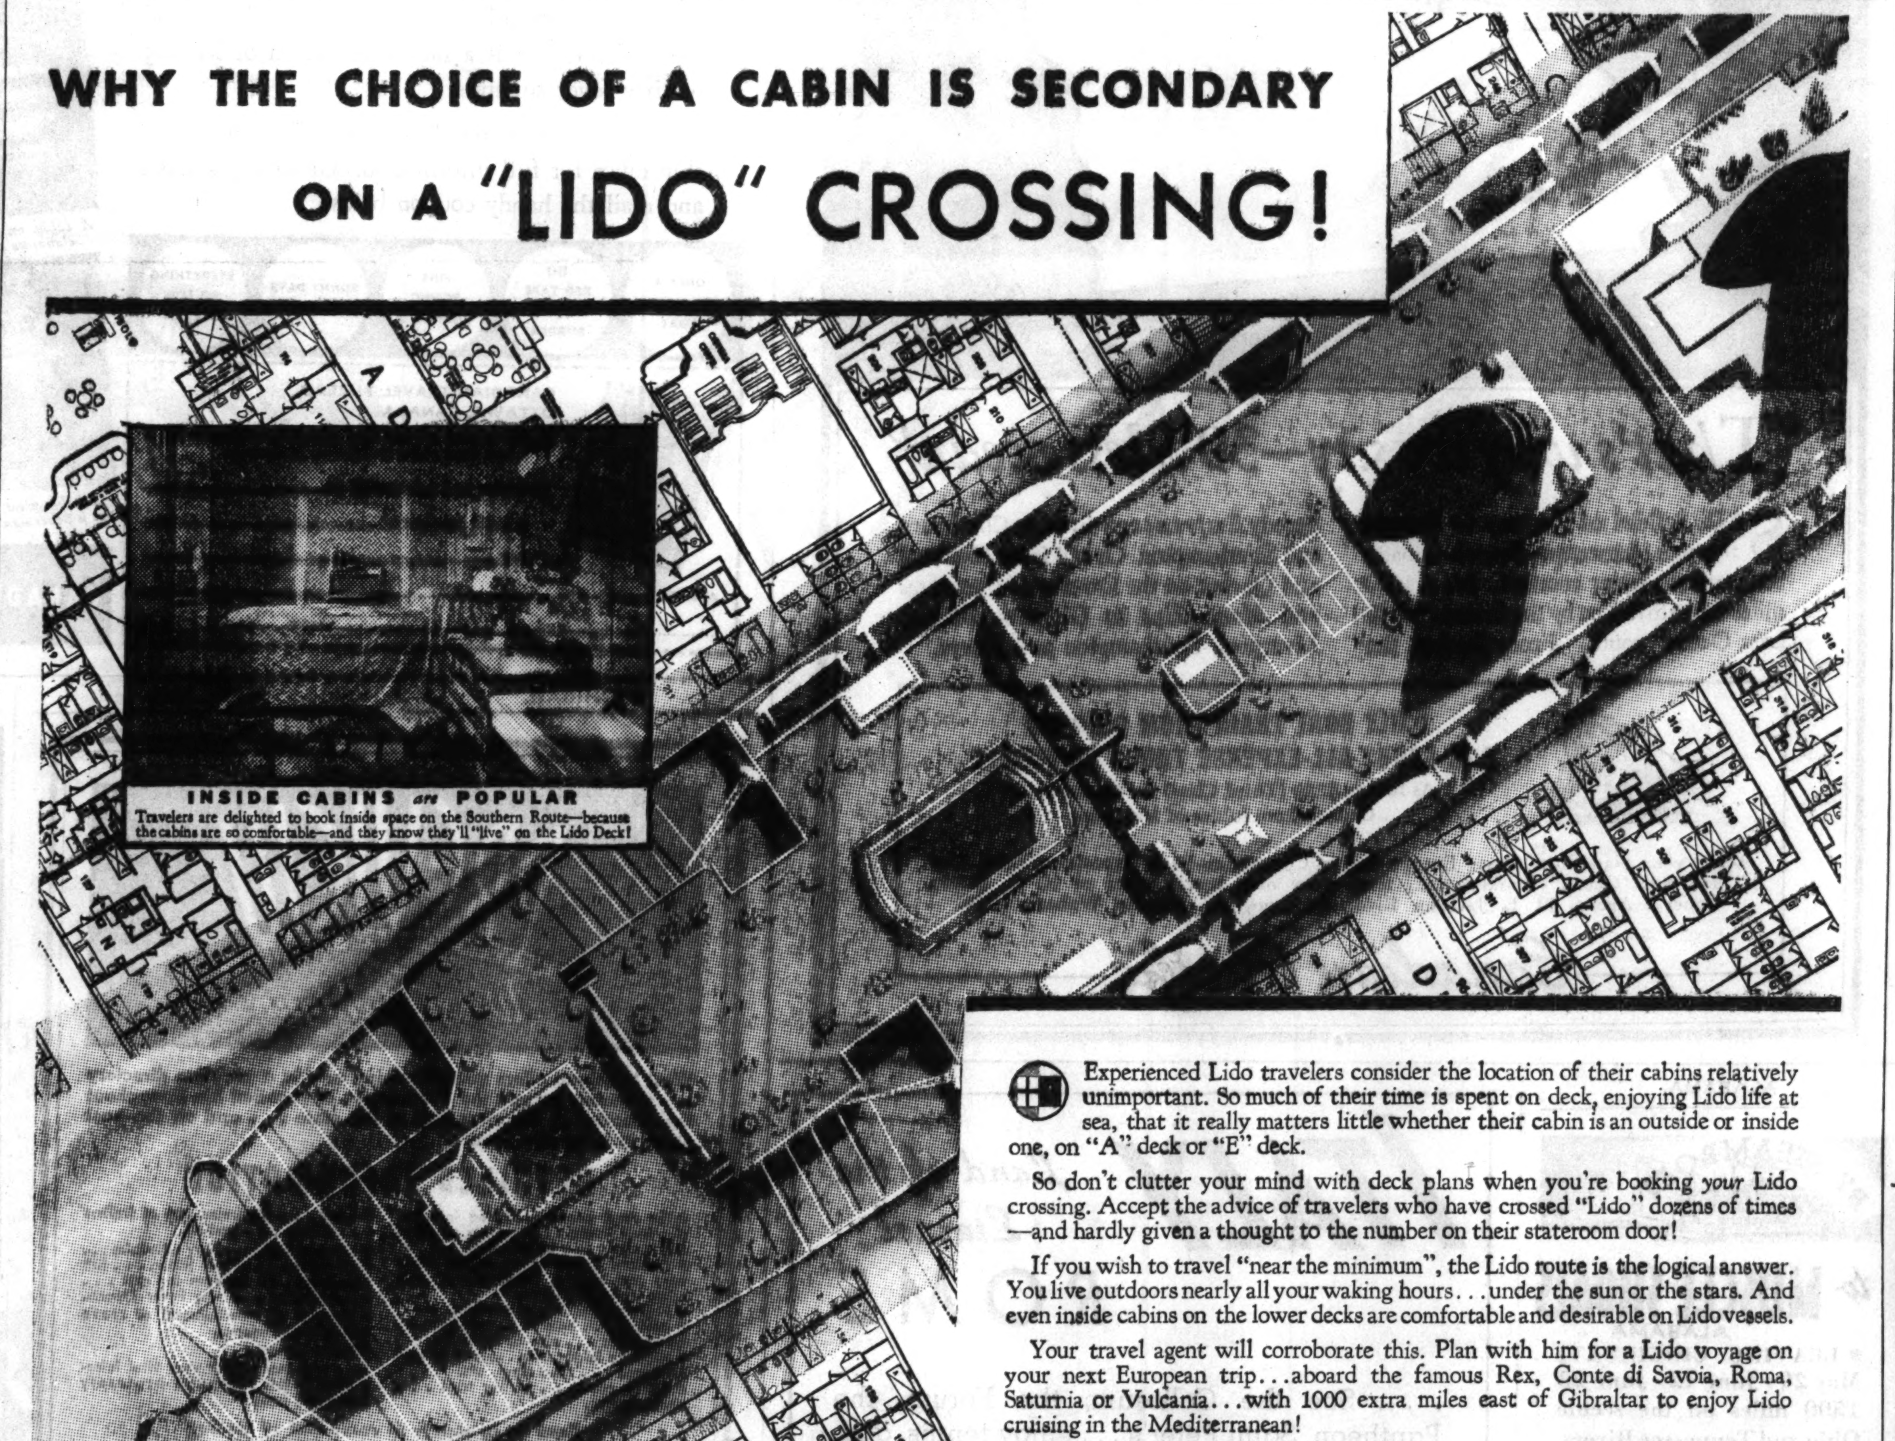
WHY THE CHOICE OF A CABIN IS SECONDARY ON A "LIDO" CROSSING!



INSIDE CABINS are POPULAR

Travelers are delighted to book inside space on the Southern Route—because the cabins are so comfortable—and they know they'll "live" on the Lido Deck!

Experienced Lido travelers consider the location of their cabins relatively unimportant. So much of their time is spent on deck, enjoying Lido life at sea, that it really matters little whether their cabin is an outside or inside one, on "A" deck or "E" deck.

So don't clutter your mind with deck plans when you're booking your Lido crossing. Accept the advice of travelers who have crossed "Lido" dozens of times—and hardly given a thought to the number on their stateroom door!

If you wish to travel "near the minimum", the Lido route is the logical answer. You live outdoors nearly all your waking hours. . . under the sun or the stars. And even inside cabins on the lower decks are comfortable and desirable on Lido vessels.

Your travel agent will corroborate this. Plan with him for a Lido voyage on your next European trip. . . aboard the famous Rex, Conte di Savoia, Roma, Saturnia or Vulcania. . . with 1000 extra miles east of Gibraltar to enjoy Lido cruising in the Mediterranean!

The leading TRAVEL AGENTS in your city are our representatives. Consult them freely—their services are gratis. Or apply 333 No. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Phone Randolph 9257.

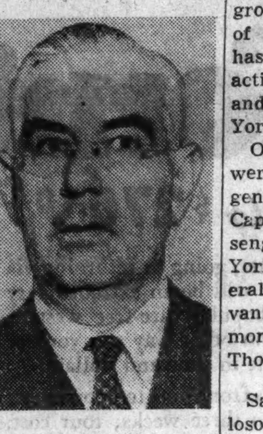
Cuba to Revive Bull Fighting as a Tourist Lure

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, April 24.—[Special.]—The Cuban government plans to spend $1,000,000 in a four year program to develop tourist trade and travel. This was announced here today by Señor Samuel T. Tolon, Havana business man and government representative, who is touring this country in the interests of Cuba's tourist business.



Senor Samuel T. Tolon.

The campaign will be launched on July 1, he said, adding that a feature of the program will be the revival of bull fighting in Havana.

"Private American and Cuban capital," he said, "has already launched a plan for the revival of bull fighting next winter for the first time since 1895. An arena will be built in Havana and will be under the direction of Sidney Franklin, Brooklyn toreador.

"Havana also is planning to build a new dog racing track and a new 18 hole municipal golf course. Considerable American and Cuban capital is to be spent within the next six months at Varadera beach to build one of the most palatial yacht clubs in the world.

"With our new tourist program under way we expect during the 1937-'38 winter season to have the greatest tourist rush in Cuba's history, bringing in business of well over $100,000,000."

Railroad Dinner.

The second annual dinner under the auspices of the Central and Western Passenger associations will be held at the Knickerbocker hotel tomorrow evening. Between 800 and 1,000 railroad men will hear Ernest J. Gallmeyer of Fort Wayne, Ind., talk on salesmanship and see a demonstration of modern methods of promoting the sale of tickets.

GOING SOMEWHERE?

AT last the English and the Irish have got together on a friendly basis—at least in so far as their railroads are concerned. T. R. Dester, general trafic manager of the Associated British and Irish Railways, told about it at a luncheon at the Knickerbocker hotel Tuesday. The occasion was the formal opening of the group's new Chicago office at 333 North Michigan avenue, with L. T. Jones in charge.

Six roads are represented in the association, said Mr. Dester. The growth of their business as a result of the tourist trade from America has enabled them to extend their activities to Chicago and Los Angeles, and to enlarge their offices in New York.

Other speakers at the luncheon were Lewis Bernays, British consul general; Ralph Caples, head of the Caples company; D. M. Bowman, passenger trafic manager of the New York Central; C. E. McCullough, general passenger agent of the Pennsylvania; Ed Schlottman of the Baltimore and Ohio; Edward O'Connor of Thomas Cook & Son, and Mr. Jones.

Sam Campbell, known as the philosopher of the forest, will give a travel talk, with colored pictures, at the Fair store at 11 a. m. Friday. His subject is "The Glory of the North Woods." His movies depict both the flora and the fauna of Wisconsin.

The airship Hindenburg is about to begin the second season of its North Atlantic service. It will leave Frankfort May 3 and its first departure from Lakehurst is set for May 6. Among the passengers on the westbound voyage will be Col. Nelson Morris of Chicago.

Figures received from John Lodwick of the St. Petersburg Chamber of Commerce show that Chicago leads all other cities in the number of visitors to that Florida resort. This winter there were 1,437, as compared with 1,148 from New York City and 1,061 from Detroit.

Over W-G-N Tuesday night Tom Wall of the Canadian Pacific told about the summertime wonders of Alaska. Contrary to the impression of those who have never been there, he said, Alaska is a land of flowers, lakes, and waterfalls, instead of ice and snow and dreariness. He related that the touring season will open next month.

Chicago railroad offices and tourist agencies are completing plans for the annual exodus to Louisville, where the Kentucky Derby will be run on Saturday of next week. In a number of cases the special trains will provide for stops at French Lick Springs.

Beginning May 13 there is to be a 60 per cent railroad fare reduction in Germany, without regard to the length of the visitor's stay there. In former years only those travelers who remained in Germany at least seven days benefited by the reduction.

Speedy round the world trips by sea and air will be pushed, beginning this summer. The Cunard-White Star Line has been named general agent in the United States for Imperial Airways. Officials of the steamship company relate that it is now possible, by using the Queen Mary across the Atlantic and boarding a plane on the other side, to circumnavigate the globe in eighteen days.

Miss Margaret K. Stewart, travel representative of the Santa Fe railway, will give an illustrated lecture, "Grand Canyon and Northern Arizona," before the members of Psi Delta Sigma, meeting at the Congress hotel Thursday evening, April 29.

Faster and more luxurious air service from this city westward will be inaugurated next month, when United Air Lines places Skylounge type Mainliners on its Chicago-California division. The new planes, similar to those which have been operating on the Chicago-New York division since January, will cut the running time from Chicago to the Pacific coast to 10 hours 52 minutes. Passengers leaving here shortly before midnight will have breakfast in either Los Angeles or San Francisco.

Word comes from Wisconsin that the buds are bursting into leaf there, the ducks, geese, and songbirds have returned, spring is in flower, and the vacation season is getting under way. The trout season will open in four northern counties next Saturday, the muskellunge season will begin May 25, and the bass fishing will be on by June 20.

A large group of Chicago advertising men and women will sail on the Columbus June 26, following the convention of the Advertising Federation of America, for the Continental Advertising association convention, to be held in Paris July 5 to 10. Kenneth Laird, president of the Chicago Federated Advertising club, says the local delegation, in company with those from other parts of the country, will view the Paris exposition and then go on tours all over Europe. These tours will be under the auspices of the American Express company.

Chicagoans on Their Way to the Coronation

AMONG the Chicagoans embarking Wednesday on the Queen Mary to attend the coronation were Mr. and Mrs. Francis Neilson, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Crane II., Mr. and Mrs. J. Paul Smith, who will afterward visit Paris, Berlin, and Switzerland, and Mrs. Percy C. Smith and Mrs. Mabel Hoffner, who will make a three months' tour of the British Isles.

Also sailing on the Queen Mary were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Nett, Mrs. Francine Lawrence, Mrs. C. K. Glycart, Mrs. Lillian Bremson, Miss Rae Glasser, Miss Phyllis Evans, Mrs. Annie J. Murray, Miss Grace S. Heron, and Mrs. Tillie E. Rosenfield, all of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Harrison of Attica, Ind., and Miss Margaretta Mackie of Clarinda, Ia.

Sail from Canadian Ports.

Week-end sailings from Montreal and Quebec had a number of Chicagoans bound for the coronation. The Duchess of York, christened by Queen Elizabeth soon after her marriage, cleared from Montreal Friday carrying Mr. and Mrs. Howard Vincent O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. MacLachlan, Miss Kathleen Bell, Miss Mary Wadell, Mrs. Jeanie Lauriston, W. J. W. Leach, Mrs. Sarah Wilderspin, Frank Wilderspin, Mrs. John Perring, and Mrs. Ellen Panes. The Empress of Australia, sailing from Quebec Saturday, took Mr. and Mrs. Albert Panowski, Mrs Henry Baker, and J. A. d'Amour.

Mrs. Edwin Smeeth and Mrs. Irwin S. Rosenfels left on the Ile de France yesterday for a six months' tour of Europe. Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Warren, on the same ship, will attend the coronation and then spend three months on the continent. Fellow passengers were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Raab, who will take in the Paris exposition and then tour the art galleries of Europe; Mr. and Mrs. Norman Newman, who will tour France, Germany, Switzerland, and Italy, and R. K. Mangon, who will visit Russia. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Thwaits and Mr. and Mrs. George B. Baldwin of Milwaukee, and Julius Fodor of La Porte, Ind., likewise were on the Ile de France.

To Return on the Hindenburg.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Owsley, who sailed last Sunday on the Bremen, will take to the air for their return voyage. They will fly from Frankfort May 22 on the Hindenburg. Also on the Bremen were Mrs. James H. Tatman, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Swanson, Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Brown, Mrs. G. Padley, J. Herman Theilig, Miss Emma Kuepper, Mrs. M. Gardner, Miss P. Gardner, Miss R. Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Walker, Mrs. Raymond Kirk, Roy Osgood, W. A. Keightley, Miss Anne Swanson, L. G. Buss, and Burt D. Stevens.

Leaving on the Hamburg were Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Blackloch, D. C. Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. Claude S. Beal, Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Forke, and Carl A. Giesbert. On the Hansa, sailing Wednesday night, were Miss Helen J. Andrae and Mrs. Emily K. Andrae.

Lester B. Struthers, Frank and Ralph Springer, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Baldwin, Mrs. Eleanore Leslie, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Fenner, and Miss Corrinne Hardesty were aboard the Roma when it sailed Tuesday.

Accompanied by Their Autos.

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Wandrach took their car with them when they sailed Wednesday on the Manhattan. They will attend the coronation and then motor through England, France, Germany, and Italy. Mr. and Mrs. James Flett also took their car and will use it for a tour of Europe. Mrs. Russell Wallace and her daughter, Elaine, who plan to visit the Pyrenees before going to Vienna; Mrs. Jennie Vogel, on her way to the coronation; Mrs. Nelson W. Wagner, Mrs. Anna S. Krauch, Miss Mary Hickey, Miss Frieda C. Rath, and Miss Mary L. Coolidge were other passengers on the Manhattan. Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Sherman of Evanston left Thursday on the City of Havre.

On the Transylvania when it set out for Europe Friday were Mrs. Elizabeth Irvine, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bulger, Mrs. Anna Hocum, Miss Elizabeth Lowry, Mrs. G. E. Stephenson, Miss Bridget O'Donnell, James Goulden, Mrs. Rebecca Lyon, Mrs. Margaret G. Grant, Mrs. W. O. Brackett and her children, Joanna and Thomas, and Robert McKeown.

Plan Lengthy European Tours.

Mr. and Mrs. Ames Penfield, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Jennings, and Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Williams, who left yesterday on the Conte di Savoia, will make lengthy tours of Europe. Paris Cruise to Call at Twenty Ports in Europe

WITH most of the eastbound trans-Atlantic liners booked to capacity or near capacity throughout the late spring and early summer, many Americans are turning to the cruise ships as the best means of seeing Europe.

In Chicago last week Marston Leonard, an executive of the home office of Raymond-Whitcomb in Boston, related that one of the cruises attracting particular attention this year is that of the S. S. Paris. In the course of a 32 day journey the French liner will pay calls at twenty ports in eleven countries, beginning at Ponta Delgada in the Azores and ending at Havre. It will follow the shores of France and the British Isles northward, cross the North sea to the Norwegian fjords, and then sail southward along Scandinavia, Germany, and Holland. Shore excursions will carry the passengers far inland.

Last summer the Paris was chartered by Raymond-Whitcomb to blaze a new cruise trail to western Europe. This year, based on last year's experience, a number of changes have been made. Germany, Holland, Wales, and the Azores have been added to the itinerary.

The 34,569 ton Paris, Mr. Leonard pointed out, is the largest ship scheduled to go on a cruise from America to any part of Europe this summer. It will sail from New York June 26.

THE VOICE OF THE TRAVELER

Letters regarding travel conditions and experiences are welcomed. Please keep them brief. Address: Travel Editor, Chicago Tribune.

DRIVING TO YELLOWSTONE.

Chicago, April 20.—To the Travel Editor: In reply to the reader who, in last SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE, asked for information on a motor trip to Yellowstone park:

I would suggest that the trip be made via the Black Hills of South Dakota. The scenery is delightful in the hills. There are some interesting rock formations and caves to visit at Rapid City. Would advise entrance via Cody.

In Yellowstone the motorist may camp at any one of the splendid sites reserved for automobile tourists. There is a good deal of walking to be done for those who wish to explore the park, and I would advise good strong walking shoes and warm clothing.

For the return, drive through Grand Teton National park en route to Rocky Mountain National park and Colorado Springs. Salt Lake City is also highly interesting, but this would take more time.

Hotel reservations are at a premium during the summer. If the tourist desires hotel reservations, they should be made in advance both in Yellowstone and Colorado. RAMONA GIBBONS HAYES.

HELP WANTED.

Chicago, April 18.—To the Travel Editor: I am anxious to hear from any one who has made the trip around South America, and especially some one who has taken the Cuzco—Lake Titicaca-La Paz excursion. Is it worth missing all of Chile in order to take this trip and then descend by Trans-Andean railroad to Buenos Aires? Or better to return to Lima and thence down the coast? I am also debating whether to take the southern lake region trip [in July or August] or fly over the Andes straight from Valparaiso to Buenos Aires. All these questions because I can't find any one who has experienced the trip and can give me first hand information. Can your Sunday column help me? ADAH-LOUISE VOSS.

HER TRAVELING DAYS ARE OVER.

Chicago, April 4.—To the Travel Editor: Will you put my name on your "shut-in list" to receive cards from travelers who would like to send cards from anywhere in the world? I am paralyzed and my traveling days are over except in my thoughts. I am 82 years old, but would enjoy receiving cards so very much, as I have been a good traveler in the past.

MRS. H. M. STRINGHAM,
6814 North Ashland boulevard.

OF PLACES SHE'LL NEVER SEE.

Whitelaw, Wis., April 13.—To the Travel Editor: Is there any traveler interested enough to send cards, literature, or even an occasional letter to a sanatarium shut-in? I would appreciate it very much if I could hear of places which I probably shall never see. I am 21 years of age and have been in a sanatarium for more than a year. I'll be grateful if you will put me on your "shut-in" list.

Exhibitionism Embarrassing to an Escort

Every day there is presented in the feature columns of the Chicago Tribune a stimulating article by Miss Blake, who lends friendly counsel on a wide variety of common problems.

By Doris Blake.

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Syndicate, Inc.]

THE scene was a night club, where today it is quite possible to find, on occasion, some of the best people along with some of the worst.

The scene in which we want to present a picture of a girl on a bad tempered binge was a night club, and a nice night club. The girl, or woman, we should say, since her brittleness of voice, dress, and manner totaled her up to 30, at least, although under sweeter circumstances she may have been judged much younger, followed her escort past a certain table at which was seated a man friend of her escort. The seated one called out "Hello" to the man, adding another to the fair escort, in which instance it was a case of mistaken identity. But the woman resented the familiar tone and stopped at the table long enough to make a fiercely cutting remark. Her escort maneuvered to bring the woman back and present her, possibly in a better light.

ANYWAY, on invitation they drew up chairs to the table along with the man who Helloed the woman mistakenly, and his party. The woman sat there, after the man explained his mistake and apologized, and glowered, then burst forth with a volley of abuse that was rather terrifying. She wasn't used to be accosted by strange men and she hated being there because one never knew into what she was going to run.

Now, if they weren't all stone sober it would be another story. But the woman was so obviously bidding for a spotlight and for more and more apologies and more and more attention to appease her injured feeling that it soon became a pathetic bore. Conversation took another turn and back she would come with her grudge, until one man announced, in one of those whispered asides that erroneously become a loud vocal blast: "Heaven help the poor wretch that draws that one!"

No. She didn't march off in a huff. Her trick was called and her "act" collapsed. At once she began trying to please. But it would take a year of pleasing, at least, to get that first ugly tempered impression washed out of the minds of those present. Spoiled, bad tempered, and a meanie, coupled with the intention to hog the limelight, as testified to by the woman's so-called smart quips, until they palled with the loud whisper.

ANOTHER occasion and another incident. This, a dinner. The woman guest at the end of the table called across and down two seats to a man guest: "So, you're the one who said he didn't like to dance with me!" The guest volunteered that the inquirer must be mistaken. His regret was, he said, that he didn't have opportunity to dance more often with her, which rated a bow from the woman or, at least, silence on the subject. But she had the limelight for the moment and she held on for dear life, "But you must have said it, because it was told back to me!"

We could present other pictures of women presenting themselves in their most unbecoming light when they choose to pick a quarrel. We feel that the motive is none other than to steal the show at all costs.

But the costs are too heavy for any woman to carry. Show a querulous, nagging disposition just once publicly, and it takes a powerful lot of sweetening to destroy the ugly impression. The cat's out of the bag and the sweetness is suspected of being affectation, whereas the show-off act may, indeed, be the affectation.

We know a young woman who is going to get some hard schooling before she learns that the way to a man's affections is not by attacking him. She does it in fun, she argues. But fun never is fun if there is a stinger in it.

There's an old bromide about making a man feel comfortable with you and you have a friend for life. As with most bromides that have stood the test of time, there is sound logic to support them.

TO BE A BRIDE IN MAY

The marriage of Miss Elsie Florence Stephenson, daughter of the Thomas B. Stephensons of Harper avenue, to Charles Frederic Henderson, son of Fred Henderson of Warner avenue, will take place on May 2 in Tyler, Tex. Mr. Henderson and his bride will live there, where the bridegroom is employed as a geologist.

The Rainbow in Ink

● Pioneering in the field of color printing on high-speed newspaper presses, The Chicago Tribune has met and surmounted problems never before faced in newspaper history. Tribune photographers, etchers, artists, pressmen have been provided with specially designed equipment, have collaborated in evolving new techniques to produce color in hundreds of thousands of papers pouring nightly from roaring presses.

● Yet one other set of craftsmen has played a vital part in the working of this modern miracle of printing. It is the technical staf of The Tribune's own ink plant, whose fascinating function has been the development of special inks.

● All colors, no matter how strong, no matter how subtle, may be produced by the proper combinations of the three primaries—red, blue, yellow. The theory is simple, the practice bewilderingly complex; for the ink maker has his thousand problems. Together with red, blue, and yellow The Tribune uses sepia or black in four-color printing.

SPRING FEVERS

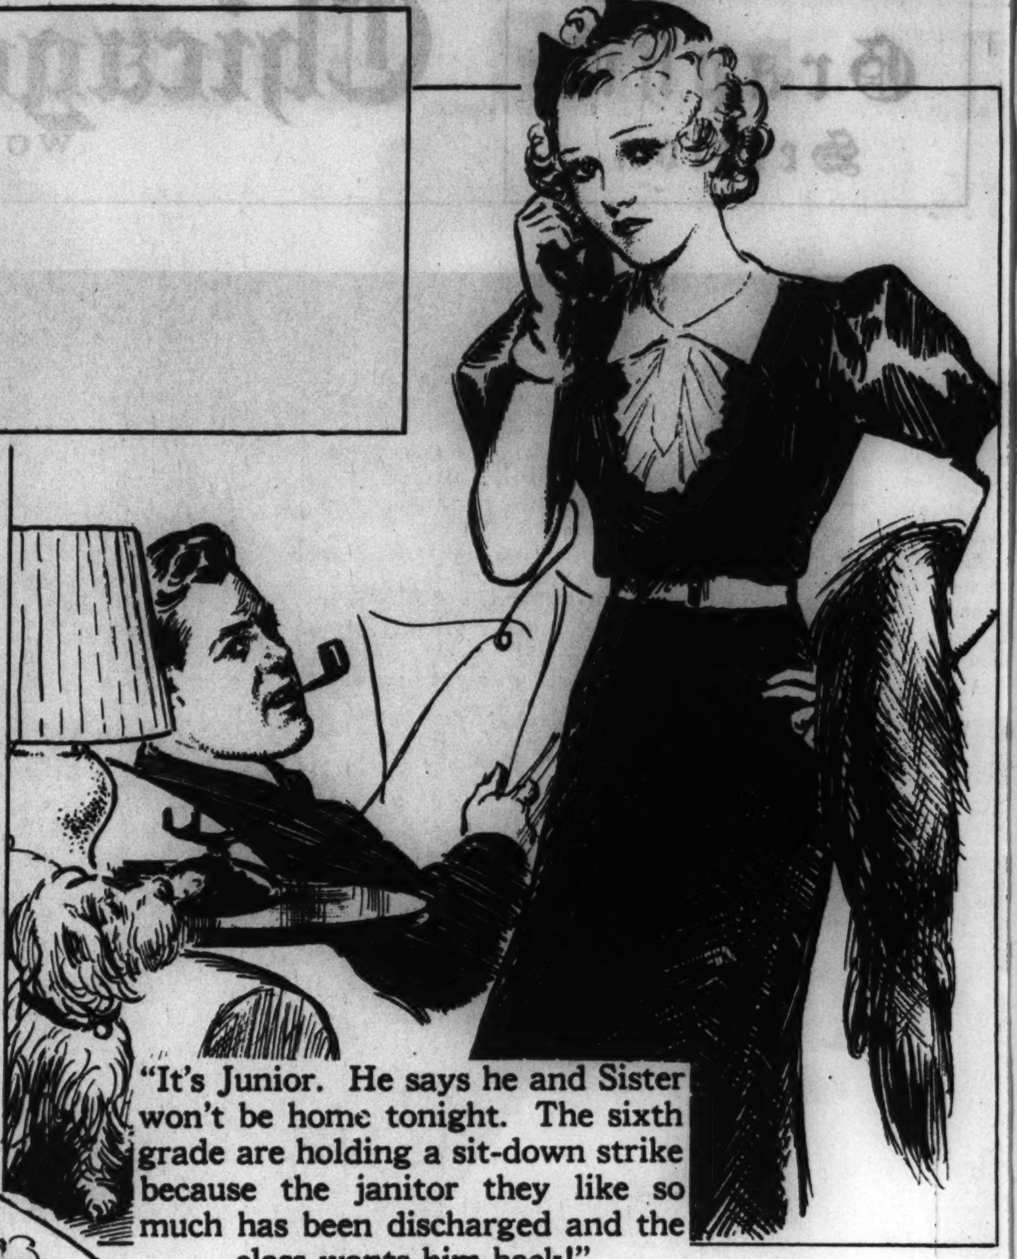
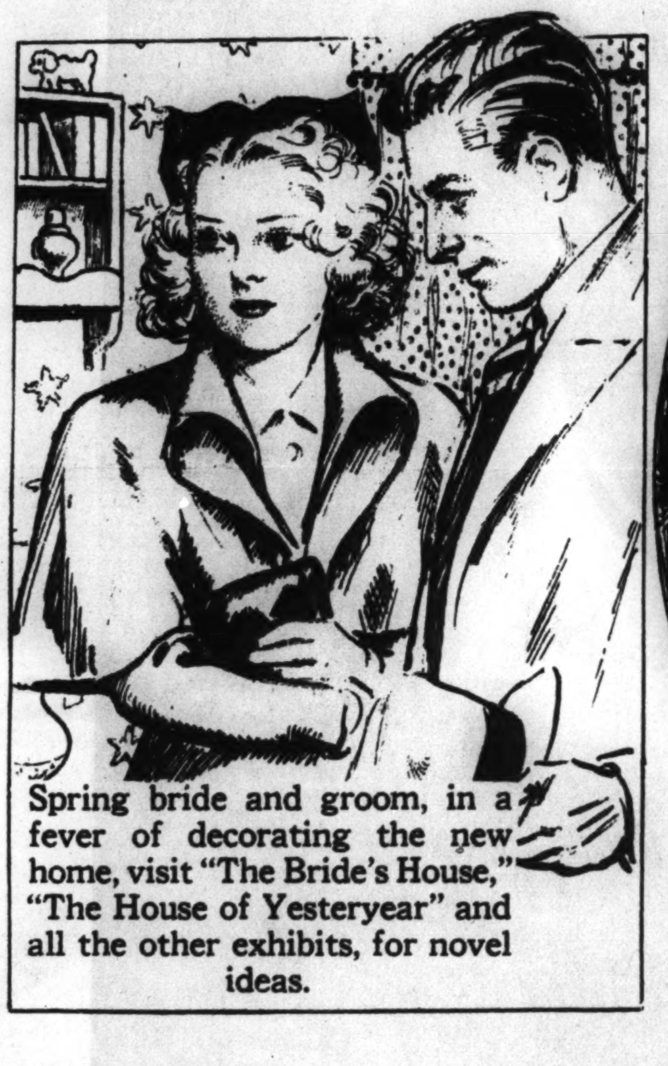
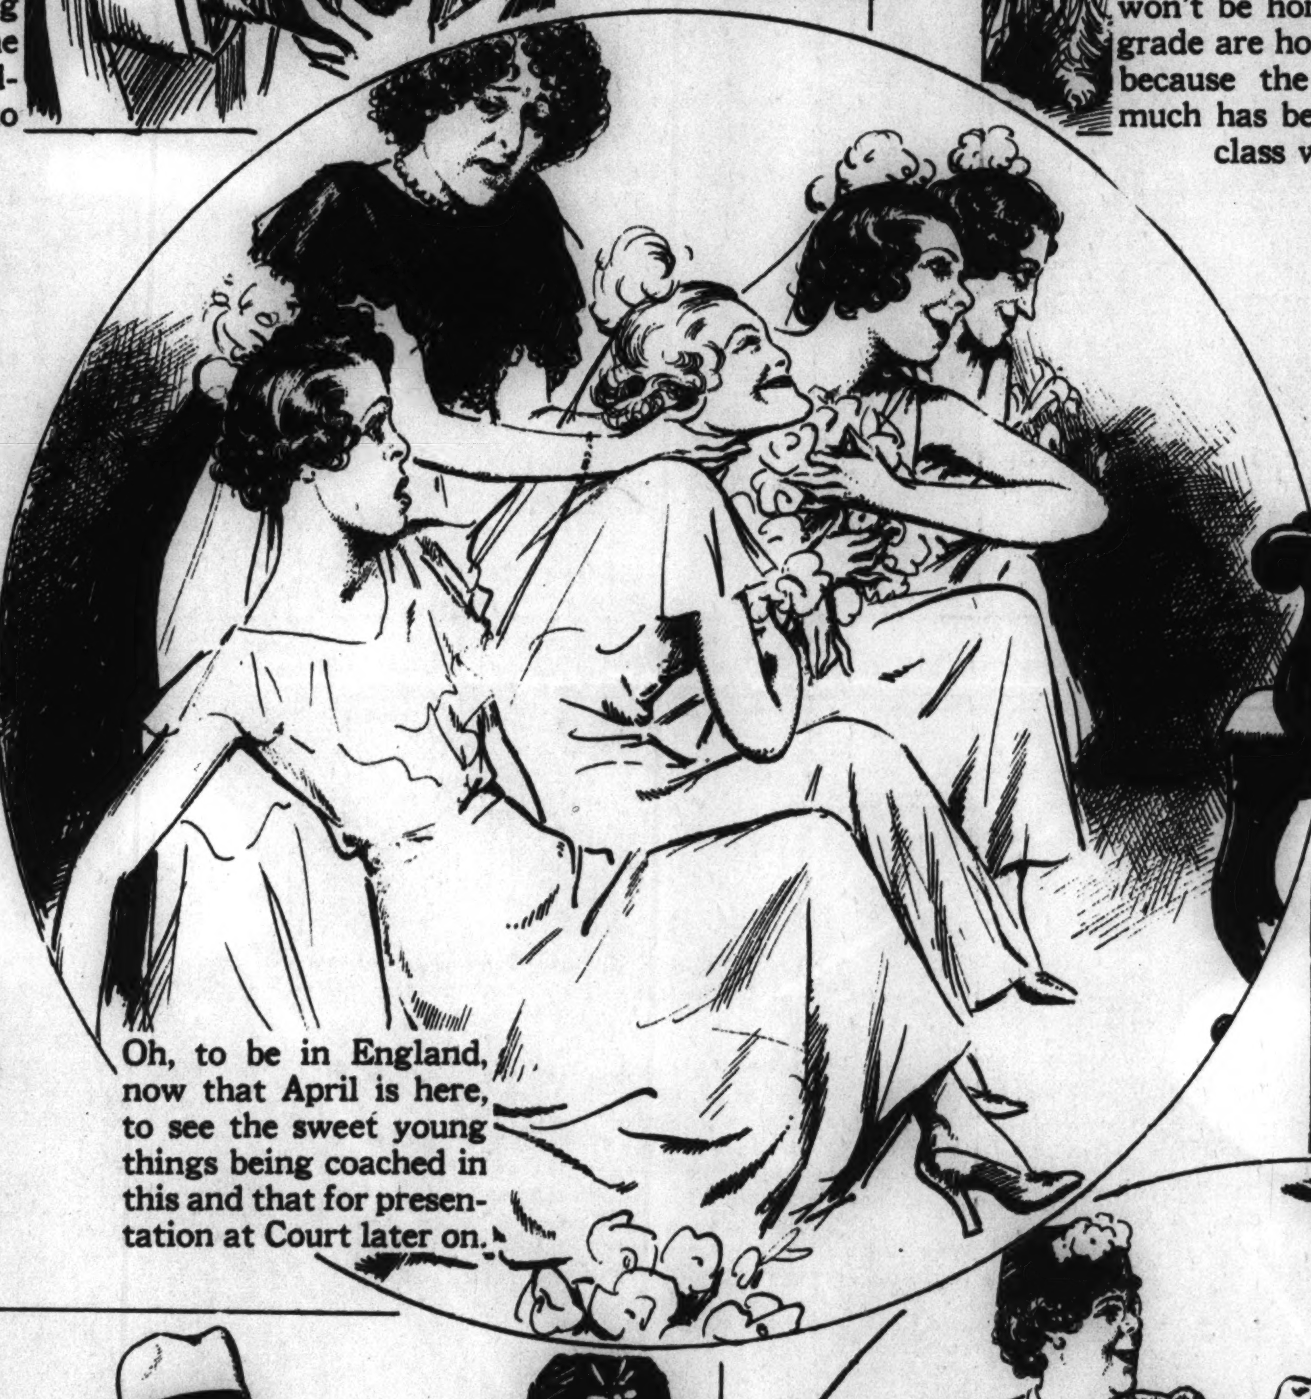
The sit-down fever—showing young man in the Spring of 1937 bringing the girl friend a bag of hamburger sandwiches instead of candy, which used to be the proper gift.



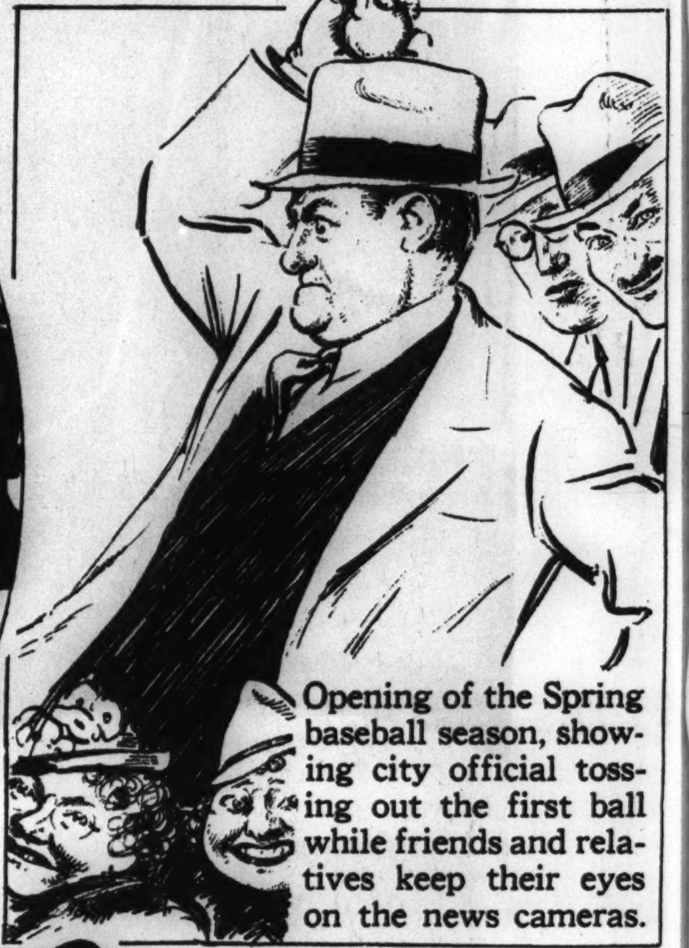
"It's Junior. He says he and Sister won't be home tonight. The sixth grade are holding a sit-down strike because the janitor they like so much has been discharged and the class wants him back!"



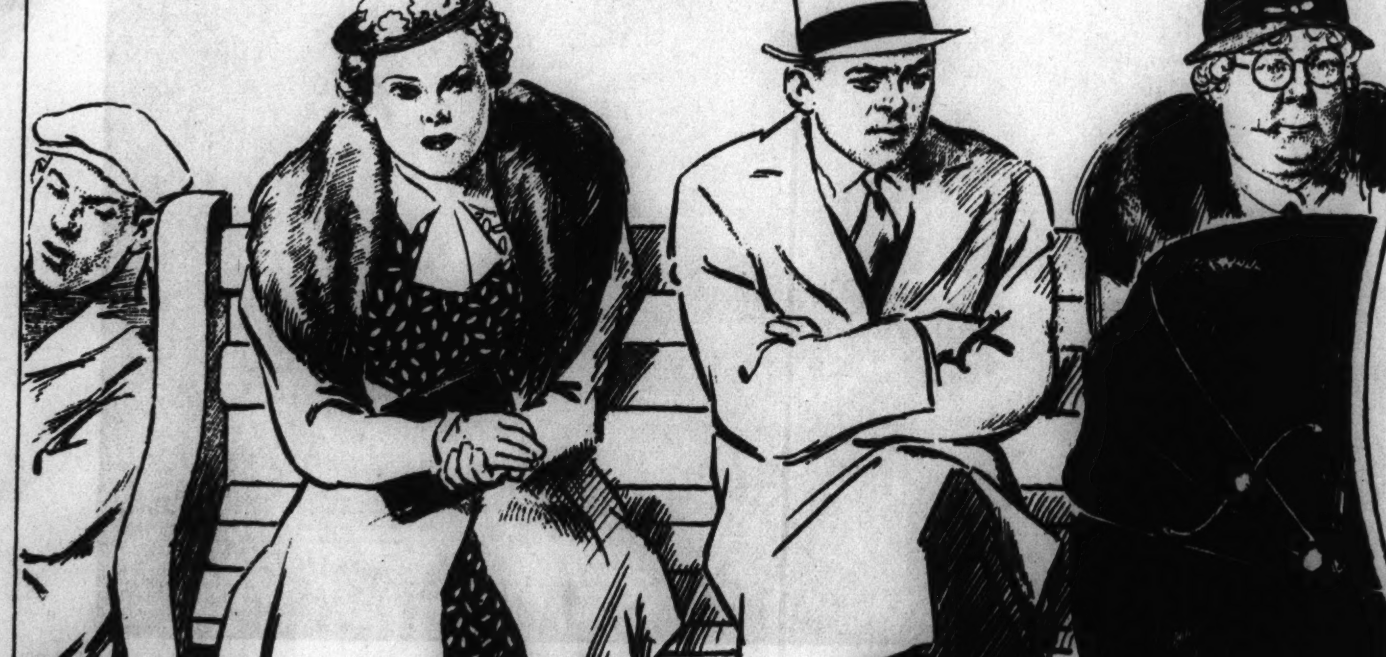
Spring bride and groom, in a fever of decorating the new home, visit "The Bride's House," "The House of Yesteryear" and all the other exhibits, for novel ideas.



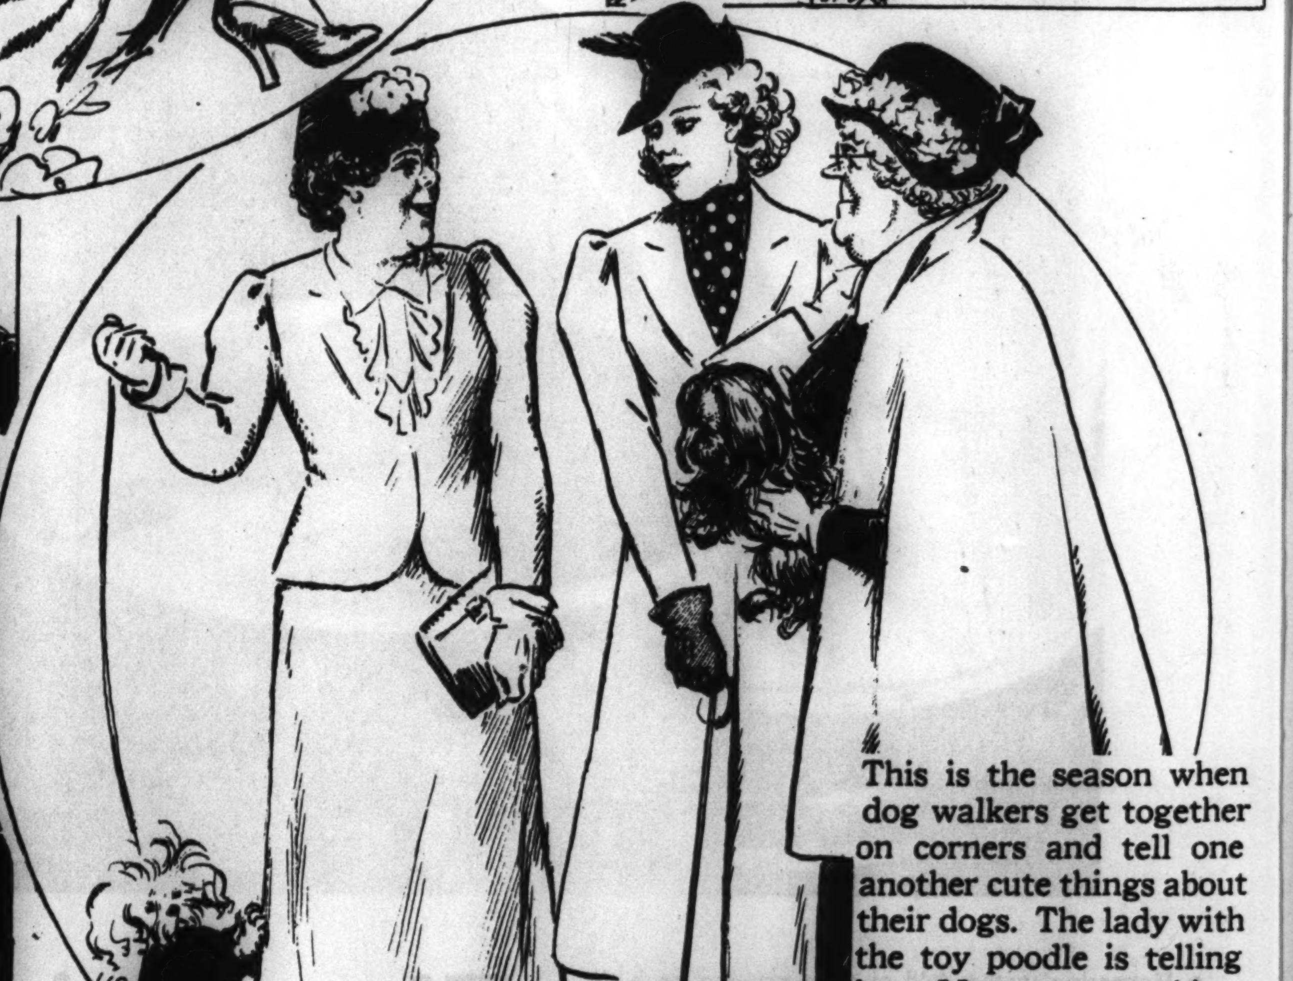
Oh, to be in England, now that April is here, to see the sweet young things being coached in this and that for presentation at Court later on.



Opening of the Spring baseball season, showing city official tossing out the first ball while friends and relatives keep their eyes on the news cameras.



Park bench filled to overflowing with Spring fever victims, just sitting, thinking of nothing in particular.



This is the season when dog walkers get together on corners and tell one another cute things about their dogs. The lady with the toy poodle is telling how Margot never bites any one except an occasional delivery boy, or a boy on a bicycle, and how she just seems to know everything that's said to her.

This Business of Glorifying Movie Stars

t's Art When Ray Jones Takes Stills

By MAE TINEE

I WONDER WHO took that picture! "

You've said it many a ne, haven't you, after feasting ur eyes on some rara avis of e photographer's skill? Of course u have, and feeling certain that u'd say it again when you rned to this page, why, we ought we'd tell you a little about e man who posed and snapped e camera studies before you.

The name is Raymond Howard Jones, and he's an executive—head of the "still" department at Universal studios. But he doesn't like to be dubbed "executive" OR Mr. Jones—as Jean Harlow found out one day when she essayed to be ultrarespectful.

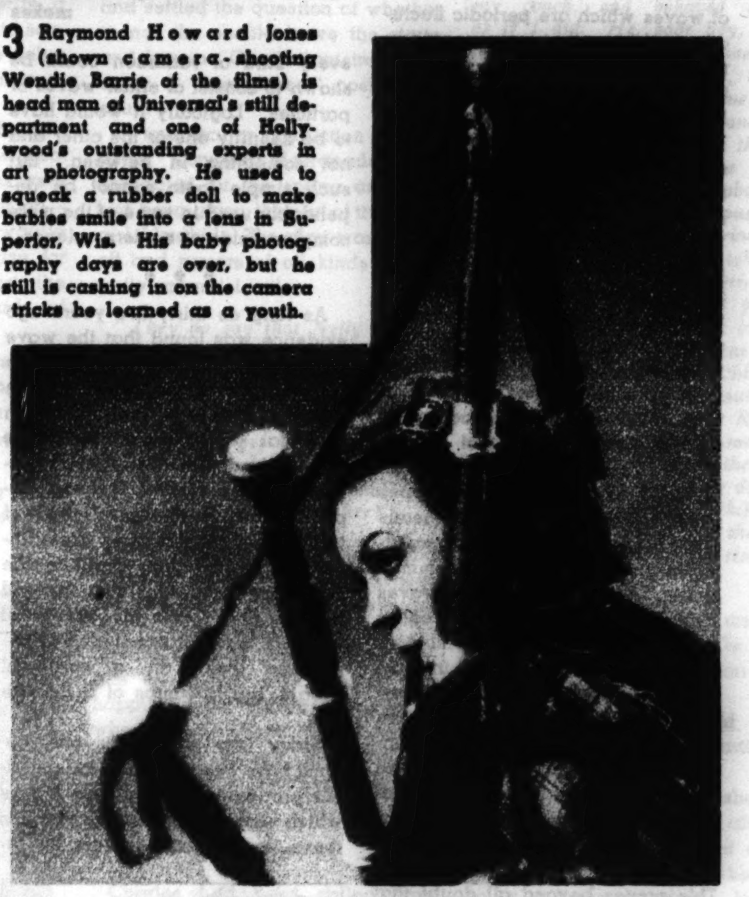
"I'm just plain Ray to everybody else in this town," he told the glamorous lady, "so I don't see why you have to make a distinction."

(Nix on the high hat, you see.)

1 The art of the still camera, in addition to that of moving pictures, is employed to glorify stars of the screen, as is revealed here in a striking pose of glamorous Kitty Carlisle.

2 Of all photographic subjects the bride (impersonated by Marian Marsh) has perhaps the most genuinly human appeal to the imagination.

3 Raymond Howard Jones (shown camera-shooting Wendie Barrie of the films) is head man of Universal's still department and one of Hollywood's outstanding experts in art photography. He used to squeak a rubber doll to make babies smile into a lens in Superior, Wis. His baby photography days are over, but he still is cashing in on the camera tricks he learned as a youth.



4 Universal's Ella Logan portrays a Highland lassie with pipes in one of Mr. Jones' popular stills. Lights and shadows, it will be noted, are skilfully utilized.

Mr. Jones' style might be described as the staccato. He speaks rapidly and decisively. His decisions are quickly made. He works briskly, tolerates no back talk from the stars as to how their pictures are to be taken. And among those he has photographed with signal success are Gary Cooper, Kitty Carlisle, Gloria Stuart, Ella Logan, Marian Marsh, and various other celebrities.

"It's really speed that counts," the wizard avers. "An actor suddenly falls into a perfect pose—and that's when you've got to get your photo—same as in 'catching' a baby."

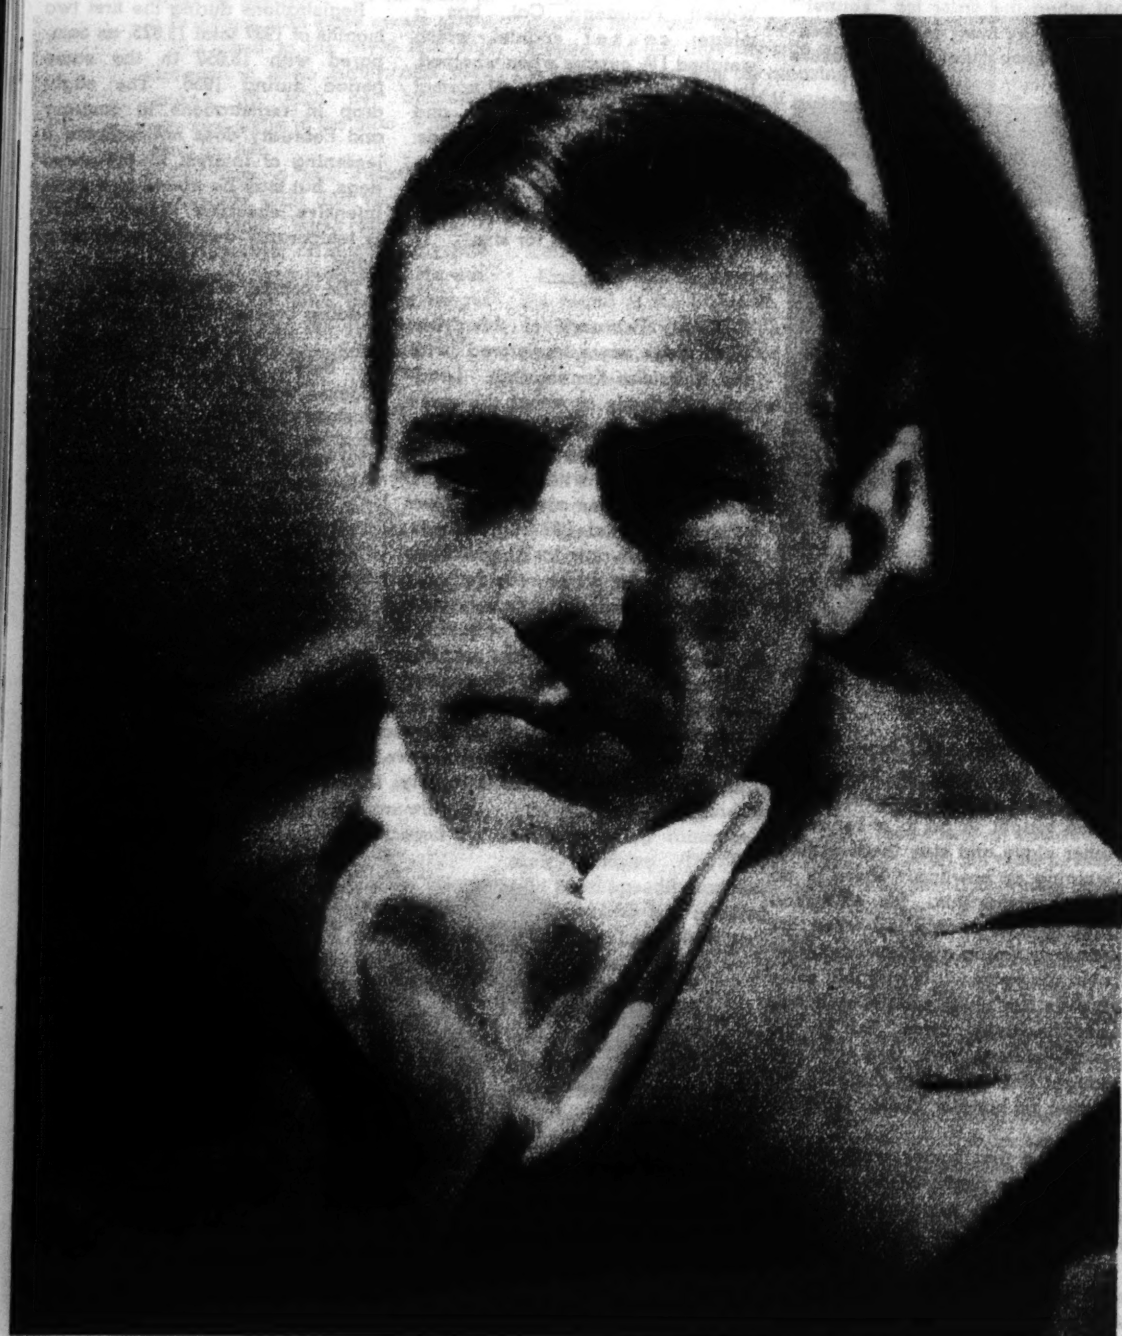
Mr. Jones specialized in baby photography at the Drysdale-Perry studios in Superior, Wis.—the city of his birth—for eight years. He began work there as a boy in high school — receiving $3.50 a week. Later he earned $6 weekly. At the time he left Superior for Hollywood he was making a salary of $32.50 a week.

His first job in California was with a photo service in the banquet photo department. This was not much of a job for a man who knew that he was a genius at photography, but he persevered, and before a year had passed he was taking stills of motion picture folk. That was before the advent of the "talkies."

Well, a lot of water has run under the bridge since then. If you don't believe it, ask Raymond Howard Jones—or, better, the legions who feel that never to have been photographed by the ace cameraman is never to have been photographed at all.



5 Strong, rugged "he-men" of the films, such as Gary Cooper, present almost as interesting subjects for Mr. Jones' camera as the most feminine of the feminine stars.

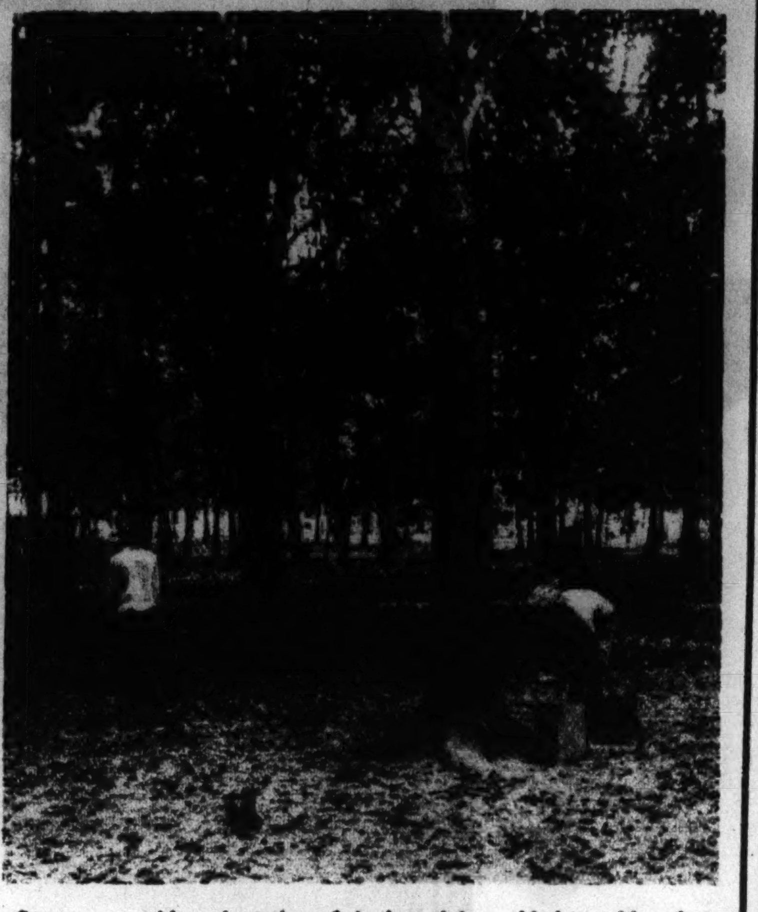
Lenses for Radiant Atoms



Scene on a rubber plantation. It is the sulphur added to rubber that makes it useful.

Question Box

What strange paradox has been found in the study of various kinds of radiation? Many rays, including light, appear to consist of both waves and particles.

What wavelike property is shown by neutron beams? They are capable of being bent by passing through paraffin.

Where is most of the world's sulphur now obtained? It is melted and pumped out of the ground in Texas and Louisiana.

What may be its source in the distant future? The vast amount wasted at present in burning coal.

By DR. THOMAS M. BECK

WHEN energy is radiated in all directions from a single source the effect is considered to be the result of one of two causes. The radiation may consist of waves which are periodic fluctuations of force that move regularly through matter or empty space, or the radiant energy may be carried by a shower of moving particles. Both types are illustrated by the shotgun, which radiates its energy both as sound waves and as a stream of material particles.

Both types of radiation have much in common. Both travel in straight lines as long as the medium through which they move does not change. Both vary in intensity as the inverse square of the distance from the source. They are reflected from reflecting surfaces according to the same mathematical laws.

There are, however, two general methods by which the two types may be distinguished. Both means are absolutely conclusive, according to the rules of ordinary common sense. A beam of radiant waves may be divided into two equal beams which are then recombined. If the two parts are combined in such a way that corresponding portions coincide with each other, then the original beam is restored unchanged. But if they are combined out of phase, so that the crests of one wave fall upon the troughs of the other, then the two beams cancel each other and nothing is left. This proves beyond all doubt that the original beam consisted of waves, because there is no conceivable way in which two sets of similar particles can be made to add up to zero. Experiments of this type have shown that sound, light, and X-rays are all wave motions.

On the other hand, a radiation can be proved to consist of particles by treating it in such a way that the individual particles become separately apparent to our senses. For example, the alpha and beta rays of radioactive substances were shown to be made up of particles by discharging them through air heavily laden with water vapor.

It would appear from this that every kind of radiation could be shown to consist of either waves or particles. Logically it would have to be definitly one or the other and not something in between. But such simple logic cannot be dependably used in some of the more complex fields of modern science.

As long as thirty-five years ago evidence was found that the wave theory could not explain all of the known facts about light. It was observed that when light fell upon a metal surface electrons were emitted and that the kinetic energies of these ejected electrons depended only on the wave length of the light, to which they were inversely proportional. Omitting the reasoning used, this fact showed beyond doubt that the energy of the light was not transferred to the metallic atoms in a continual stream, but in lumps of a definite size.

Since that time other observations have been made of independent properties of light and X-rays which show that in certain respects these two radiations must be regarded as consisting of definite particles, not necessarily material but possessing certain material properties. Thus we have two distinct sets of data, one of which proves that light consists of waves and not particles, while the other set proves the reverse.

The most recent discovery of wavelike properties in material particles concerns neutrons. The neutron differs from other types of radiant particles—electrons, positrons, protons, and alpha particles—in that it possesses no electrical charge. It is obtained when an atom is broken down by the impact of a high-speed alpha particle.

It has been recently reported by Prof. G. N. Lewis of the University of California that beams of neutrons are capable of being bent or refracted on passing into paraffin, just as a beam of light is refracted by water or glass. The report is a preliminary one, still subject to confirmation or retraction in the light of the results of further experiments.

Recent experiments indicate possibility that neutrons may be focused by paraffin lenses, the same as a glass lens focuses sunlight.

SULPHUR'S FUTURE

The chemical industry knows of few elements more valuable than sulphur. Combined with oxygen and water, it forms sulphuric acid, which enters into the preparation of nine-tenths of the products of the industry. Combined with less oxygen, it forms sulphur dioxide, essential in the manufacture of cheap white paper. The element itself is used to convert rubber from a sticky plastic into the firm, flexible material that we can use. It is also used to make carbon disulphide, necessary in the manufacture of the cheapest kind of rayon and has a host of lesser uses.

While sulphur compounds are widely spread throughout the earth's crust, the free element occurs in appreciable amounts only in a few regions. Low-grade deposits of it are found near the volcanic regions of Sicily and Japan. Exceedingly pure beds of it occur deep in the ground in Louisiana and Texas; here it is mined by sinking pipes to the beds, melting the sulphur with live steam, and then pumping it to the surface as a liquid.

It will be noticed that there are no sulphur deposits in Germany, where great efforts are being made to free the nation from the necessity of importing raw materials. This lack is no hindrance to the making of sulphur dioxide or sulphuric acid, as these compounds can be obtained from the roasting of certain common minerals, particularly iron pyrites, or "fool's gold."

However, this does not answer the need for the sulphur itself. Consequently a process has now been developed whereby sulphur dioxide from pyrites or other sources is converted to sulphur by passing it through hot coke.

The process is of interest in that it shows the way in which sulphur may be obtained when the world's supply of the free element is exhausted. Surprisingly enough, most of the sulphur brought out of the ground does not come from sulphur mines, but is present as an impurity in coal and petroleum.

Mostly About Dogs

By BOB BECKER

The Importance of Training

THE dog owner who fails to exact obedience from his or her pet or who fails to give it training that involves obedience is quite apt to run into difficulty when the dog matures. An obedient dog with good manners is such a pleasure to the owner and such an asset to the home that we constantly urge more attention to this question of training. And, seeing as many dogs as we do in the course of a year and hearing about dog problems by the thousands, we can't help but be training conscious. A large majority of the troubles that dog owners have may be traced to the fact that the owners have failed in the business of educating their pets.

Of course, there are extenuating circumstances in some cases. Some owners do not have the necessary time to give, while others want to educate their pets but don't know how. So thousands of affectionate, devoted pets that give much pleasure to both adults and children may, because of neglect, develop this or that habit. But that does not alter the fact that most dogs are naturally keen and bright, eager to please their masters, and readily enter into some form of training program. Dogs enjoy it, too, because for the animal there is an element of play in most routine training lessons.

All of the minor troubles described in subsequent paragraphs are those any dog owner may face due to lack of training in the dog. All are actual problems. We saw the dogs and heard the story of each when we visited a training kennel the other day.

St. Bernard.—A friendly dog, but too strenuous in its greeting. Has knocked down children. This is a common and annoying trick of many dogs. If people like to have a dog jump on them, that is their privilege. But a large dog may knock down children, and almost any dog doing that is apt to ruin clothing. A dog may be trained not to do this.

Cocker spaniel, Airedale, setter, and wire-haired terrier.—All have no discipline or training, refuse to come when called, and will not obey simple commands. There is no one dog or any breed that has a monopoly on this trouble. It's a case of putting the dog through a routine training schedule, teaching it to respond to its name, having it come to you when called (use of a long cord if necessary to exact response to the command), and rewarding it when it does right. Almost any dog can be taught this and other simple things in obedience if time and patience are used.

Springer spaniel.—Howls when left alone in the house by its owners. A dog that whines and howls when left alone by its owner usually is an indulged dog that never has been taught to go to a certain place and stay there. The place may be a corner in some room, a box in a basement or other room, or an outside kennel. In other words, the basic trouble is that the dog never has been taught that there are times when it must stay some place on command and be content and not expect attention from some member of the household. Because this training point is so essential later in the life of the dog, we recommend that a puppy be taught to go to its box or to its corner. The dog has a place that it recognizes as its own, and it should be taught to stay there until commanded to leave. Although the springer spaniel happens to be cited as an example of this problem, this fact should be kept in mind: No one breed or individual dog has a corner on howling when left alone! Letters from dog owners already have cited more than twenty breeds that furnish this problem, which is very annoying to the owner and to the neighbors. Our own clumber spaniel, Carnforth Tobias, tried to be a "crooner" when left in his kennel the first time we brought him home. Prompt and firm discipline stopped his broadcasting. If the dog owner will investigate the routine of any dog that makes a nuisance of itself when left alone we'll wager that such a check-up will show the pet is one having its own way most of the time or one that is rarely made to go to a spot and stay there unnoticed by the owner. In other words, a dog that experiences little or no discipline.

We like all of our dogs. We always are trying to figure ways and means of having more hours with them, because we enjoy them so much. But there are times when it is not convenient to have them with us. There are times when we have to put them up for a few hours, just as other dog owners want to leave their dogs. Therefore our dogs have had to learn that when the order for "kennel" is given they must go into the kennel and keep quiet. The pleasure of owning them and having them around the home is heightened 1,000 per cent because they have been taught to go to a kennel or other place and stay there without whining or howling. There is no magic about this. It's education and routine established when the dog was young and then continued over the years. It is true that some breeds are much quieter and less nervous than others. But in the main almost any dog can be taught this and other things if the owner or handler knows his business.

A dog that comes when called, will stay in place when so ordered, will lie down when told and walk at heel is a joy forever. It has more respect for its master and has a chance to live longer than the disobedient dog that may bolt into a street under trafic. We suggest that dog owners visit a kennel and consult with a trainer on the commands that dogs are taught and for a demonstration of manners by a trained dog. Possibly groups of dog owners interested in developing the ability and the manners of their pets will find it possible to start a training class with an experienced trainer in charge.

DOG NOTES

We occasionally hear of "midget" dogs which are pure-bred but very tiny in size. Mrs George P. Wollett, Pasadena, Cal., has a midget cocker spaniel which weighed 1½ ounces when whelped. Its six litter mates were all normal in every way, and the sire and dam both weigh about 25 pounds. The pup was fed with an eye dropper when it was very young and later developed into a normal pup in every way except for size.

During February of this year 6,325 dogs were registered with the American Kennel club. Leading all breeds at about the same rate which enabled it to clinch first place during 1936 was the cocker spaniel with 1,024 entries. During the same month last year the cocker had 982 registrations. This breed is now far ahead of the Boston terrier, which recorded only 742 for the month this year, against 950 in the same period of 1936.

Greyhound registrations continue to mount, with 402 of the racing dogs registered this February, against 168 in the month last year. The breed again leads all others in the hound group and is largely responsible for the division leading the similar month of last year, 867 to 713.

Registrations during the first two months of 1937 total 13,825, as compared with 15,050 in the same period during 1936. The slight drop in registrations in January and February does not indicate a lessening of interest in pure-bred dogs, but may be traced to a more intensive checking system which is temporarily decreasing registrations.

The comparative figures in the leading breeds are as follows:

	—February—
Breed	1937	1936
Cocker spaniel	1,024	982
Boston terrier	742	950
Scottish terrier	631	774
Fox terrier	490	674
Greyhound	402	168
English springer spaniel	269	314
Chow chow	266	346
Pekingese	266	363
Beagle	146	309
Pomeranian	169	180
Group totals:
Gun dogs	1,556	1,637
Terriers	1,538	1,886
Nonsporting dogs	1,244	1,549
Hounds	867	713
Toys	567	669
Working dogs	553	596

Another of the toy breeds is the miniature pinscher. Dogs of this breed weigh between five and ten pounds.

Nell Gwyn—the Merry Monarch's Favorite

From Slums of London to Palace

On page one of the picture section of this issue appears a portrait in colors of Nell Gwyn.

● This is the first of a series of two articles on Nell Gwyn, the Drury Lane orange girl who became London's most popular actress, the mistress of King Charles II., and the mother of a son of the king. Her child was created earl of Burford, Baron Headington, and duke of St. Albans and was the founder of the noble house now headed by Osborne de Vere Beauclerk, twelfth duke of St. Albans.

FIRST ARTICLE

By LOUISE BARGELT

IT WAS at King's House, Drury Lane, London, on a January eve in 1668 that an impish, red haired minx of seventeen was playing her favorite role of "Florimel" in Dryden's "Secret Love."

This pretty, madcap little comedienne, Nell Gwyn, already London's most popular actress, was disguised as a gallant young spark. She wore an audacious male costume and her impudent swagger and impertinent grin had captured pit and boxes and galleries. For three hours the audience had rocked with laughter at her sallies, had pelted her with flowers, and at the end had called her back for numberless curtain calls.

When the riotous applause finally had subsided and Nell had flung herself on a chair in the greenroom, her face flushed, her eyes shining from the plaudits of the crowd, a message was handed to her.

"A summons from the king," whispered the small page who delivered it.

Nell read the note hastily the first time, then more carefully. In a moment she was on her feet with a whoop of delight.

"The king has sent for me!" She tossed the letter with its carelessly written scrawl to the friends who were crowding around her. "Read it and see what's happened to your little Nelly, hawker of fish in Cole Yard, orange peddler in Lewknor's Lane."

She threw back her head with a merry laugh, then suddenly she sobered and said with droll demureness:

"I'll have to see what he wants. Wait for me here. I'll be back in a twinkling with some meaty tale!"

She sped to the royal box and dropped a deep curtsy and then looked up with her brightest, sauciest smile to the man who had sent for her.

She saw a tall, swarthy man, powerfully built and very straight, with a dark, harsh face under a black periwig, an almost ugly face yet forceful and magnetic. He was studying her with curious, eager intentness, and his eyes were half mocking and unfathomable.

It was the king!

This was the night Charles II. carried Nell in his coach to Whitehall.

The stage was well set for her first entrance as guest into the palace of the king. Often during the year of the great plague she had danced at this same Whitehall to divert Charles from the black gloom which hung like a pall over London, but tonight all was mirth and gayety. Choice wines flowed freely, page boys sang love songs to the accompaniment of soft lutes, and men and women were winning and losing piles of gold around the basset tables.

There was an excited stir when she arrived, for it was evident the king had eyes for no one but Nelly and the flock of dandies and courtiers and handsome lords and lovely ladies talked of nothing else.

Lady Castlemaine was there, a woman of striking beauty who had enslaved Charles for years. She was a haughty favorite and few at court had any liking for her. Nell's arrival was a choice morsel for those who longed to see the one time Barbara Palmer routed from first place in Charles' affections. She had wearied and tormented the king with her temper and tantrums since the first days of their amour.

Burnet says of her:

"An imperious creature, his first and longest mistress, by whom he had five children. . . . She was a woman of great beauty, but enormously vicious and ravenous, furiously jealous of the king while always carrying on intrigues with other men. . . . His passion for her and her strange behavior towards him did so disorder his mind that he was often not master of himself nor capable of minding business. . . ."

Rather too extravagant a statement perhaps, yet it was true that Charles had already by 1668 squandered a sizable fortune on her, and her unpopularity with the English people was so great that they called her openly the "Curse of the Nation."

Lady Castlemaine was playing basset at the gaming table and when it was whispered to her that the "king had come with Nell Gwyn" she merely shrugged and went on with her game.

"I'll settle that dancing cat, that pitiful strolling actress from Drury gutters," she raged inwardly. She had known Nell in earlier days, but had never pictured just this turn of events.

Lady Castlemaine was skilled in getting her own way by stormy scenes, but this time her arts were to fail. Charles was an amazingly indulgent monarch when it came to the ladies of his fancy, but his interest in Nell was shortly to go to such extreme that it cut his temper short. This night was the beginning of the end of Lady Castlemaine's sway.

Excited whispers were now going the round of the ballroom.

"Watch how that little brat is making our Lady Barbara squirm. More power to little Nelly. She's a froward piece and chatters like a magpie but she has a heart of gold and she's bewitched the king. It takes a pert little gamin like Nell to throw him in fits of laughter."

"The queen's got her eyes on Nell. Look at the poor soul! She'll weep till morning over her lord's new flame. It's a pity that with all her goodness she can't amuse the king."

Catharine of Braganza was drifting about the banquet hall, a sad-eyed, melancholy queen who had come to London six years before from Portugal with an enormous pile of dowry bags and high hopes of a budding romance with the merry Charles. The dowry bags had been speedily emptied and her hopes of love had crashed.

Charles had tried zealously to fall in love with his bride on her arrival.

"She is good-natured and I am sure she is good, and I must be the worst man living if I do not make her a good husband," he had declared a few days after his wedding.

At the end of a week his good resolutions had vanished in thin air. Charles was far from the worst man living, but he did not make her a good husband. Indeed, with his passion for amusement and his relish for variety he made her acutely miserable as long as he lived.

Actress Wins Heart of King

Nell's spirits rose as the night wore on. Much of her witchery lay in her high spirits, and they were the real reason of the great personal influence she was always to exert on the king. Madly she whirled and pirouetted about the ballroom.

"Od's fish, I've never seen her like before!" roared the king, and called for the duke of York (his brother, later King James II.) to come and sit beside him.

"Tell me more of this minx. Who is she and where does she come from?" He winked slyly and added under his breath, "More important still, whom does she belong to?"

The duke couldn't answer this offhand, but he tried to remember sundry bits of gossip he had heard about Nell.

There had been plenty of jolly adventures in her life and numerous handsome men. . . . He was sure of this much. . . . Only a year ago she had run away with Lord Buckhurst, who had fallen head over heels in love with her. . . . He had coaxed her to leave the stage and go with him to his country place at Epsom . . . That had certainly stirred up talk in the greenrooms. . . . From what he had heard the two of them had a fiery and rackety time. . . . She had finally left him and returned to Drury Lane. . . . Before that there was Charles Hart, the actor, who had taught her to act, and Lacy, the dramatist, who wrote many of her best lyrics and clever patter. . . . Of course, 'way back in the beginning she had been a ragged little nobody, a harum-scarum street urchin with a father who had died in debtor's prison and a drunken mother who shoved her from Cole Yard gutters to Madame Ross' rotten dive. . . . But Nell had spirit, and once she wriggled her way into King's theater as one of Orange Molly's orange girls, the rest was easy.

It was not long after her first appearance at Whitehall that Nell Gwyn moved from Drury Lane to an elegant apartment at Lincoln's Inn Fields A step up for the frolicsome, laughing Nelly, and, as everyone said, a mark of very special royal favor.

As the weeks and months went on Charles kept close to Nell, carrying her off nightly to his palace to dance and sing for the enthusiastic courtiers after her performances at King's House were over, and visiting with her days in her sunny drawing room, which looked over Lincoln fields. Her quick wit and sprightly sallies, her clever stories and cleverer imitations of everyone in and around the court, sent Charles into gusts of merriment no matter in how black a mood he might have come. As Burnet puts it:

"Nell acted all persons in such a lively and ludicrous manner and was such a constant diversion to the king that no old mistress could hold him or new mistress draw him away."

Etheridge expresses much the same idea, only he couches it in verse:

"When he was dumpish she would still be jocund
And chuck the royal chin of C(harles) the Second."

These were gay, delirious days for Nell, and there must have been many times when her pretty head whirled at the dizzy swiftness of her rise. But it did not spoil her. She continued working hard on the stage, studying her parts earnestly and playing them to audiences which gave her increasingly rapturous applause. She had won a royal heart, but she still had her own, and she gave herself unstintedly to the work she loved.

There was only one thing the king wanted which Nelly would not do for him, and that was to leave the stage and become his mistress in the eyes of England. Charles asked her to do this for him more than once, but she always refused.

"I can't do it," she would say. "No matter what you gave me, I wouldn't be happy. I love to sing and dance and make people laugh, and even to act a little!" She grinned, for she knew that, though she was a popular actress, she was not a great one and never would be—but she was only eighteen and to her the stage was still all that really counted.

The months went on, and a year passed, and then another, and Nell began to discover that she was growing very fond of the king. She had come to know him in all his bright moods and his black ones and saw him quite as he was, a bitterly disillusioned, dissolute sovereign whose passions were vehement and who made no effort to restrain them.

Nell wasn't ready yet for the idle, sensuous, profligate life at the great court of Charles II. Her tastes were for freer, rougher, more bohemian—and withal more straightforwardly honest life—of the green rooms, for in comparison with the court, the backstage life had standards of high, and austere morals!

The memory of Buckhurst lingered and she could not bring herself to repeat the experience, even though this time it was a king who desired her!

So Nell went on working hard and playing between times with Charles in her idle hours.

An old-time sketch of what once was the residence of Nell Gwyn.

"She dances with him and sings to him and serves him breakfast in her rooms at Lincoln's Inn," ran the gossip of the day. "She watches his horses when he runs them on Putney Heath and at New Market and even hunts with him a little and walks with him a great deal when he saunters through the parks with his spaniels . . . and feeds his ducks and peacocks. . . . They do seem very merry and happy together."

Suddenly in the early winter of 1670 something happened which caused Nell to change her mind, and settled the question of whether or not she should leave the stage and become Charles' mistress and enjoy a "recognized" position at court.

A spectacular production of Dryden's "Conquest of Granada" was scheduled for the spring and Nell had been given the part of the slave girl Almahide. The play was called off and rumors of all kinds began to fly around London.

"They do say that Nelly was to wear a hat made in the circumference of a cartwheel and recite a prolog which should pack King's House nightly. . . . They say the king may get her from King's House. . . . It is a pity. . . . Poor Nell! . . . but what will King's House do without her?"

Nell retired from the stage and was seen no more at court. It was not long before everyone knew that pretty, witty Nelly was going to have a child, a child by the king. She spent her days quietly and happily in her little drawing room where the king had visited her so often, and though the king no longer came to see her, Nell was not disturbed.

Charles had been called from London to Dover to welcome his sister, the duchess of Orleans, who had come on a diplomatic mission from France. Nell knew that he would return shortly and a deep rooted resolve was slowly fixing itself in her mind. It was a resolve born of these weeks alone which had shown her how truly she cared for a king who would soon be also a father to her child, a tall, dark king with a boisterous laugh and brooding, melancholy eyes.

She felt herself a different person now, far removed from those days in sordid Lewknor's Lane. She had dropped them all behind her. She was soon to be a mother—even King's House no longer meant so much to her and she could think of the greenroom and its chatter without a pang. Those men she had known—how very little any of them mattered to her now! She recalled her first love, a little linkboy, with a smile. Once at court she had told the story, and it has been preserved, though scarcely in her own words, but with Nell's spirit shining through it:

"My first lover was a linkboy. God knows what has become of him, but when I last saw him he said he would humbly love me to his dying day. He used to say that I must have been a lord's daughter for my beauty, and that I ought to ride in my coach, and behaved to me as if I did. He, poor boy, would light me and my mother home, when we had sold our oranges, to our lodgings in Lewknor's Lane, as if we had been ladies of the land. He said he never felt easy for the evening till he had asked me how I did; then he went gaily about his work, and if he saw us housed for the night he slept like a prince.

"I shall never forget when he came flushing and stammering and drew out of his pocket a pair of worsted stockings which he brought for my naked feet. It was bitter cold weather, and I had chilblains which made me hobble about till I cried; and what does poor Richard do but work hard and buy me those worsted stockings. My mother bade him put them on, and so he did, and his warm tears fell on my chilblains, and he said he should be the happiest lord on earth if the stockings did me any good"

Nell's resolve was cool and daring and she determined to break the news to Charles as soon as he returned from Dover.

"Od's fish!" he would shout, "that's what I've been wanting for years!"

Nell's eyes shone as she pictured their meeting again after all these weeks and she went ahead making definite plans. She was going to leave the stage! Not immediately, as she had promised to appear at King's House in the fall, as Almahide in the "Conquest of Granada," and speak the prologue in her fantastic cart wheel hat. But after that, when the curtain had rung down at the close of the season—then she would do what Charles wanted!

It was on a sunny May day, when the royal equipages of Charles II. were winding their regal way toward the white cliffs of Dover, that Nell's boy was born, a red faced cherub with a lusty yell, in whose veins ran the blood of a little orange-girl from Lewknor's Lane and the royal blood of a Stuart king.

No bells rang out or cannon roared to announce the birth of a future duke of Albans. But Nell didn't mind. He was a king's son and Charles would see that he was reared to the manner born.

Nell had long ago sensed this in the king and she had no fears for her son's future position. Charles might tire of her—this was something she must always face—but her boy would be a great lord or duke some day, with vast estates which his children and his children's children would inherit!

So Nell dreamed, and her heart sang, and she counted the days till Charles should come back. Her faith in this king who had told her he loved her was boundless, and she was unaware of how, even now, under Dover's blue skies, he had met a new love. A ravishing, sophisticated, polished girl from the French court of Louis XIV.—Louise de Querouaille. A soft voiced, doll faced girl of ancient and noble family. The only girl of whom sweet, roguish Nell was ever to be afraid!

1 During the last few years an imposing number of remarkable nature pictures by Leo Keinigsberg, movie and still cameraman, have appeared in the picture section of The Sunday Tribune. These pictures, exclusive in The Tribune, have attracted international attention. Teachers in schools and colleges post them in classrooms, and ask for more. Pictures of the horned toad above, and others on the page, are representative. Taking of such photographs is not only a science, it is also an art. The following pictures throw some light on the Keinigsberg technique.

9 One of the best subjects Cameraman Keinigsberg ever had, this hermit crab gave several voluntary dress rehersals; he kept leaving his crowded shell. Keinigsberg set up his equipment and placed a larger shell in the tank; and the crab moved over with the ease of a perfect actor. Not a retake was necessary. For reward the crab got a small bit of fish. This subject, like most of those that act for the Keinigsberg cameras, came from a biological supply house.

8 A Carolina wonder of the plant world, the insect-eating Venus's-fly trap, posed one of Cameraman Keinigsberg's typical problems: How to get a fly to alight on it? He solved that by placing several dozen of the pests in a bottle, which he inverted over a leaf of the plant until one of the flies settled; then he knocked aside the bottle and began photographing. At this stage the fly sometimes escaped, or the leaf did not react, and the process had to be begun again.

Airplanes and Air Transport

Landing a Plane Is Flyer s Greatest Problem

By WAYNE THOMIS

AN EARLY flying maxim was, "Anyone can fly an airplane, but it takes a pilot to land one." So far as merely keeping an airplane in the air when ship and engine are functioning perfectly, this still holds true. Once in the air and properly trimmed for load and adjusted against propeller torque, most airplanes built today literally will fly themselves.

In commercial and private flying a pilot's ability in the air now is measured by the accuracy of his navigation, by the cleverness with which he utilizes his radio facilities, his meteorology, and his engine or engines. On each flight a pilot has many choices to make, and the expert airman makes the choices which enable any given flight to be made with the utmost economy of time and cost and with the maximum of comfort for his passengers.

Service flyers—army, navy, and marine corps—must be able to perform evolutions and aerobatics which can be done only in machines specially built for these maneuvers.

But no matter how good one is in the air, landing a ship is still the final test of a pilot. The technique of safely bringing an airplane down to the surface of ground or of water still is basic in importance.

No airman ever becomes perfect at landing a machine. This is true because the flying characteristics of planes vary greatly and no flyer twice encounters the same conditions of wind, visibility, temperature. Furthermore, the landing of a conventional type airplane really is a juggling trick.

Like other tricks in which agility and skill of hand and eye are involved, constant practice is essential to the maintenance of a high level of performance. Strange as it may seem, there are many expert airmen who, although able to perform any maneuver in the air, never do achieve the last degree of smoothness in landings.

Practice on landings is begun with a student pilot as soon as he becomes familiar with the controls and the feel of a ship in the air. Usually this practice is begun during the student's second hour of instruction, and it is continued throughout his flying life.

Suppose, reader, that you are a student flyer who has learned to make right and left turns at a gentle bank and discovered how to fly a straight ground course regardless of the wind direction. It is about this time that your instructor says:

"Let's go 'round and try a few landings."

Probably the instructor will make the first landing to show you what has to be done. Then he will say:

"Now put your feet and hands lightly on the throttle, the stick, and the rudder pedals so that you feel how I operate them. On this next round notice the altitude at which we start in for the runway, try to pick out the spot ahead where our wheels are going to touch, and notice, too, about the height at which we begin leveling off."

After two more landings the instructor may tell you "Take it in yourself now."

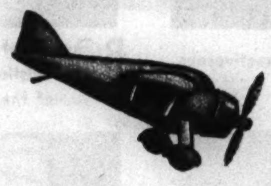
You look ahead to see if the runway is clear; look behind to see that no other ship is attempting to land, for a ship in the air has right of way over one on the ground. Then, if all is well, you open the throttle, lift the tail off the ground, and in a moment you are climbing at a gentle angle.

When the altimeter shows 600 to 700 feet you drop the nose so the ship is flying level and then begin a gentle turn to the left—flight trafic rules demand that turns be made to the left around an airport.

One side consisted of your takeoff and climb. The first turn is one of 90 degrees. You make three more of these turns as you skirt the edge of the airport and finally head back into the wind in the direction of the takeoff.

You already have noted the angle of glide of the ship you are flying, and when you reach the point from which you believe you can glide to the runway ahead you close the throttle and ease the stick forward simultaneously.



"That's the idea," says the instructor through the speaking tube. "Always remember that when the engine stops, whether you throttle it or whether it fails you, always drop your nose. You must keep flying speed to control your ship."

While he speaks you have been descending at the rate of 300 to 400 feet a minute and approaching the airport. There is no sound of engine now, nothing but a low whistle of wind on the flying wires of your open biplane. As you pass over the edge of the field you still are some forty to fifty feet in the air.

"Keep her in the glide; just let her come on in," cautions the instructor, who has known students to begin leveling off at that altitude or has had others attempt a steep dive toward the ground "to get down quicker."

You obey, and swiftly the ground rises. You are less than twenty feet up.

"Now begin to raise the nose. Begin leveling off very gently," says the instructor.

You exert a little pressure on the stick and the nose of your ship rises to a level position. Still you are sinking toward the ground, your speed perceptibly slower.

"Now ease the stick back. Back! Back! Into your stomach!" speaks the instructor quickly, and you attempt to follow orders.

Before you succeed, however, the landing wheels underneath the wing touch lightly. You bounce a foot or so and then settle solidly to the ground, with the tail skid following the wheels a moment later.

"Okay for a first attempt," says the instructor. "Now let's go 'round again."

And you do. Interminably. Finally you begin to make every landing a "three-pointer." This is the safe slow landing made by the experts, and it gets its name from the fact that both landing wheels and the tail skid touch simultaneously. Then as your hours in the air pile up, you become more and more expert; your judgment of the glide becomes better; you neither undershoot nor overshoot, but each time put your ship down at about the spot you picked out from the air.

Throughout your flying life this practice will continue. Air line pilots with thousands of hours in the air and hundreds of thousands of landings behind them still practice landings just as do the novice flyers.

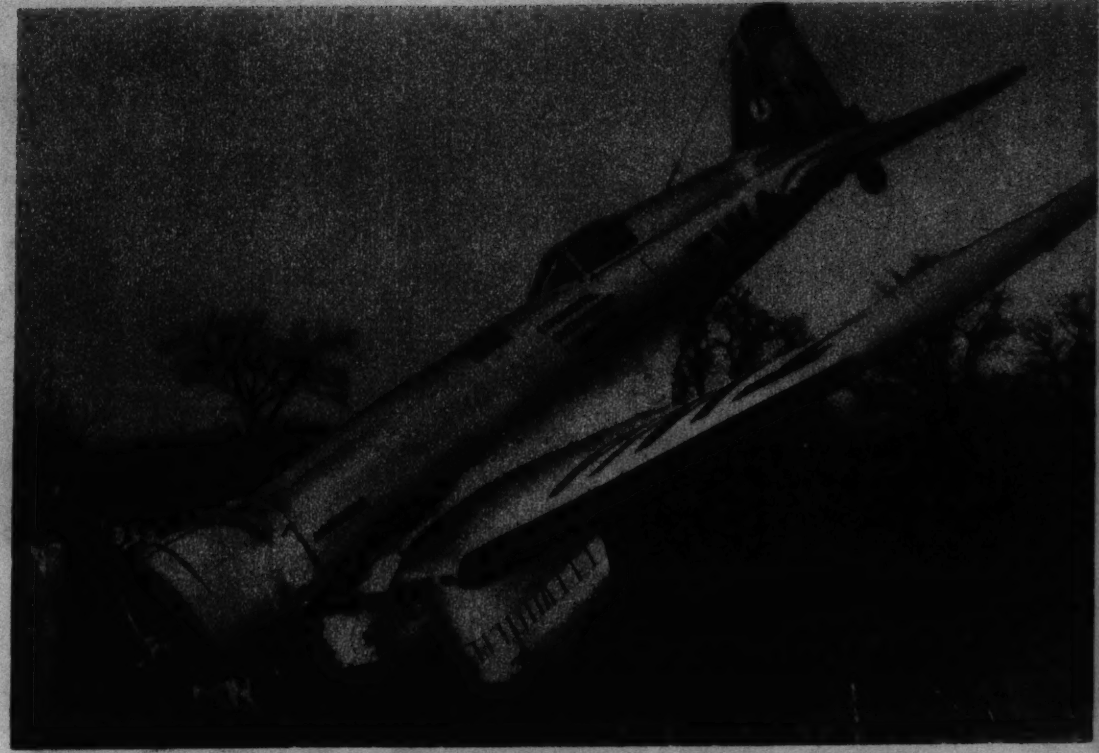
When an air line purchases a new fleet of airplanes each of its pilots is "checked out" on the new ships as carefully as your novice pilot is checked out for his first flight around the field alone—his first "solo" hop. The ultimate test in this check is landings. Around and around go the experts until they know the new ship as thoroughly—or almost as thoroughly—as they did the old type which they had flown for years. Only then are they allowed to take the ship out on the line with passengers aboard.

But even the experts have their landing troubles. Not so long ago an air line pilot misjudged his approach at Newark airport, and while the plane touched down on the airport proper, it rolled on and into swampy ground to the west of the field before the pilot could get it stopped. No one aboard was injured, but the plane was considerably damaged.



End of an experimental high-altitude flight and landing made in bad weather by Pilot D. W. Tomlinson and Chief Engineer James Heistand of Transcontinental and Western Air. Forced to land by lack of fuel, Tomlinson apparently jammed on the brakes to prevent sliding through a fence.

Some of the strangest accidents occur while planes are landing. Remember that the landing speed of an airplane ranges from 40 to 65 miles an hour, depending on the ship. Some planes—military, experimental, or racing ships—have landing speeds as high as 90 miles an hour.

It is easy to understand how mishaps occur when these speeds are considered. The most common occurrence is that of nosing over. This happens when landing wheels drop into a rut or soft spot or strike a stone or an obstruction while the plane is still moving fast.

Sometimes planes turn completely over—do a forward somersault instead of merely pitching forward on the engine with the tail in the air. Seldom, however, do passengers suffer more than bruises when such accidents happen. Another common accident is that of dragging a wing tip and smashing spars or ribs or denting metal wing structure. This usually happens in a "ground loop."

A ground loop is very different from a loop in the air. Pilots say a plane ground loops when it swings around on one wheel, as much out of control as a skidding automobile.

Sometimes undercarriages are smashed. Sometimes, however, a plane is deliberately ground looped to prevent its smashing into some obstruction. This can be done by applying full rudder to one side or the other and by using the brake on the same side, if brakes are fitted.

The nosing over of the army air corps giant four-engined Boeing 299 type bomber on one of its test flights at Seattle last December was an unusual landing accident. A photograph of the ship up on its snout after this smashup is reproduced herewith.

The accident was caused by the failure of the air brakes on the landing wheels. The brakes locked while the ship was in the air and the pilot did not know of it.

When he brought the plane in for a normal landing the wheels skidded along the ground for a short distance; then the bomber pitched over on its nose. Observers on the ground noted at the takeoff that the wheels had locked as the ship took the air.

When Capt. Tommy Tomlinson of Transcontinental and Western Air was forced to land on a hillside field forty miles away from Newark airport several weeks ago after attempting a stratosphere flight during bad weather his ship also went on its nose.

Whether Tomlinson deliberately jammed on the brakes to bring the plane to a quick stop as the only alternative to a much worse accident, or whether a stone, a rut, or a soft spot caused the nose-over, is not known. A picture of T. W. A.'s experimental flight ship, a Northrop Gamma with a Wright Cyclone motor, is also reproduced on this page.

An attempt to build a different type of landing gear now is being made by several manufacturers. This gear consists of a fourth landing wheel at the nose of the ship. The gear then consists of two wheels under the wings, a tail skid or wheel, and the nose wheel.

Advocates of the nose wheel point that that it would prevent nose-overs, which are admittedly the greatest source of landing mishaps.

Tests of this theory are being conducted by the air commerce bureau, by the Douglas Aircraft company at Santa Monica, Cal., and by several other manufacturers. If the tests are satisfactory the newest transports will be fitted with the nose wheel, and Douglas now shows drawings of the new forty-passenger four-motored commercial airliner, which is expected to be flying by the late months of 1937, with such a nose wheel.

1—What an airplane pilot sees while bringing his ship to a landing on an airport. First a glance over the field to see the wind direction and be sure the runway is clear. 2—The approach then is begun from an altitude of 1,000 feet. 3—The glide continues with the airport looming ahead and the plane still 300 feet in the air. 4—Leveling off just before touching down the wheels. 5—Down but still traveling fast across another runway. 6—The brakes bring the plane to a halt. A moment later the pilot swings the ship toward the hangar and taxies in.

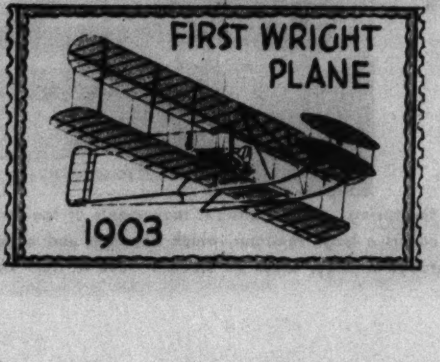
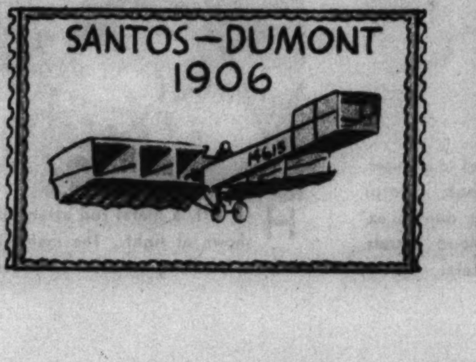
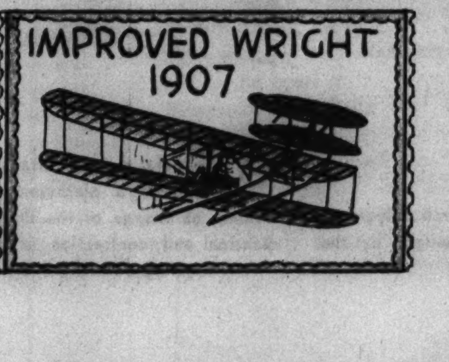
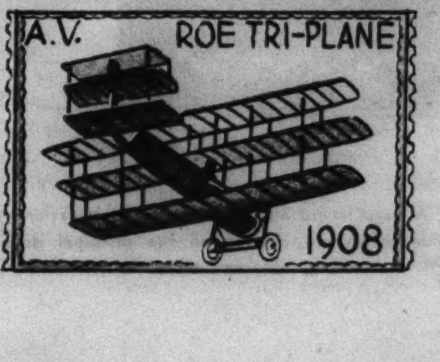
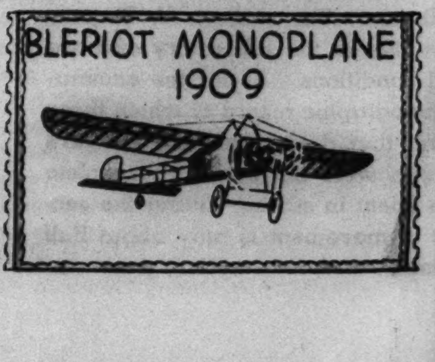
A Stamp History of Aviation











Sandy Forsyth's Thrilling Frontier Fight

The Battle of Beecher's Island—68 Years Ago

BY GUY MURCHIE JR.

COLONEL FORSYTH'S horse tossed his head and snorted nervously. The gentle tang of prairie grass was in the air. The colonel gripped his reins more firmly. Neither he nor Sharp Grover, who stood near him, could hear a sound other than the familiar horse noises of an occasional stamping hoof or a jingling bit. Dawn had come over the little ravine to the east. There was no stirring among the cavalry tents pitched atop the dried-up river bank.

Suddenly, as Forsyth's eyes swept the dim silhouette of the low hills to the south and west, he caught sight of a moving something between himself and the horizon. Grover saw it, too, and both men cocked their rifles. A few seconds later came the soft thud of unshod hoofs upon the turf and from behind a little rise some two hundred yards away appeared three mounted Indians. Forsyth could barely make out their scalp lock feathers fluttering against the light.

The sharp cracks of the two soldiers' rifles broke the stillness. Then the men turned and retreated toward the camp, shouting: "Indians! Turn out! Indians!"

The red men rapidly bore down on the huddled group of tents yelling at the top of their lungs, trying to stampede the picketed horses. Meanwhile, more Indians appeared at other points along the dim skyline, racing for the camp as the sleepy soldiers grabbed at their bridles and rifles.

Such was the start of one of the most amazing and heroic stands against Indians in all American history. The date was Sept. 17, 1868. The place was a point on the Arikaree river about three miles southwest of the spot where the territory of Colorado touched the two new states of Kansas and Nebraska.

Eight days before, Col. George Alexander ("Sandy") Forsyth had left Fort Wallace, Kas., with fifty picked scouts. Second in command was Lieut. F. H. Beecher, nephew of the famous Henry Ward Beecher. Dr. John S. Movers of New York was acting surgeon. W. H. H. McCall was first sergeant. Most of the men were frontiersmen who had volunteered to fight Indians. News had just come to the post that the Indians had attacked a train near Sheridan, a small railway town eighty miles distant. Forsyth was ordered to pursue and punish the marauders.

Following the trail for eight days, Forsyth's band arrived at the scene of their subsequent attack by Indians late in the afternoon of Sept. 16. They were nearly out of supplies, except salt and coffee, and several of the men had begun to express alarm at their remoteness from their base while in unfamiliar country full of hostile Indians who outnumbered them probably more than fifty to one. Colonel Forsyth, however, answered them, pointing out that in his opinion it would be more dangerous to turn back at this stage than to advance and attack.

With this extremely bold and ominous point of view in their minds, the little column made camp that September afternoon on the Arikaree fork of the Republican river. As the scouts pitched their tents Forsyth instructed each of them to "seize his horse's lariat as soon as he grasped his rifle" in case of attack during the night. He had personally seen to the posting of the sentries and had given special instructions also to every man to hobble his horse and, before lying down, to make sure his picket pin was firmly driven into the ground.

Thus it was that the band of Indians that suddenly loomed out of the shadows the next morning beating war drums and screaming to frighten the white men's animals succeeded only in stampeding two horses and two pack mules, which somehow thrashed loose from their pickets and dashed away in a panic. And one of the Indians lost his life as the hastily aroused soldiers fired a volley at them when they galloped past and off again into the dawn-lit dimness.

At this moment the frontiersmen's morale was high. It looked as if they had successfully routed the marauders But Forsyth knew that this little sortie was probably only a preliminary to a general attack and he shouted, "Saddle up quickly, men!"

In less than a minute it was done and the frontiersmen stood by their horses ready for instant action. It was now getting light fairly rapidly and things could be seen even below the skyline.

Suddenly Grover, who was standing beside Forsyth, reached out and gripped the latter's shoulder impulsively. "Good God!" he exclaimed, "look at the Indians!"

Within a few seconds the whole earth seemed alive with Indians. The soldier scouts raised their rifles. Crack! went a volley into the dimly approaching shapes. Crack!—another volley. The mass of redskins slacks its pace, stops, skirmishes for cover. The Indians are evidently puzzled at the ready responsiveness of the whites to what they had planned as a surprise party. But, even so, they outnumber the frontiersmen so overwhelmingly that the latter are definitly on the defensive and, in fact, in an all but hopeless situation.

Colonel Forsyth looks about him. The only direction the Indians don't seem to be coming from is the east or down stream, but he is too experienced in Indian craft to retreat in that obvious direction and expose his men to the ambush that almost certainly is ready for them in that little gorge a half mile away. Instead he barks orders to his command to lead the horses to the little island that divides the nearly dried-up stream about opposite to where the camp is located. This island, about 250 feet long, is little more than a sand bar in the stream, but some tall sage grass grows at its head, there is a thicket of alders and willows near its middle, and a single cottonwood tree rises strangely some twenty feet high at its foot. The stream itself is in this season only five or six inches deep and perhaps fifteen feet wide on either side of the island, though the now empty river bed spreads to nearly 500 feet between its banks.

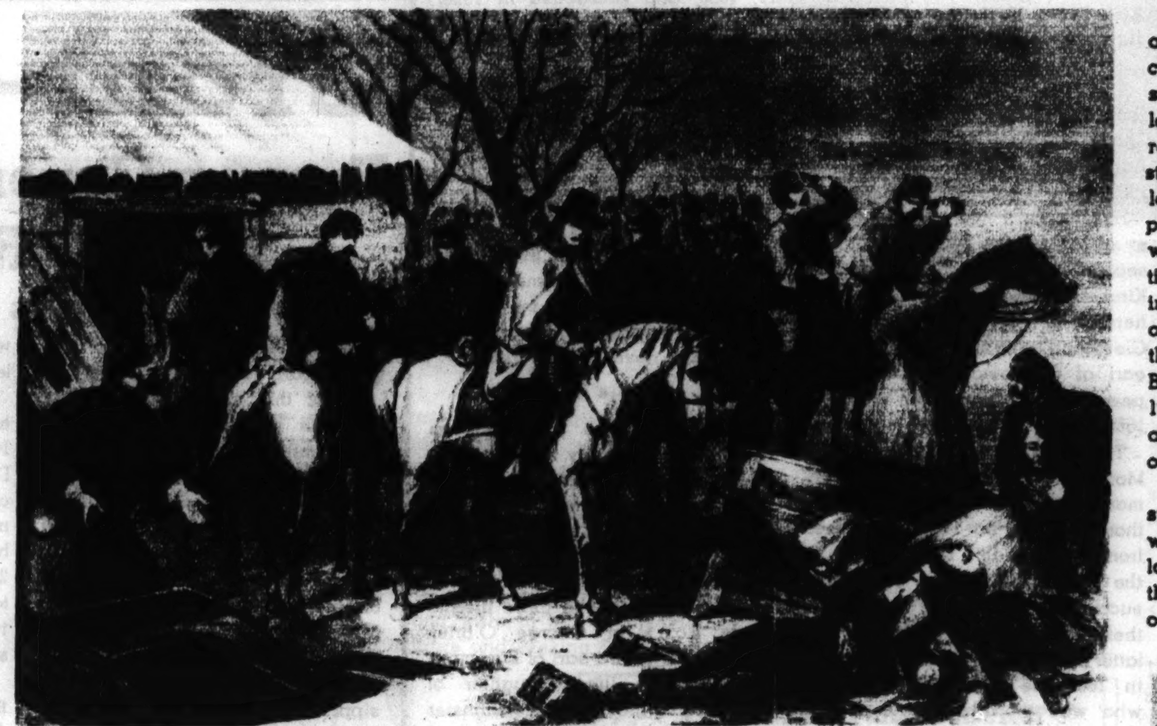
Quickly the soldiers run to the island. They tether their horses to the bushes in circular formation and themselves lie down in a smaller circle within the protecting enclosure made by their animals. In this position, the men entrench themselves as rapidly as possible. Thus they are soon hidden from the enemy's view, concealed behind their horses and lying low in the grass and bushes. It was a desperate bit of strategy, retreating to the island, but it has succeeded so far. Surrender is not to be thought of in a fight against these Brules, Sioux, and Cheyennes, for mutilation, torture, and death would surely befall any man unlucky enough to fall into their hands.

All these things are in the minds of the frantic frontiersmen as they duck under the sizzling volleys now poured from the Spencer and Henry rifles in the possession of the Indians. They return the fire whenever they see one of the bolder red men attempting to creep up close. Meanwhile the tied-up horses are being shot down pitilessly while plunging and rearing at their tethers and screaming with pain. In a few minutes the last of the horses is down and the white men are firing from between their bodies. One soldier has already been killed and several wounded. Suddenly a soldier's panicky voice shouts, "Don't let's stay here and be shot down like dogs! Will any man try for the opposite bank with me?"

"I will," comes an answer from the other side of the circle.

"Stay where you are!" bellows Forsyth. "It's our only chance." He stands erect in the center, revolver in hand. "I'll shoot down any man who attempts to leave the island."

"And so will I," shouts McCall loyally. Soon the crisis in the ranks is over and discipline restored.



Vengeance on the trail! Soldiers of the days of Forsyth and his scouts, while riding across the plains, come upon victims of marauding Indians.

"Steady, men! Steady, now. Aim low. Don't waste a shot," shouts Forsyth at frequent intervals. "Our lives will depend on the ammunition we can save."

The battle rages on. Many of the Indians have fallen, and the bodies of some are being carried to the rear to the accompaniment of wails from their squaws and other Indian spectators who now line the hilltops witnessing the struggle. Forsyth receives a painful wound in the right thigh. A few minutes later another bullet splinters his left shin bone, leaving him practically unable to move, yet he courageously keeps his head clear and retains command. When two Indians succeed in reaching the lower tip of the island and harrassing the besieged from the cover of some alder bushes, they are picked off by a sharpshooter named Farley.

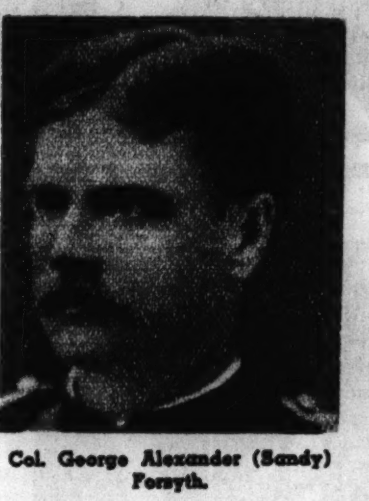
At around 11 in the morning comes the attack Forsyth has long been expecting. This is how he later remembered it: "I peered over the little earthwork.... Down the stream I saw most of the mounted warriors had disappeared, and those who remained were slowly trotting towards the little gorge [to the east]. . . . I distinctly heard the clear notes of an artillery bugle. Others of the mounted warriors now moved toward the gorge, and it flashed upon me that Roman Nose [famous Cheyenne chief whom the soldiers had recognized because of his unusual height and distinctive bearing] was forming his warriors for a charge just around the bend of the river, out of sight, and beyond rifle range. . . . 'Let the men get ready,' was my order. Accordingly each Spencer repeating rifle was charged at once with six shots in the magazine and one in the barrel. . . . In the meantime the fire of the Indians lying around us had slackened and almost ceased. This only confirmed us in our anticipation.

"A peal of the artillery bugle, and at a slow trot the mounted warriors came partially into view in an apparently solid mass at the foot of the valley. . . . I saw their chief facing his command and, by his gestures, evidently addressing them in a few impassioned words. Then waving his hand in our direction, he turned his horse's head towards us, and at the word of command they broke at once into full gallop, heading straight for the foot of the island. I was right in my surmise; we were to be annihilated by being shot down as they rode over us. As Roman Nose dashed gallantly forward and swept into the open at the head of his superb command, he was the very beau ideal of an Indian chief. . . . He sat well forward on his barebacked charger . . . a man over six feet and three inches in height, beautifuly formed . . . his face hideously painted in alternate lines of red and black. . . . Eagles feathers and herons' plumes trailed wildly on the wind behind him.

Gallant Scouts Stand Off a Horde of Indians

"On they came at a swinging gallop, rending the air with their wild war whoops, each individual warrior in all his bravery of war paint and long braided scalp lock tipped with eagles' feathers, and all stark naked but for their cartridge belts and moccasins, keeping their line almost perfectly, all riding bareback, with only loose lariats about their horses' bodies, about a yard apart, and with a depth of six or seven ranks, forming together a compact body of massive fighting strength, and of almost resistless weight. . . . I was fairly lost in admiration of the glorious charge, for it was far and away beyond anything I had heard of, read about, or even imagined regarding Indian warfare.

"No sooner were the charging warriors fairly under way than a withering fire was suddenly poured in upon us by those of the Indians who lay in ambush around us intently watching our every movement, in the vain hope that they might sufficiently cow us to protect their charging column against our rifles. . . . For eight or ten seconds it seemed to rain bullets, and then came a sudden lull. . . ."



Col. George Alexander (Sandy) Forsyth.

The hidden Indian riflemen are forced to cease firing to avoid hitting Roman Nose's chargers. This is Forsyth's cue for action.

"Now!" he shouts.

"Now!" and "Now!" is echoed by Beecher, McCall, and Grover.

"A quick flash of their eyes along the barrels," Forsyth's narrative continues, "and forty good men and true sent their first of seven successive volleys into the ranks of the charging warriors. . . . Roman Nose is down. He and his horse lie dead. . . .

". . . like an angry wave that hurls itself upon a mighty rock and breaks upon its rugged front, the Indians divide each side of the little breastwork, throw themselves almost beneath the off-side of their chargers, and with hoarse cries of rage and anguish break for either bank of the river, and scatter wildly in every direction, as the scouts, springing to their feet with a ringing cheer, pour in volley after volley from their revolvers.

"'Down, men! Lie down!' I fairly shriek." They drop just in time to avoid the scorching volley that comes from the hidden Indians as soon as the horsemen are clear.

And so the fight goes on, even though Roman Nose is dead and his warriors' most desperate charge has failed. Lieutenant Beecher, Forsyth's gallant second in command, is dead also. Forsyth is now wounded in three places.

Despite two more mounted charges during the day, which fail completely, the struggle is by this time becoming a siege. Forsyth realizes "that the outcome of the battle" will be "decided by the staying powers of the combatants." And now the wisdom of his choice of the island as a place of refuge is apparent. Water is to be had for the digging, and the open space around the little fortification makes it next to impossible for the Indians to approach without being seen, even at night. The dead horses and mules will supply the men with food as long as they can keep the meat from putrefying. However, there is no other food left, and no medical supplies for the several wounded and dying men. Worse still, the surgeon is dead. The nearest post is 110 miles away. Somehow or other word must be sent through to that post for immediate aid.

Accordingly, as soon as it gets dark, two of the scouts named Trudeau and Stillwell set out to try to creep through the Indian lines undetected and to reach Fort Wallace with news of the desperate situation. It is a cloudy, moonless night and, by crawling for three miles down the middle of the little stream and then sneaking ashore and into a grove of trees; they successfully make their way past the encircling enemy.

On the fourth day, the two scouts arrive at Fort Wallace, and a rescue party under Colonel Bankhead starts out immediately. Two days later it arrives at Forsyth's island refuge to find the besieged men still there, though very weak from lack of food and from inability to properly clean and dress their wounds. The Indians have by this time entirely given up hope of taking the spot until the white men are dead, and relatively few of them are lurking in the vicinity. Brevet-Col. L. H. Carpenter of the 10th cavalry and some of his men are the first to arrive by the side of Forsyth.

Thus ended a remarkable and successful stand, the full glory of which was not known until years later when "Sandy" Forsyth, by then a general, chanced to meet one of the young Indian chiefs who had opposed him. According to this witness, the Indians had been watching Forsyth's party for days previous to the dawn attack, while gathering warriors from far and near. And on the afternoon immediately before the attack they would have ambushed the soldiers and "slaughtered them all" had the latter continued but two miles farther up the river to where the Indians were lying in wait for them. Forsyth's surprise move to the island when attacked in the morning, according to this Indian, was all that saved his party from annihilation. There were 970 Indian warriors in the fight, he said, of whom "seventy-five" were killed and "heaps" wounded by Forsyth and his fifty men.

The bloody engagement came to be known as the battle of Beecher's island, thus named in honor of the only commissioned officer who lost his life in the encounter.

Ghost of Illegitimacy Haunts Titled British

Bar Sinister on Arms of Nobles

By HISTORICUS

Oxford, England.

IN THE present British peerage at least eight of the so-called great noble families have the "baton sinister" on their coats of arms and trace their origins back to illegitimate sons or daughters of kings. Many noble titles now extinct—the line having died out—are based on ancestors who were illegitimate. In the lesser fry of aristocracy illegitimacy also was frequent, but here it was more covered up, for there was not the same high honor attached to being the illegitimate son or daughter of a knight or baron as of a member of the royal family.

Charles II., James II., and William IV. were the monarchs most noted for giving noble families their start on an illegitimate basis. These three kings each had five illegitimate sons. Four out of the eight families in De Brett's "Peerage" who have the bar sinister on their armorial bearings trace it to Charles II.

The eight families—which have a living representative who bears the title and which have a streak of illegitimacy—are those of:

The duke of St. Albans, family name Beauclerk. (Descendant of Charles II.)

The baron of Southampton, family name Fitzroy. (Descendant of Charles II.)

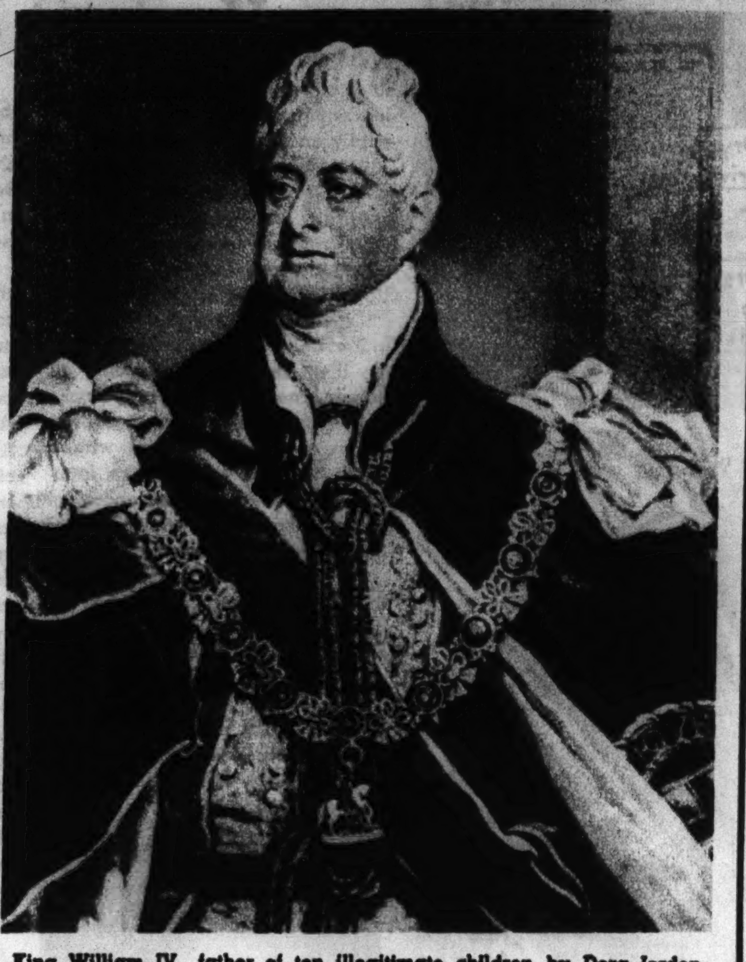
The earl of Munster, family name Fitzclarence. (Descendant of William IV.)

The duke of Buccleuch, family name Montagu Douglas Scott. (Descendant of Charles II.)

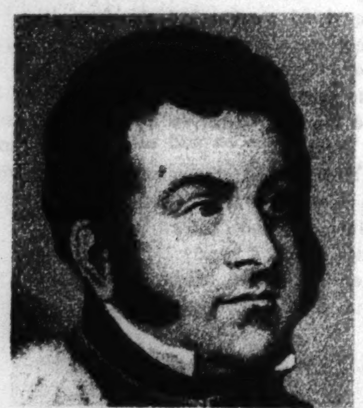
The duke of Beaufort, family name Somerset. (Descendant of duke of Somerset.)

Baron Leconfield, family name Wyndham (Descendant of earl of Egremont.)

The duke of Richmond and Gordon, family name Gordon Lennox. (Descendant of Charles II.)



King William IV., father of ten illegitimate children by Dora Jordon, the actress.



George Fitzclarence, first earl of Munster, eldest of William IV.'s five sons by Dora Jordon.

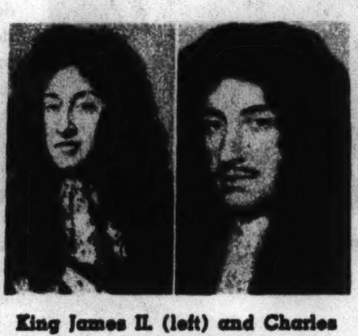
King James II. had five illegitimate children by Arabella Churchill, spinster, sister of John, duke of Marlborough, and only daughter of Sir Winston Churchill. Henry Fitzjames, second son and youngest of the five, became duke of Albemarle. The line is now extinct.

Charles II. was the most notorious philandering king. His affair with Nell Gwyn, the Drury lane flower girl, was the most notable one, although he had many other mistresses. It is recorded that one of his mistresses would introduce herself by saying, "I'm the French one."

From Charles Beauclerk, K. G., illegitimate son of Charles and Nell, dates the origin of the duke of Albans' family. The present peer is Osborne de Vere Beauclerk, the twelfth duke, born Oct. 16, 1874. He succeeded to the title in 1934.

On the escutcheon of the baron of Southampton there is a baton sinister which marks the illegitimate descent of the family through the first duke of Grafton, who was a natural son of Charles II. by Barbara Villiers, duchess of Cleveland. The present peer is Charles Henry Fitzroy, O. B. E., the fourth baron, who was born May 11, 1867, and succeeded to the title in 1872.

The duke of Grafton, whose family name is also Fitzroy, as has been mentioned, is a descendant of Charles II. and Barbara Villiers.



King James II. (left) and Charles II., each of whom had five illegitimate sons.

The present and ninth Duke John Charles William Fitzroy was born Aug. 1, 1914. He succeeded in 1930.

Henry Charles, K. G., the founder of the family, was in fact the second of three natural sons of King Charles II. by Barbara Villiers, in her own right duchess of Cleveland, wife of Roger (Palmer), earl of Castlemaine of the Irish peerage. He was born Sept. 2, 1663.

The Buccleuchs (family name Montagu Douglas Scott) are the most important family, perhaps, of those whose bar sinister comes from Charles II. The founder of the family, Sir Walter Scott, was succeeded by his son Walter and then his grandson Francis. The latter's daughter Anne married in 1663 the duke of Monmouth, who was the illegitimate son of Charles II.

The present peer, Walter John Montagu Douglas Scott, eighth duke of Buccleuch and tenth of Queensberry, was born Dec. 30, 1894, and succeeded in 1935. The duke's sister is the duchess of Gloucester, she having married King George V.'s third son two years ago The duke of Buccleuch served in the late war and sits in the house of lords as earl of Doncaster. In 1921 he married Freida Esther Mary, daughter of the late Maj. William Frank Lascelles.

The present duchess of Buccleuch is a second cousin of the earl of Harewood, the husband of the princess royal. Her mother was descended through the duke of St. Albans from Charles Beauclerk, the illegitimate son of Charles II. and Nell Gwyn.

The duke of Richmond and Gordon, whose family name is Gordon Lennox, also has its origin in Charles II.'s illicit loves. The founder of the family was Charles Lennox, K. G., illegitimate son of King Charles II. and Louise Renee de Penancoet de Kerouaille, who was created by his majesty Baroness Petersfield, countess of Fareham, and duchess of Portsmouth for life, and, by Louis XIV. of France, Duchesse d'Aubigny.

The present duke, who is the ninth, Frederick Charles Gordon Lennox, succeeded because his elder brother, Charles Henry, died in 1919 of wounds received in action in north Russia.

The duke of Beaufort, whose family name is Somerset, is the tenth in the line. He was born April 4, 1900. The origin of the family dates from Sir Charles Somerset, K. G., the illegitimate son of Henry Beaufort, third duke of Somerset, who was third in descent from John of Gaunt and Catherine Swynford.

The earl of Munster, whose family name is Fitzclarence, is the fifth of the line. He was born Feb. 17, 1906, and succeeded in 1928. The founder of the family was George Fitzclarence, later first earl of Munster, who was the eldest of five natural sons of William IV. and Dora Bland, generally known as Dora Jordon, the greatest comic actress of the day. Besides ten illegitimate children born of William IV. when he was duke of Clarence, she had previously had five daughters, all illegitimate, four by Sir Richard Ford and one by Richard Daly, the manager of a theater in Cork. She never was married.

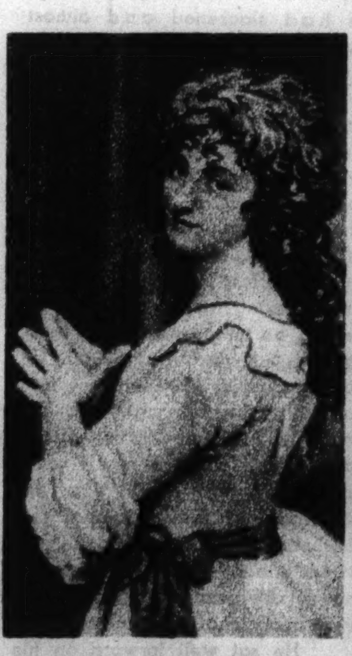
Another peerage which has its origin in illegitimacy is the barony of Leconfield. The present peer is Charles Henry Wyndham, G. C. V. O., who is the third baron. He was born Feb. 17, 1872. The first baron was George Wyndham of Petworth, Sussex, eldest of the three illegitimate sons of George O'Brien (Wyndham), third earl of Egremont, by Elizabeth Ilive, daughter of one Ilive, a master of Westminster school, whose first name is unknown.

The duke of Albemarle, a title now extinct, was of illegitimate origin. The family name is Churchill, and the present Churchill family are collateral and descendants of some sort.

The most severe arraignment of hereditary peerages has just been published here in the form of a book entitled "Tarnished Peerages," by Nelson D'Auvergne. The author's thesis is that all too seldom is a great name accompanied by a noble character and capacity for government.



Dora Jordon, leading comedienne of her day, who bore fifteen children, although never married. She was William IV.'s mistress for twenty years.

Dawn of the Steamboat

Early Craft Built in Europe

Paris, France.

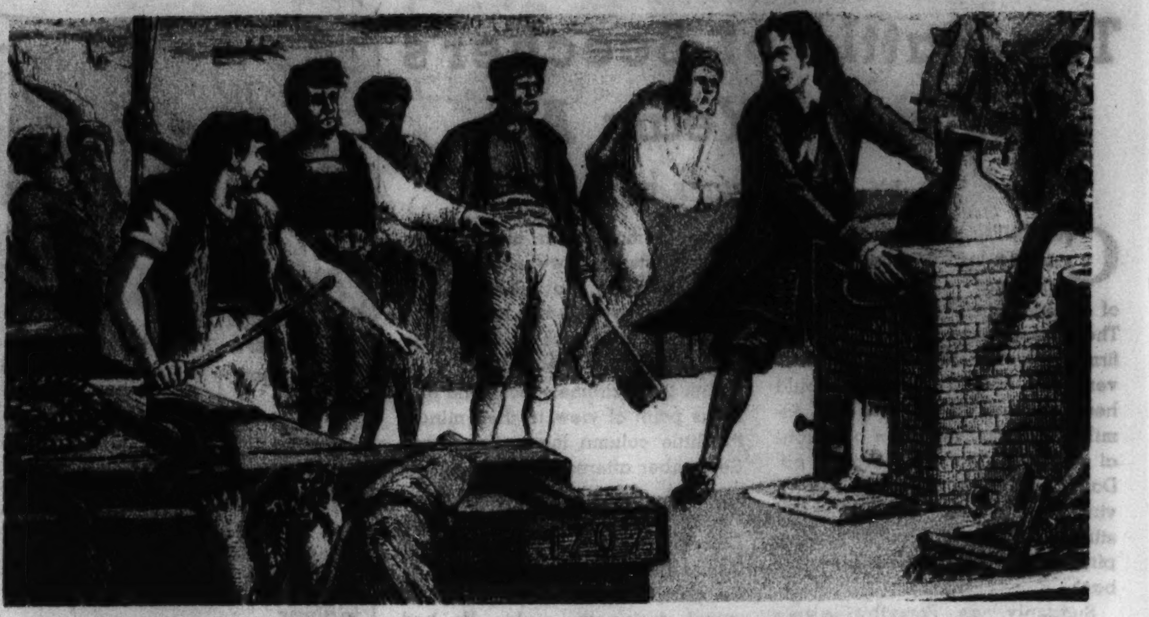
ROBERT FULTON was not the first man to sail a steamship. He was preceded by more than a hundred years by a Frenchman whose invention received a far worse reception than the mere jeers that greeted Fulton's. Irate German bargemen attacked it and smashed it up.

Two other Frenchmen built steamships before Fulton came along.

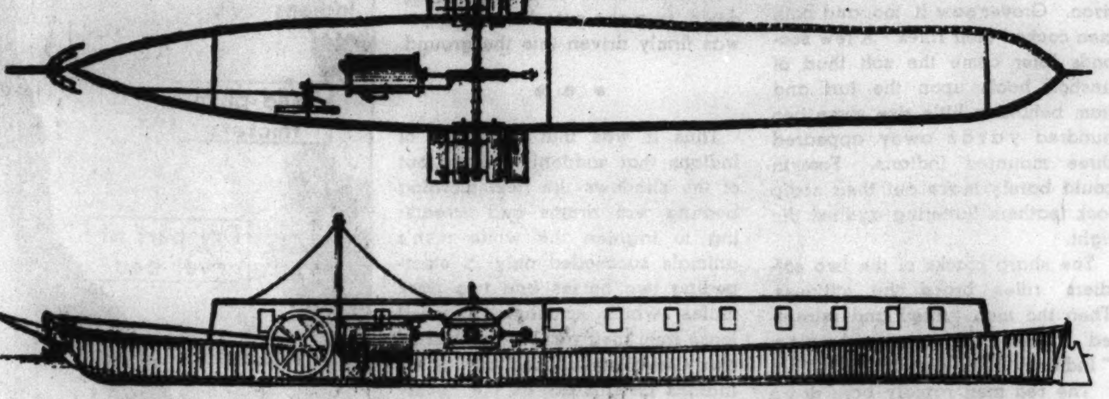
The first of the three was Denis Papin, born in Blois in 1647. While living in Magdeburg, Germany, he built a small paddle boat and actually made it move. He then decided to sail to England in it via the Fulda and Weser rivers, it is said, and the North sea.

His tiny steam vessel managed to splutter down river only a few miles when bargemen, angered by the presence of the strange contraption, attacked Papin and broke up his ship.

About sixty years later, when Fulton was a mere child, a young French aristocrat began playing with the idea of "reconciling fire and water" to quote a popular sneer of the time. He was the Marquis de Jouffroy d'Abbans, who had been exiled from the king's court for fighting a duel. He made plans for steam navigation, but a man named Perier had heard about them and built a ship along Jouffroy d'Abbans' lines. His cleverness in taking advantage of another's idea got him nothing. His boat, with a motor only one horse power strong, couldn't breast even the gentle current of the Seine. It was abandoned as a failure.



Denis Papin's steamboat was boarded by bargemen on the River Weser and smashed beyond repair. Papin, the figure by the boiler, barely escaped with his life.



Claude de Jouffroy Marquis d'Abbans' deck and longitudinal section designs of his own steamboat, a paddle wheel affair.

But Jouffroy himself a year later, with the aid of a coppersmith, completed his ship, thirty feet long and six wide, and called it a pyroscaphe. This paddle boat cruised up and down the Doubs for a month. When the spluttering, fire-spitting monster first appeared around the bend of the river it badly frightened fishermen and peasants.

Jouffroy's fame spread, but he was chiefly laughed at. His fellow noblemen at Versailles court called him Jouffroy la Pompe—Jouffroy the Pump.

But he persisted and a few years later had built a steamer three times as big, with paddle wheels fourteen feet in diameter. He sailed it on the Saone at Lyons in the presence of a committee from the Academy of Sciences, which reported favorably on his invention.

Grant—Taker of Chances

Famous General's Narrow Escapes Recalled

By CHARLES SMUTNY

GEN. U. S. GRANT, who was born 115 years ago the 27th of this month, was not an armchair fighter during any part of his military life. He barely escaped death or capture on several occasions, so close was his contact with the Confederates throughout the civil war.

Brigadier General Grant brought on the battle of Belmont, Mo., in November, 1861, to test his inexperienced volunteers. Side-wheelers brought his boys down the Mississippi from Cairo, Ill. They disembarked north of the Confederate camp and after four hours of fierce skirmishing drove the southerners out. Grant's raw troops believed the excitement was over for the day and began a trophy hunt through the enemy camp. The Confederates returned, surprised them, and pursued them back to the waiting river boats. The northerners clambered on their transports in fairly good order. The boats already were pushing off when Grant on horseback, coat tails flying, slid his horse down the almost perpendicular bank and trotted over the outflung gang plank to the deck, with the southerners fifty yards behind. Entering the captain's room, Grant threw himself on a sofa. Restlessly he stood up again. A few seconds later a Confederate bullet drilled the cabin wall and plunged through the length of the sofa.

Seven months later Grant would have been a more desirable prize. He had taken Forts Henry and Donelson and had won the battle of Shiloh under a handicap. A major general now, he removed his headquarters to Memphis. The 23d of June of 1862, hot and sunny, found Grant jogging along within twenty miles of the city with a small cavalry escort.

A Dr. Smith, a southern sympathizer, informed the Confederate Gen. W. H. Jackson of Grant's passing. Jackson followed but gave up the chase after estimating that Grant's start had put him beyond reach. Grant and his party at that moment were lolling in the shade of a grove three-quarters of a mile up the road.

At Chattanooga creek more than a year later Grant, scouting alone, came upon a lone soldier drawing water. He questioned the man, who politely informed Grant that he was of the Confederate General Longstreet's corps. This corps wore a blue uniform. This man may not have recognized Grant. If he did he may have been overawed. He might have changed the history of the United States.

The southern Col. John S. Mosby, raiding behind the Federal lines early in May of 1864, sighted bluecoated cavalry and simultaneously a Washington-bound railroad train. Should he stop and destroy the train or engage the cavalry? The bluecoats bolted. Mosby pursued, and the train made its stop at Warrington Junction. Grant saw Mosby's dust from one of the coaches, and the Wilderness campaign started as planned on May 5.

The Fiddler and the Blonde Hat Check Girl

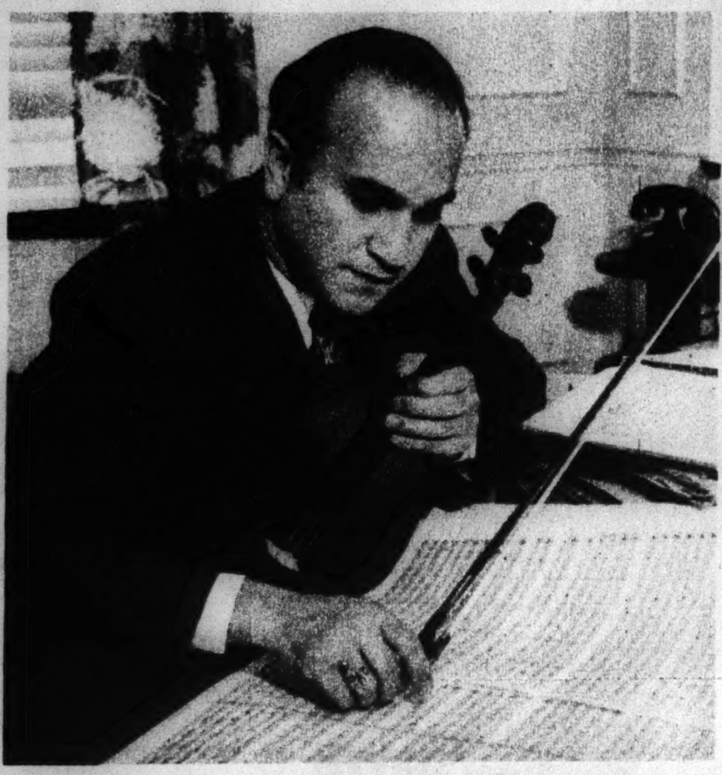
A Hang-Over from Golden Age of Heart Balm

By CHARLES COLLINS

A DEAD snake will continue to wriggle its tail until after sundown, according to American folklore. The same vitality, even more protracted, seems to be a characteristic of suits for breach of promise to marry.

On March 29, 1935, Governor Lehman of the state of New York signed a bill abolishing the traditional "heart balm" case; other states of the Union, including Illinois, have passed similar laws. Nevertheless, late in February, 1937, the case of Garcia vs. Rubinoff, in which damages of $500,000 were asked by the blonde plaintiff, provided the five boroughs of New York City and the rest of the nation with a flagrant example of this form of litigation, fortunately unsuccessful. It was a hang-over from the golden age of bruised hearts seeking financial soothing, technically admissible to trial; and, like the tail of the aforesaid snake, it wriggled furiously for a few days.

David Rubinoff, generally known as Dave, was the defendant; he is the most popular violinist in the field of radio entertainment, and when he pours his emotional soul into his Stradivarius millions listen and are moved. He has no lofty position among the acknowledged virtuosi of the concert halls; he has been correctly labeled a "mob artist." But when his violin sobs and moans and purrs with overt sentimentality the vast radio audience is thrilled to the depths of its innocent, untutored soul. Consequently Dave's income is impressive, and a certain Peggy Garcia, whose right name is Pauline Micheline Taylor, plus two other names acquired by marriage, thought that she deserved a large slice of the Rubinoff earnings because she had bestowed (so she said) a few intimate favors upon him in 1933.



The fiddler, David Rubinoff of radio fame, with his sobbing violin.

This so-called Miss Garcia has served in the ranks of the large army of New York's amusement blondes. She took her name off the lid of a cigar box when she was a tobacco-selling and hat-checking siren in the Cotton club of Harlem, where she met the impulsive Rubinoff. Before that she had been a chorus girl in a few Broadway shows, a hat check girl in Connie's inn, a taxi dancer in the Blue Bird hall, a beaming blue-eyed hostess here and there in the razzle-dazzle zone of Manhattan cafes.

In February, 1934, Miss Garcia filed suit for $100,000 against Rubinoff, alleging seduction under promise of marriage. Thus the suit antedated the passage of the McNaboe act banning all such litigation and therefore had to come to trial unless withdrawn. Peggy refused to yield to public opinion in the matter; in fact, after the bill became law she raised her claim for damages to $500,000, thinking, perhaps, that this was her last chance. Rubinoff refused to settle or compromise out of court, like many other "heart balm" victims of the past; his attorneys put their noses to the ground like relentless hunting dogs and followed Miss Garcia's tail back to her childhood, with surprising results.

Peggy, dressed in her best courtroom costume and looking as dewy and innocent as the art of street makeup permits, informed the jury that she became acquainted with Rubinoff when she guarded hats and wraps in the Cotton club, and that after a few meetings he invited her to visit him in his apartment at 6 West 59th street—"to see his etchings." Instead of masterpieces by Whistler and Meryon, however, he showed her his violin—a Stradivarius which is insured for $100,000 and bears the jeweled emblem of the ancient family of Rubinoff, former barbers and launderers in the Polish city of Grodno, upon its tailpiece. Furthermore, he played this classic instrument for her, sawing out with radio program fervor his favorite number, "Play, Gypsies, Play," from Kalman's operetta, "Countess Maritza." This private concert lasted until early in the morning.

Not long afterward, she testified, Rubinoff enticed her into making an expedition to Philadelphia, where he was her host in a hotel suite. ("Why not? We are just as good as married," were the words, according to Peggy, with which Rubinoff urged this adventure.) There the violinist wore lavender pajamas and spoke of etchings again; and there in his room Peggy fell asleep in the gray dawn with one eye open. Entered then, as cynical intruders upon the idyllic scene, Herman Rubinoff, brother of the defendant; also Philip Rubinstein, another brother, and Bernice Strangler, a secretary. Said Herman:

"How pretty she looks even when she is asleep!"

Said Miss Strangler:

"This will not be so good if the radio public hears about it. Let's get her out of here."

So they all went out and had breakfast together at the Automat.

Miss Garcia also testified that Rubinoff gave her as tokens of his esteem a gold watch with a $65 price tag attached and his photograph, autographed, "To Peggy, a wonderful girl." But his affection cooled rapidly. Several months later, meeting him by chance on Broadway, she reproached him for having absented himself from her company and was answered coldly. Then, according to her story, she asked him:

"Doesn't it interest you to know that I am going to have a baby?"

Apparently it didn't, for he walked away. She did not become a mother.

Rubinoff's lawyers immediately began to bear down upon the point that in their opinion the charge of seduction was contradicted by Peggy's past. Embarrassing questions were asked of her and denied. A tall, sleek, wasp-waisted young man named Armand Rolando was brought into the courtroom.

Q.—Do you know anyone named Armand Rolando? A.—No.

Q.—Do you remember living with Armand Rolando at 51 West 48th street late in December, 1932, or early in 1933? A.—I do not. I don't remember ever knowing such a man.

But when Rolando was pointed out to her she said:

"Yes, I know him. He used to hang around a dance hall where I worked."

Q.—Did you ever tell him that you were going out with Rubinoff and were going to clip him? A.—I most certainly did not.

Then the defense proceeded to show that Peggy had married after her alleged affair with Rubinoff. She wept and begged the judge to keep her husband's name out of the case, but it was presently established that she was the wife of one Michael La Rocca, a salesman for a granite firm.

Then the unveiling of Peggy's past came to its grand climax. The defense announced that she had been married in Roanoke, Va., in 1925, when she was 12 years old. She denied this furiously; attorneys for both sides of the case hurried to the scene of her childhood, and in a few days an incident of "Tobacco Road" atmosphere was revealed. The county clerk's records at Roanoke proved that on March 6, 1925, Pauline Micheline Taylor had been married to Taylor Vance Guinn, a taxi driver; that an application for a divorce had been filed on Sept. 20, 1925, and had apparently been dropped, for there was no entry regarding a decree. Her father, aged 64, employed as a water carrier by the WPA, confirmed this juvenile marriage.

Faced with these findings and warned against perjury, Peggy finally admitted that she had been a "Tobacco Road" bride. She had run away from her father's cabin in Roanoke to her mother's home in Newport News; her father had brought her back to put her to work in the cotton mills; and that one day, when she was weeping over the bitterness of her lot, a man stopped her in the street and asked what the trouble was. She told him, and he said that it would be easy to free herself from parental control by getting married. So she toddled along with this fellow and within an hour or two had promised to love, honor, and obey him. A notation on the marriage license reads: "The girl and her brother, John Taylor, both swore as to her age." This "brother," Peggy stated, was a fraud—a friend of the taxi driver's picked up on the way to the courthouse.

But instead of finding a new freedom as a child wife she had walked into a trap. This taxi driver was apparently a pander of the most loathsome type, for Peggy told the court:

"He wanted me to stay at disreputable hotels and houses of ill fame and become a prostitute. I refused, and he beat me. In a few days I ran away from him. We never lived together as husband and wife."

Nevertheless the defense produced testimony of cohabitation and Peggy's claim of physical innocence until she met Rubinoff was discredited.

After the "Tobacco Road" phase of her story had been aired, Peggy's current husband, Michael La Rocca, came roaring into the story with complaints that she had deceived him about her past life. He told the world that he was through with her forever. Whereupon his first wife, Mrs. Kathleen Murray La Rocca, with three children, swore out warrants against him and Peggy, charging bigamy.

• • •

Peggy's lawyer wanted to withdraw from the case; Peggy said she was ready to drop it; and the judge, who had frequently warned her about the gravity of witness stand lies, threw it out of court. Moreover, he turned the records over to the district attorney to be examined for possible extortion. The next day Peggy and her husband were in jail on the bigamy charge and seeking $2,500 bail.

Marriage License

Virginia Roanoke County to-wit:

(Associated Press photo.)
It came to light during the hearing of her breach of promise case—the marriage license issued in 1925 to Peggy and Taylor V. Guinn.

Unpretentious is the Virginia home in which Peggy was born, upon the porch of which she poses with three Negro boys.

David Rubinoff's reputation as a radio celebrity may be illustrated by an anecdote that is current in the profession, especially around Radio City, New York. Jascha Heifetz, the violin virtuoso of international reputation, seeking the studios of the National Broadcasting company with his fiddle case under his arm, innocently attempted to enter one of the public elevators. He was told by the elevator man that musicians carrying instruments were not permitted to ride in his car; such was the rule of the building management.

The Case of Garcia Vs. Rubinoff

"But I am Heifetz," the eminent artist protested, expecting to be shown some consideration.

"It wouldn't make any difference if you were Rubinoff," the elevator man answered. "You'd have to take the other elevator."

Rubinoff's career began as a boy street musician in Grodno, then in Russian, now in Polish, territory. He played the balalaika, and soldiers of the garrison would toss him an occasional copper. His father planned to apprentice him to a barber, but his mother, sympathetic toward his musical ambitions, took in extra bundles of laundry and worked overtime for six months in order to buy him a violin—the cheapest kind of instrument, costing three and a half rubles. He scraped away at it in his basement room, trying to teach himself, until a humble musician named Max Gottfried volunteered to give him lessons. David's sister Rose made and mended clothes for the Gottfried children in order to square the account.

Peggy testified on witness stand that Rubinoff asked her to marry him.

The boy progressed rapidly. Presently he had secured a place in the garrison band and had won a scholarship in the Warsaw music conservatory. When he was 13 years old the family emigrated to the United States, and as a farewell gift Maestro Gottfried presented his pupil with his own much-treasured violin — a Klotz, valued at $500. Rubinoff's youthful progress as a musician in this country was accomplished with this instrument, which he used until he was well advanced in his profession. It is now in use by his nephew.

The family settled in Pittsburgh, and there young Rubinoff had his first experience as an orchestra leader, directing a group of 10-year-old boys. A few years later he organized a dance band for a professional tour. This carried him to Minneapolis, where he settled, earning his living as a musician and studying diligently between jobs. Improvement in his financial condition enabled him to buy a Guadignini violin, a virtuoso's instrument, on the instalment plan.

His career as a feature in the motion picture theaters started with a tour of the Loew circuit. His popularity took him to Broadway, where his audience appeal was signalized by the words "Rubinoff and His Violin" in electric lights over the entrance to the Capital theater. He then became the musical director of the Paramount theater and remained there for five years.

He made his radio debut in 1931, with Rudy Vallee as his introducer, and transferred his musical affections from the Guadignini to his present Stradivarius.

Two or three years ago he entered the concert field as soloist and guest conductor with various symphony orchestras of the popular type. Last summer he appeared with the Chicago Philharmonic orchestra at a free concert in Grant park. A vast audience estimated at 100,000 heard him.

Edward Barry, music critic of The Tribune, wrote on that occasion:

"Rubinoff knows how to charge his strings with such power that they seem about to snap under the pressure, not of his bow but of the emotional drive behind it. He knows, too, how intoxicating a rhythmic fillip you can give to a tune by a moment's suspense at its beginning and a gradual accelerando during its course. . . . As a conductor he is a master of the arts of pantomime and grimace."

When asked to analyze Rubinoff's technique as a violinist and to explain his appeal to the masses Mr. Barry added this comment:

"Basically he has a good technique and a canny grasp of the musical and emotional effects of which his instrument is capable. His playing is characterized by excessive use of a few devices which are legitimate enough but which are customarily employed by other fiddlers only for contrast and special effects. These devices are:

"First, extreme richness and voluptuousness of tone—not a pure, classical tone, but feverish and vivid.

"Second, use of rhythmic suspense in pauses before launching into a melody and sensual lingerings over a phrase, and effects of extreme piquancy, such as an exaggerated pizzicato and extreme delicacy of high notes on the E string.

"In brief, everything in Rubinoff's playing is exaggerated—effects of softness, rhythmic pulses, roundness of tone. He always strives to dramatize the music and to make the obvious emotional states in which he deals seem tremendously important."

She Wanted to Be Governor

Gail Patrick poses in Hollywood for The Tribune's new color camera.

But "Panther Woman" Contest Started Gail Patrick on Film Career

By MAE TINEE

"Wagon wheels, wagon wheels!
Keep on rollin', wagon wheels!"

BACK in 1934—Oct. 18, to be exact—a "western" called "Wagon Wheels" came to town.

It was a good "western," featuring Randolph Scott and a girl named Gail Patrick.

She was a slim, dark girl with a lovely face and voice and an arresting personality. A girl who reminded me of—whom? For the life of me I couldn't think of the name of the woman she so much resembled—though I could see her plain as day with my mind's eye. A star of silent pictures she had been. . . .

"What other actress DOES Gail Patrick remind me of?" I besought readers in the review of the picture. "Her resemblance to someone whose name persistently escapes me is driving me nuts. . . . Help!"

Help was immediately forthcoming from all sorts of quarters. But the first letter I received essaying to shed light was from none other than Gail Patrick herself.

"Could it be, I wonder, that it is Florence Vidor you are thinking of?" she asked.

Florence Vidor it was.

And Gail MUST be a lot like Florence, for everybody who wrote in offered Miss Vidor as the solution to my problem.

A "panther woman" contest, conducted by a major studio, proved Miss Patrick's "open sesame" to the movies.

She'd always liked pictures and been interested in screen players, but had never thought seriously about becoming one herself. The announcement of the contest intrigued her interest.

"You take swell pictures—why don't you enter the thing?" a friend suggested.

"Why not?" countered the lady, and forthwith got busy.

Within two weeks she was acclaimed the winner, and within two weeks she was winging her way to Hollywood.

Arriving, she competed in the "finals," winning a long-term contract with Paramount instead of the prize role in "Island of Lost Souls."

Now, you'd never think it to look at her, but this slender, soft-spoken southern girl once aspired not only to be a great lawyer BUT—to be elected governor of Alabama! She had been unusually successful in college, where she was graduated with a bachelor of arts degree.

She was captain of the girls' university basketball team, a member of the Delta Zeta sorority, and had been prominent in Campus theatricals.

In 1931 she was chosen for College Humor's hall of fame.

Miss Patrick's father hails from Ireland. Her mother is a southern woman. And she liked her name, Fitzpatrick, very much. But studio executives shook their heads over it.

"Too long!" they said.

So Margaret Fitzpatrick went into the silence and thought for a long time very, very hard. Finally she decided that she could get along without the Margaret and without the Fitz—but part with the Patrick she never would.

"Well, I guess we can use the Patrick if we can think up a catchy first name," said the bosses leniently.

"I always thought Gail was a pretty name," hesitantly suggested the little girl from 'way down south.

And so Gail it has been since that time.

While "Wagon Wheels" is the first picture in which Miss Patrick really, to my way of thinking, got over in a big way, she has had roles in a number of productions. Let's see—she was in: "If I Had a Million," "The Mysterious Rider," "Murders in the Zoo," "To the Last Man," "Pickup," "Gambling Ship," "Big Executive," "Mama Loves Papa," "Cradle Song," "Death Takes a Holiday," "Murder at the Vanities," "One Hour Late," "Rumba," "Mississippi," "Torch Bearers," "No More Ladies," "Big Broadcast of 1935."

"My Man Godfrey" and "The White Hunter" are her latest releases.

- Her real name is Margaret Fitzpatrick.
- She was born June 20, 1911, in Birmingham, Ala.
- She's 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs about 125 pounds, has black hair, brown eyes, and a dimple in her chin.
- Favorite dish is fried chicken and corn pone.
- Her only marriage occurred at midnight Dec. 16, 1936, in Tia Juana, Mexico. The lucky man is Robert Howard Cobb, president of a restaurant corporation in Hollywood.
- Her most successful role she considers was in "My Man Godfrey."
- She admires ex-King Edward and thinks the treatment which resulted in his exile "barbaric."

She was working on the picture "Love Trap" when that Mr. Robert Howard Cobb's importunities became irresistible, with the result that she took a run-out powder, leaving studio executives frantically searching for her.

Next thing they knew, down zoomed a plane with news from Tia Juana. Their wails were changed to the tune of "Here Comes the Bride." The last strains were still making the welkin ring, so to speak when—the bride DIDN'T arrive. Further dispatches stated that bride and groom had landed at San Diego—and disappeared.

Ain't love grand—and eccentric?

Speaking of airplanes, Miss Patrick is quite an air enthusiast. She studied aviation for a long time, but kept her activities along this line very dark until she had made a number of flights at the controls of an open monoplane. Then she announced proudly to her friends that she was trying for a pilot's license.

One of her hops was to Boulder dam, where, they tell us, she was the first woman ever allowed to go down in the cavernous tunnels. This feat is one the lady talks about with pride and joy.

You see, dam workers and merchantmen sailors have the same idea. They think it's unlucky to have a woman around. How Miss Patrick persuaded the hard-boiled gentlemen at the dam that she was no hoodoo she doesn't say. Anyhow, they did let her make the rounds of their tunnels.

This year the chambers of commerce of both Memphis, Tenn., and Little Rock, Ark., invited Miss Patrick to be guest of honor at their respective cotton carnivals. So away she flew.

Upon her arrival in Little Rock a member of her police escort, in response to her interested queries about the town, said:

"Wouldn't you like to make a little tour of the town in my side car?"

It being a little ahead of time for festivities, etc., Miss Patrick replied that she'd be delighted. AND started forth in high fettle.

But the side car ride was most impromptu, you see. When the authorities looked about, smiling, for their fair guest, lo! she had disappeared!

"Kidnaped!" somebody croaked. Frantic calls were issued on the police short wave—the while the lady and her blue-coated escort skimmed along the avenues.

During this vacation away from Hollywood Miss Patrick visited her home in Birmingham for the first time in three years. She tells with a break in her voice how her father, for the first time in those three years, unlocked the door of her room—in which he had turned the key when she left for the west.

Devoted to her family—Miss Patrick. She's putting her brother through a training school in San Francisco to qualify him for Annapolis. She lived in Hollywood with her mother till her marriage. Just couldn't persuade her father to leave his beloved Birmingham.

She believes the number nine exercises a special influence on her career—what with her signing contracts on the ninth of the month and having a 9R9 car license.

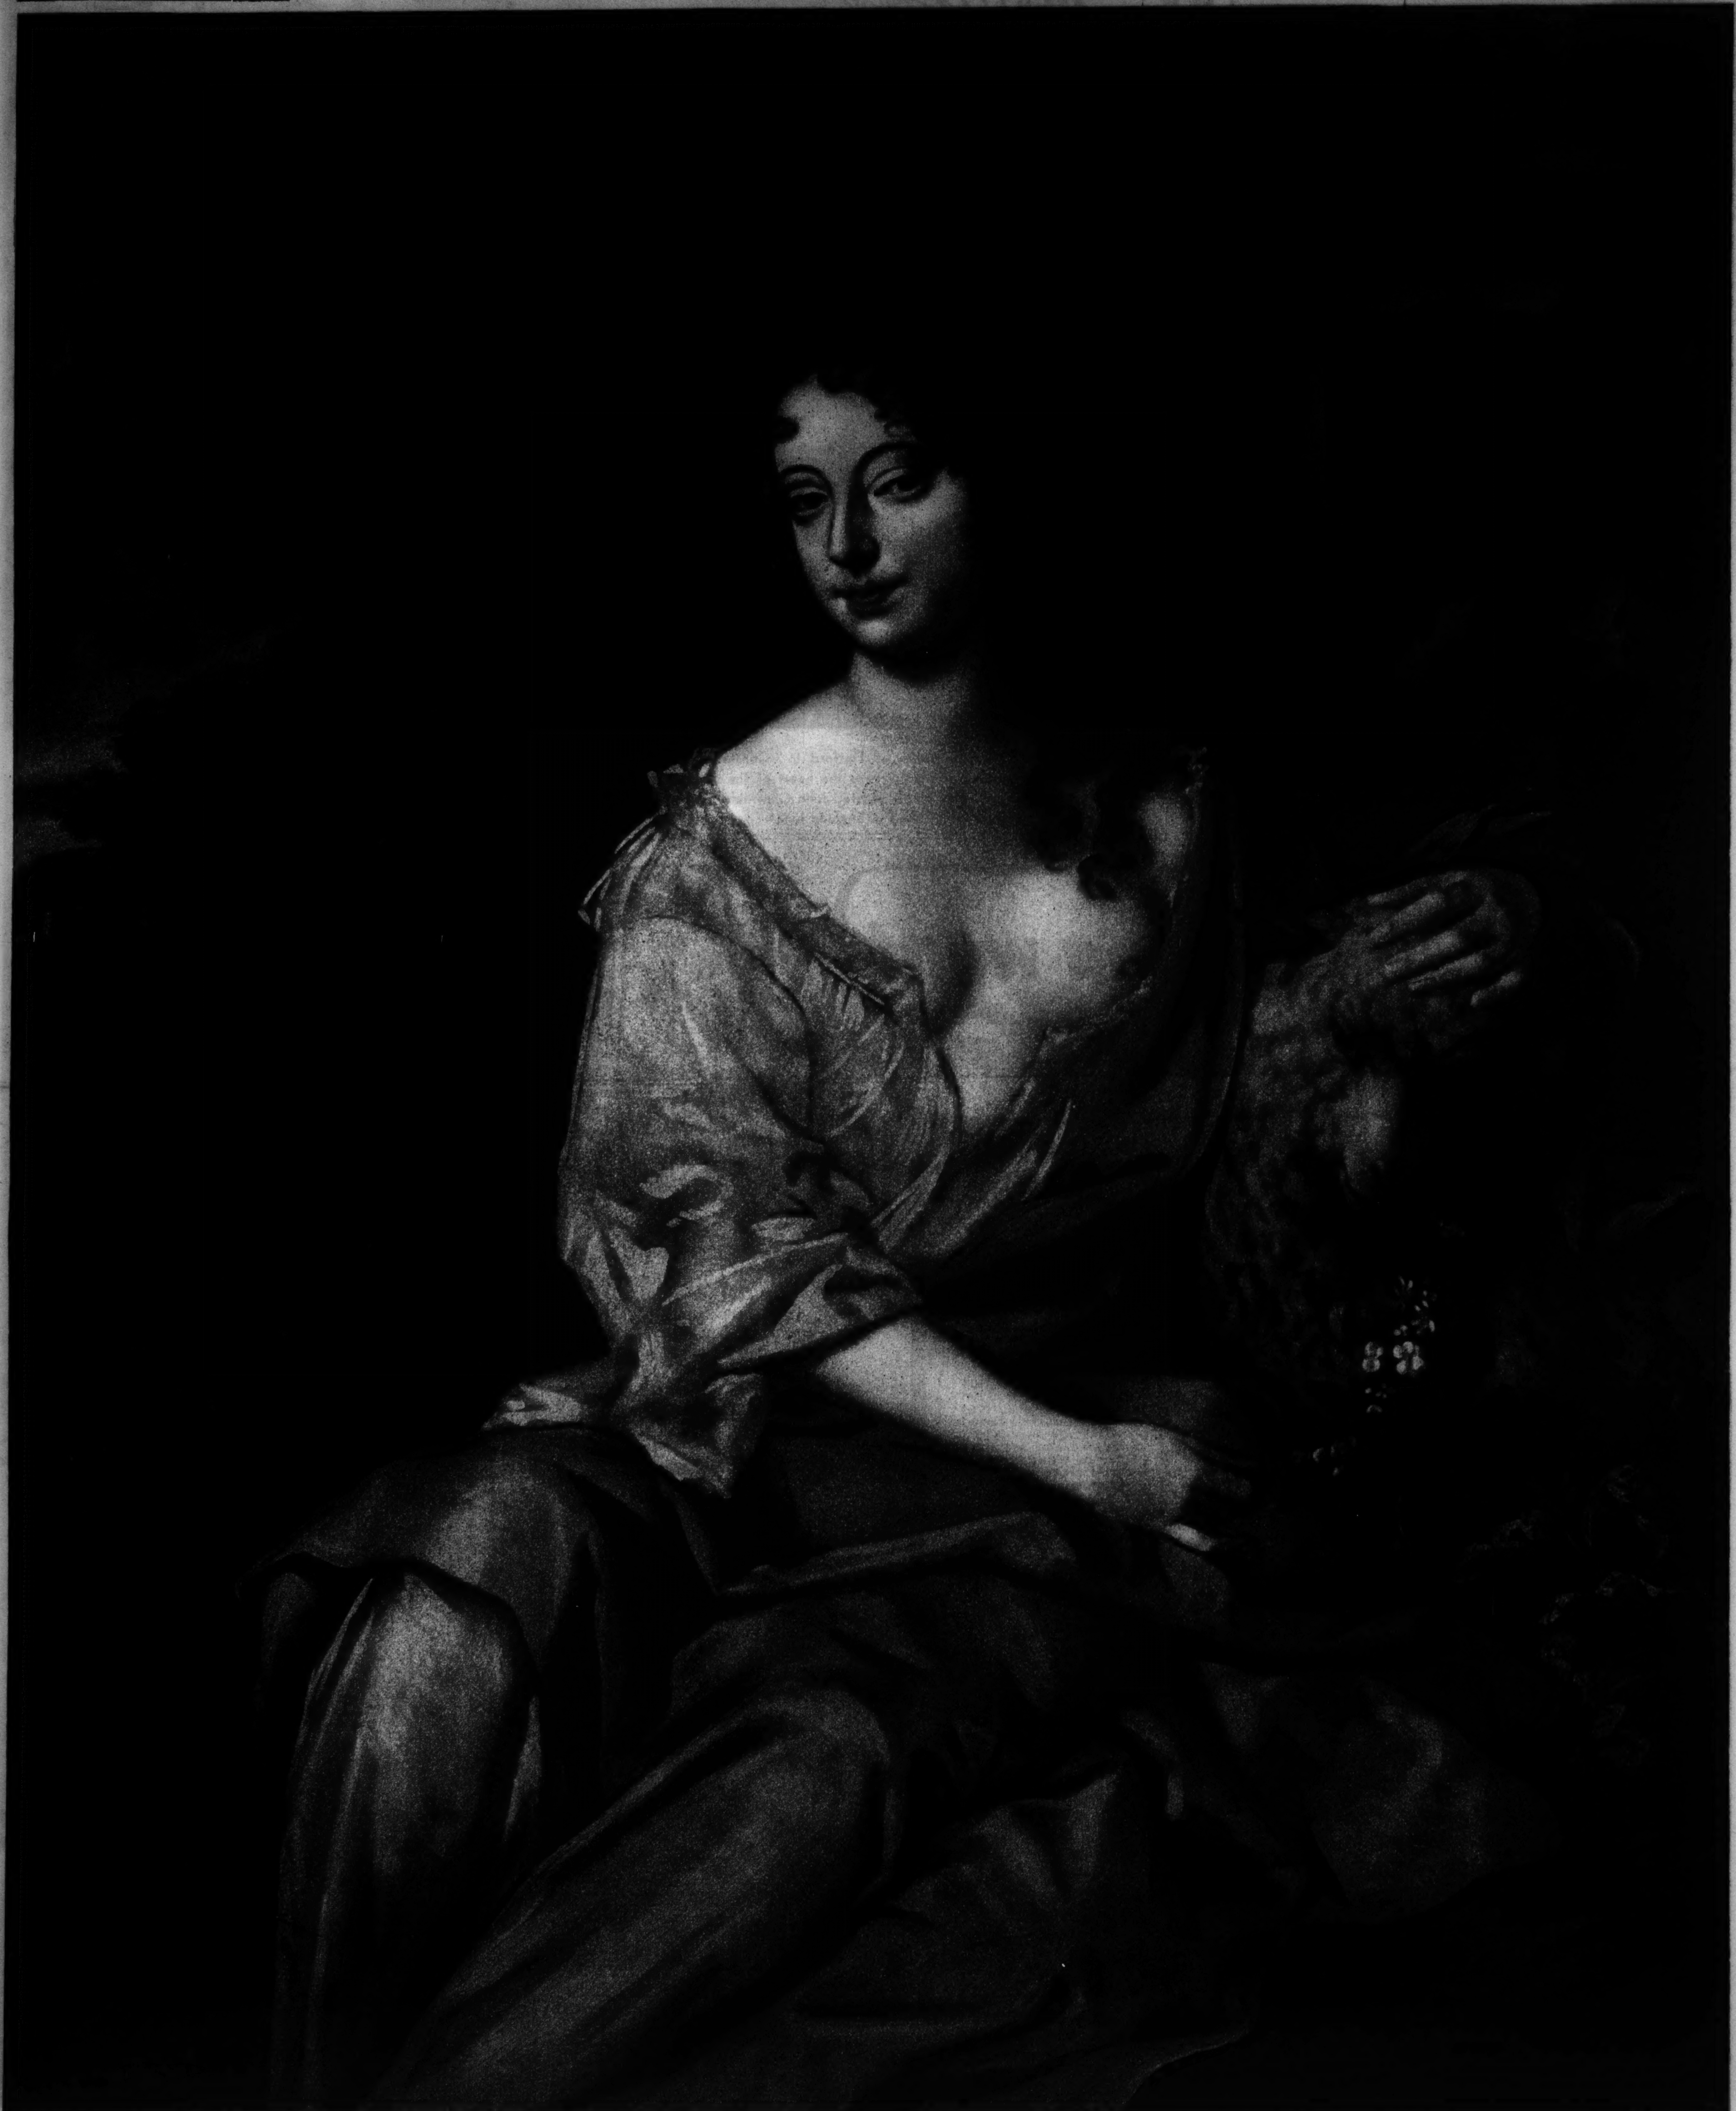
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

April 25, 1937



● Favorite of a king and idol of his people, the beautiful Nell Gwyn was born in 1651, reputedly in a London alley; sold oranges in the environs of Drury Lane theater; became an actress at 15; gave Charles II. two sons, one of whom became the duke of St. Albans. To the immortal diarist, Samuel Pepys, she was "pretty, witty Nell." This portrait is by Sir Peter Lely, state painter to Charles II., famous for the collection of portraits of women of the court known as "The Beauties."

IN THE GRAPHIC SECTION OF THIS ISSUE BEGINS A ROMANTIC STORY OF NELL GWYN, BY LOUISE BARGELT

COPIES OF THIS PAINTING, IN THE SIZE AND COLORS SHOWN AND FRAMED UNDER GLASS, CAN BE OBTAINED AT THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE PUBLIC SERVICE OFFICES, TRIBUNE TOWER AND 1 SOUTH DEARBORN STREET. PRICE: EACH, $1.00; BY PREPAID EXPRESS, $1.50. (DO NOT SEND COIN OR CURRENCY.)

UNSOPHISTICATED is this English scene at Flatford, in "Constable's country," with its ancient thatched cottage and old wooden bridge. This is the heart of the district made famous by and known by the name of the great landscape painter, John Constable, the centenary of whose death was commemorated in England a few days ago.

Be VITAL if you want to be ALLURING!

Says LOVELY MARSHA HUNT

BRILLIANT YOUNG PARAMOUNT ACTRESS

GIRLS! LET THE WONDER BREAD "VITALITY PLAN" HELP YOU REGAIN YOUR RADIANT CHARM!

OH, DEAR—BOB WANTS ME TO GO TEA-DANCING WITH HIM...AND I JUST HAVEN'T THE PEP! WISH I WERE LIKE YOU.
CHEER UP, ALICE—I USED TO TIRE QUICKLY TOO—UNTIL I LEARNED ABOUT THE WONDER BREAD VITALITY PLAN.
THAT SOUNDS FINE — BUT I'VE TRIED ALL KINDS OF THOSE SPECIAL FOODS—NO GOOD!
WHO SAID ANYTHING ABOUT SPECIAL FOODS? THIS PLAN IS DIFFERENT! YOU EAT THE FOODS YOU LIKE BUT CUT DOWN ON THE HEAVY, RICH FOODS THAT MAKE YOU DULL AND SLOW YOU DOWN... AND INSTEAD EAT 2 SLICES OF WONDER BREAD WITH EVERY MEAL....
SO THAT'S HOW YOU GOT BACK YOUR VITALITY!
YOU BET! YOU SEE, WONDER BREAD GIVES YOU ENERGY YOU NEED... AND IT'S SLO-BAKED TO HELP YOU GET THIS ENERGY MORE QUICKLY AND COMPLETELY...
THAT SOUNDS SWELL! I'M GOING TO START RIGHT AWAY. AND I'M GOING TO GET MY YOUNGER BROTHER ON IT, TOO.
GOOD! YOU'LL SEE WHAT A DIFFERENCE IT MAKES. AND BELIEVE ME, IT'S JUST WHAT MOTHER SAYS THE YOUNGSTERS NEED TO HELP THEM GROW STRONG AND STURDY TOO!

MARSHA HUNT

Vivid little Paramount actress. Heed the advice she gives: "Nobody likes dull, uninteresting people. You must be vital, radiantly charming. That's what makes you alluring, exciting, sought-after!"

55,000 out of 65,000 women, actually 84 out of every 100, who compared Wonder Bread with other breads in this famous 1-2-3 store test, agreed: WONDER BREAD IS BEST!

AND I'M ONE OF THAT 55,000! I COMPARED WONDER BREAD WITH OTHER KINDS——AND WONDER BREAD WON HANDS DOWN, THERE'S NO OTHER BREAD LIKE IT!

I COULD SEE AND FEEL THE DIFFERENCE

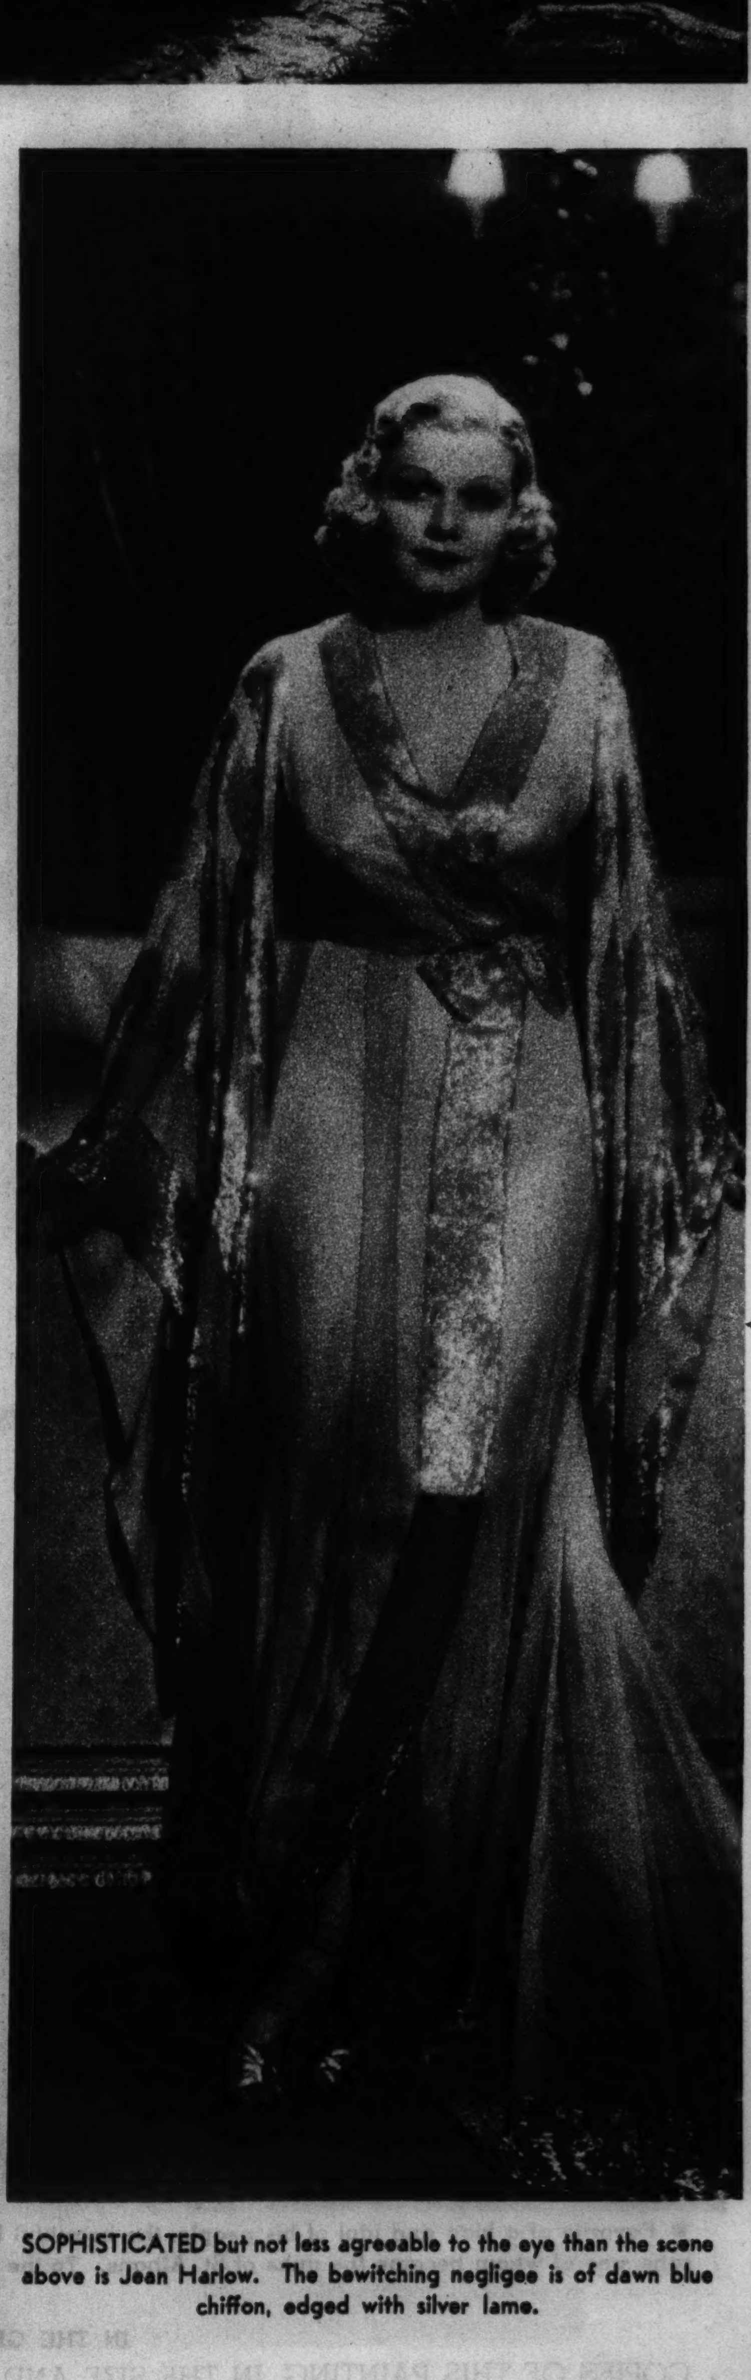
Note the tender crust, the pure, white color, the smooth, even texture. Then—rub your fingers over a slice. Note how smooth, slightly moist it is . . . close-knit for easy spreading. No holes, lumps or imperfections.

I COULD SMELL THE DIFFERENCE

Hold a slice of Wonder Bread close to your nose. And note that appetizing "wheaty" fragrance . . . so fresh and clean. Your nose, too, can tell you the remarkable difference between Wonder Bread and any other kind.

I COULD TASTE THE DIFFERENCE

Then—taste a bite of Wonder Bread slowly. Let it linger in your mouth . . . so that you get all its delicious full-flavored goodness. The Wonder Bakers have spent a fortune to bring you this incomparable slo-baked flavor.



SOPHISTICATED but not less agreeable to the eye than the scene above is Jean Harlow. The bewitching negligee is of dawn blue chiffon, edged with silver lame.

CORNS COME BACK BIGGER-UGLIER UNLESS REMOVED ROOT* AND ALL

PARING corns at home is not only old-fashioned and ineffective, it is actually dangerous. It means the risk of infection—even blood-poisoning and it won't get rid of the corn. For corns come back bigger, uglier, more painful than ever unless removed Root and All.

Do like thousands who have ended their corn for good with the new, easy, double-action Blue-Jay method. Blue-Jay stops the pain instantly by removing pressure, then in 3 days, the corn lifts out Root and All. (Exceptionally stubborn cases may require a second application.)

The Blue-Jay method is the easiest, surest, safest! Blue-Jay is a tiny medicated plaster, held snugly in place by Wet-Pruf adhesive. Can't stick to stockings. Easy to use. Doesn't make shoes tight. Get Blue-Jay today and end dangerous home methods. 25c for 6 at all druggists.

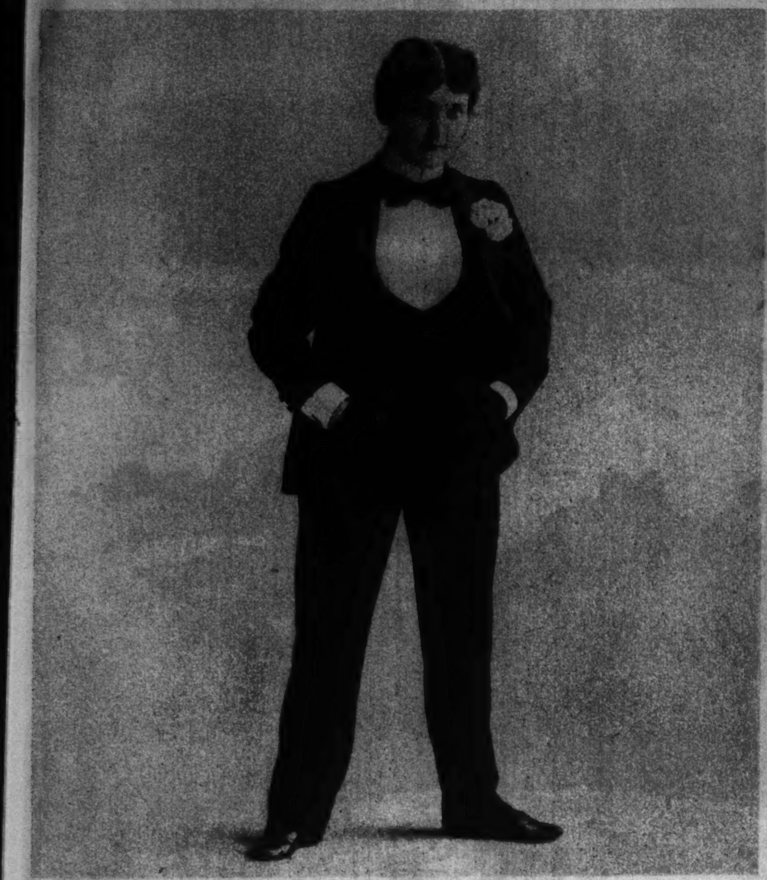
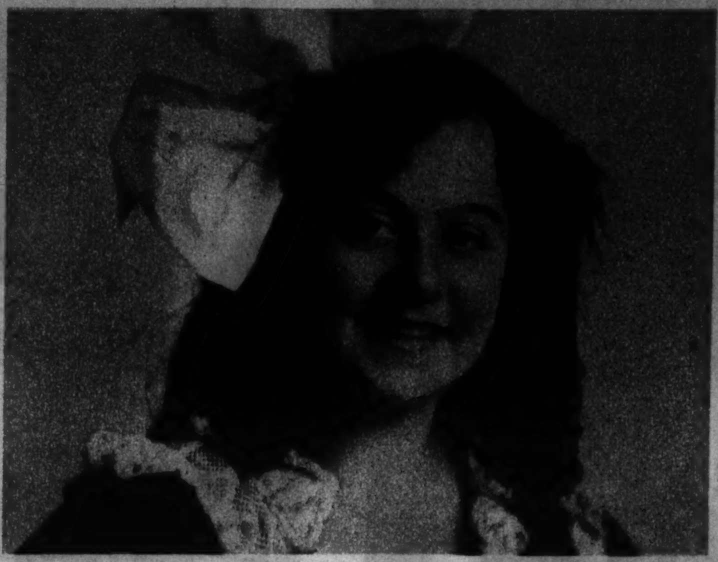
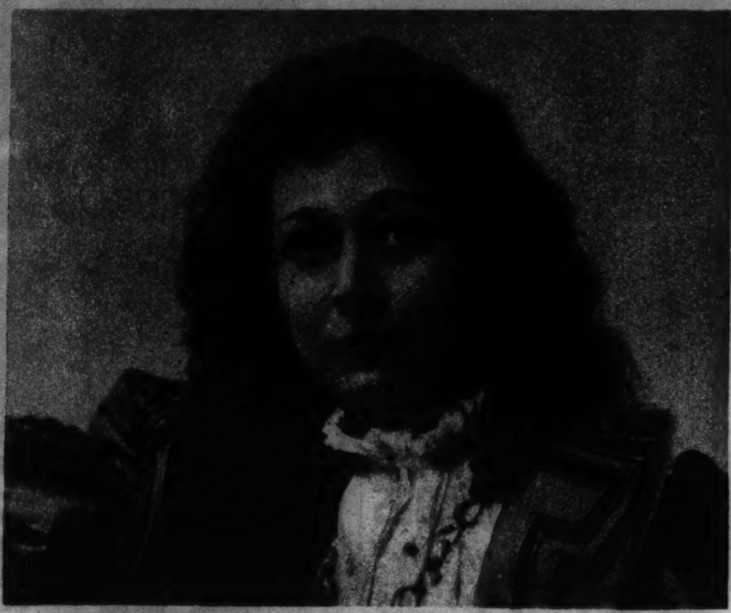
They Would Have Been Roto Pictures In Their Day



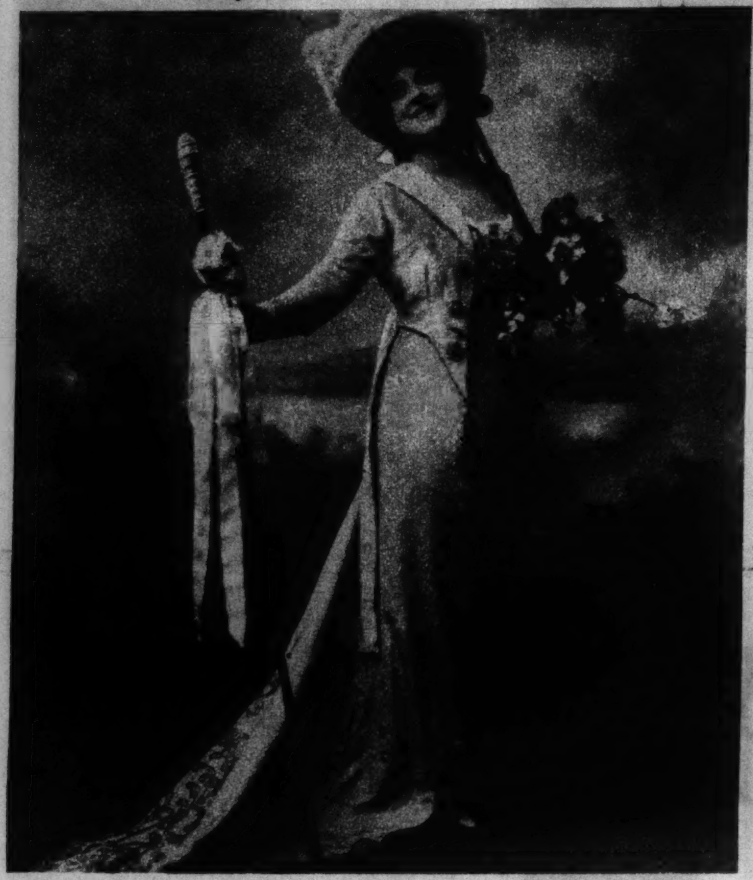
MADGE LESSING came from England in 1894 to appear in a stage frolic called "The Passing Show" at the Casino theater, New York. "In Gay New York," "Jack and the Beanstalk," and "The Whirl of the Town" were other successful American productions in which she was a favorite. She made her London debut in 1900 in an extravaganza. Three years later she returned to the American stage to tour in "Erminie" with Francis Wilson and with De Wolf Hopper in "Wang." In 1908 she was prominent in an English company which gave the American musical comedy, "The Prince of Pilsen," in Paris.



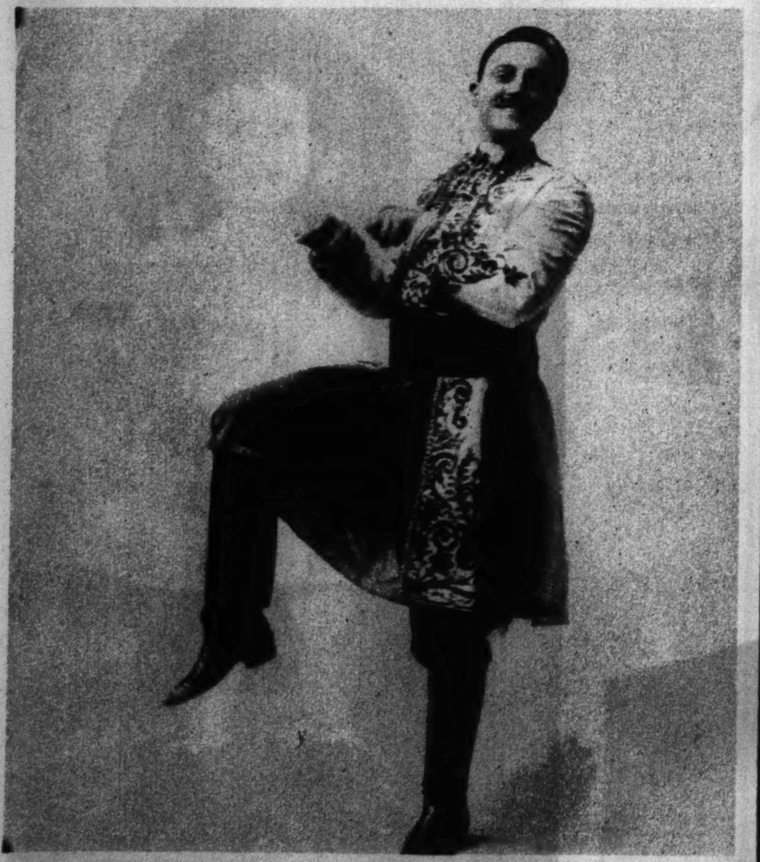
ANNA LAUGHLIN, who recently committed suicide at the age of 52, was a popular child actress and soubrette of the American stage from 1892, when she made her debut as Little Eva in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," to 1908, when she was in a famous Broadway revue called "The Top O' the World." Chicago remembers her best in the role of Dorothy in "The Wizard of Oz," in 1902. She married Dwight Van Monroe, a New York jeweler, in 1904. Her daughter, Lucy Monroe, who resembled her strikingly, also became a singing actress; she appeared in the Selwyn theater, Chicago, in "The Little Show" in 1930.



LULU GLASER was a singing comedienne of renown in the comic operas of thirty and forty years ago, and during the first decade of this century she was a star, easily remembered from "Dolly Vardon," "The Madcap Princess," "Miss Dolly Dollars," and "Lola from Berlin." She made her debut in 1892, when she was 18 years old, as successor to Marie Jansen in "The Lion Tamer," with Francis Wilson. She also appeared with Wilson in a revival of "Erminie" and in his production of an operetta based on "Cyrano de Bergerac."



ANNA FITZIU, eminent in grand opera for many years, now active in Chicago musical circles, was formerly Anna Fitzhugh of 1212 North State street and the chorus of "The Wizard of Oz." After that famous entertainment had run its three year course on tour, she devoted herself assiduously to vocal studies under the best masters, in this country and abroad; and when she appeared before the footlights again it was before a gala opera audience, with an Italianized or Frenchified spelling of her name. She was prominent in the Chicago Opera company during the brilliant regimes of Campanini and Mary Garden.



GEORGE DAMEREL, a Chicagoan for many years, came out of the chorus of "The Wizard of Oz," in 1902, to make a name for himself in musical comedy and comic opera. Five years later he was chosen for the role of Prince Danilo in the Chicago production of "The Merry Widow." This was the greatest comic opera part of the period, and, while Donald Brian sang and danced it for a year in New York, Damerel was equaling his fame in Chicago. He retired from stage about twenty years ago.

STOP PAIN-REMOVE CORNS

To merely remove corns and at the same time not remove the cause—shoe friction and pressure—can give you only temporary relief at best. Soon they come back, usually bigger, more tormenting than ever.

Insist on Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads and you need never be troubled by corns. The instant you apply them, pain vanishes, cause stops. Put these soothing, cushioning pads on red, irritated toes caused by new or tight shoes, and you'll stop corns before they can develop and have no more discomfort.

Use them with the separate Medicated Disks included in every box, and your corns or callouses lift out!

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads are made in special sizes for Corns, Callouses, Bunions and Soft Corns between toes. Cost but a trifle. Sold everywhere.

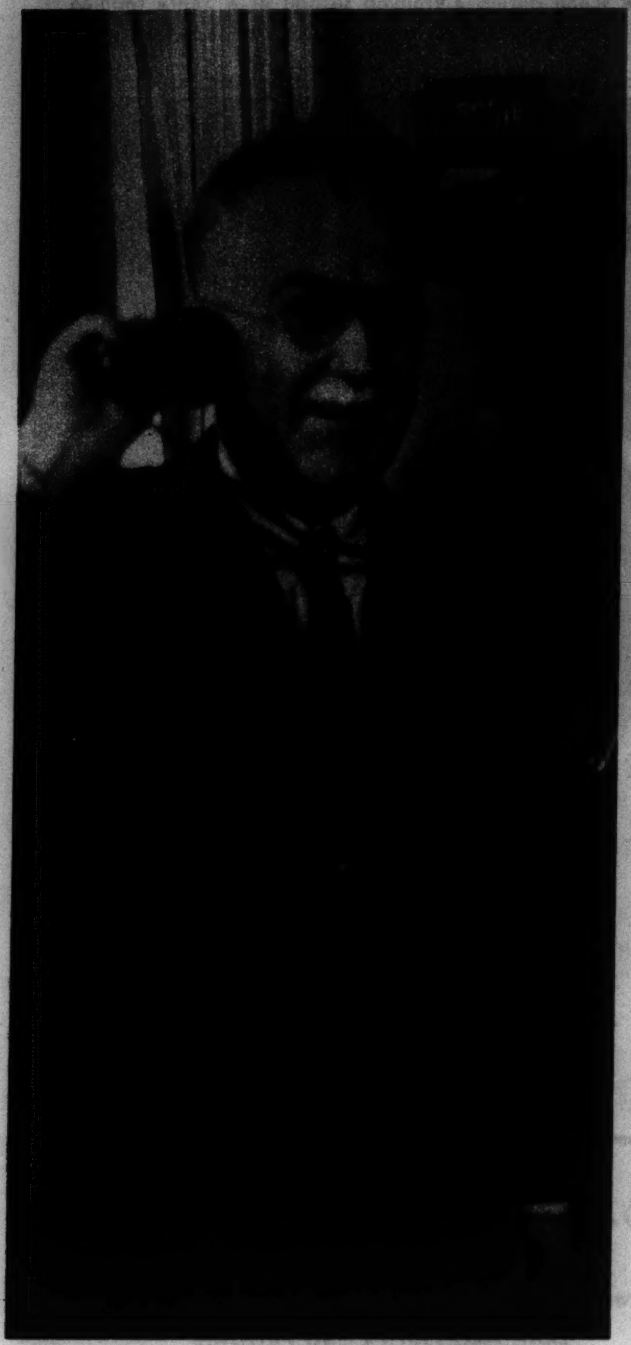
The Quints: They Get a Phone Call



World copyright: 1937: NEA Service, Inc.

1 EVERY DAY, no matter where he is, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe manages to communicate with his famous charges, the Dionne quintuplets, at their nursery at Callander, Ont. On this old fashioned wall phone he rings and awaits a connection.

2 ON THE OTHER END OF THE LINE the quints await Dr. Dafoe's call, with foreknowledge that it is coming through. Left to right: Marie, Yvonne, Emilie, Annette, Cecile. Behind them, Nurse Molly O'Shaugnessy.

3 IT'S EMILIE who answers when the phone rings, vastly amused at picking up the receiver upside down. The others, left to right: Marie, Yvonne, Annette, Cecile.

4 ALLO! Emilie begins the conversation, and continues it . . . and continues it . . . until something like bored restiveness appears in her sisters. At left, Marie: at right, Yvonne and Cecile.

5 YES, IT'S STILL EMILIE, talking on, and on, and on, until you'd think it one of those party lines down on the farm. But this is the end; Cecile puts a finger on the carriage to cut the ordeal short unless Emilie yields. She yields.

6 "I'M NOT FEELING SO GOOD TODAY, thank you, doctor; it must be something I ate." Whether this was Yvonne's message cannot be determined; but her mien and that of Yvonne, together with the position of Yvonne's hand, lend color to the idea.

7 IT WAS HER TURN, thought Annette, she and Marie being the last ones to talk. But when she got there, the phone carriage was bare; and the conversationalist was Marie.

LADY URSULA MANNERS

TRAIN BEARERS FOR QUEEN ELIZABETH will be these young women of the British aristocracy, three of six invited to officiate thus at the coronation. Lady Iris Mountbatten, 17 years old, is the daughter of the marquis and marchioness of Carisbrooke. Lady Elizabeth Paget, 20 years old, is the daughter of the marquis and marchioness of Anglesey. Lady Ursula Manners, 20 years old, is the elder daughter of the duke and duchess of Rutland.

PICKING UP SAILORS OUT OF THE SEA because rough water made it impossible to come alongside the sinking English freighter Standale, lifeboat crews from the British cruise liner Vandyck rescued captain and crew. Men of the Standale leaped into the sea; the last boatload is here being rowed away from the doomed ship.

ALWAYS FELT RUN DOWN

A TRUE EXPERIENCE based on a letter from Mr. A. G. of New Bedford, Mass.

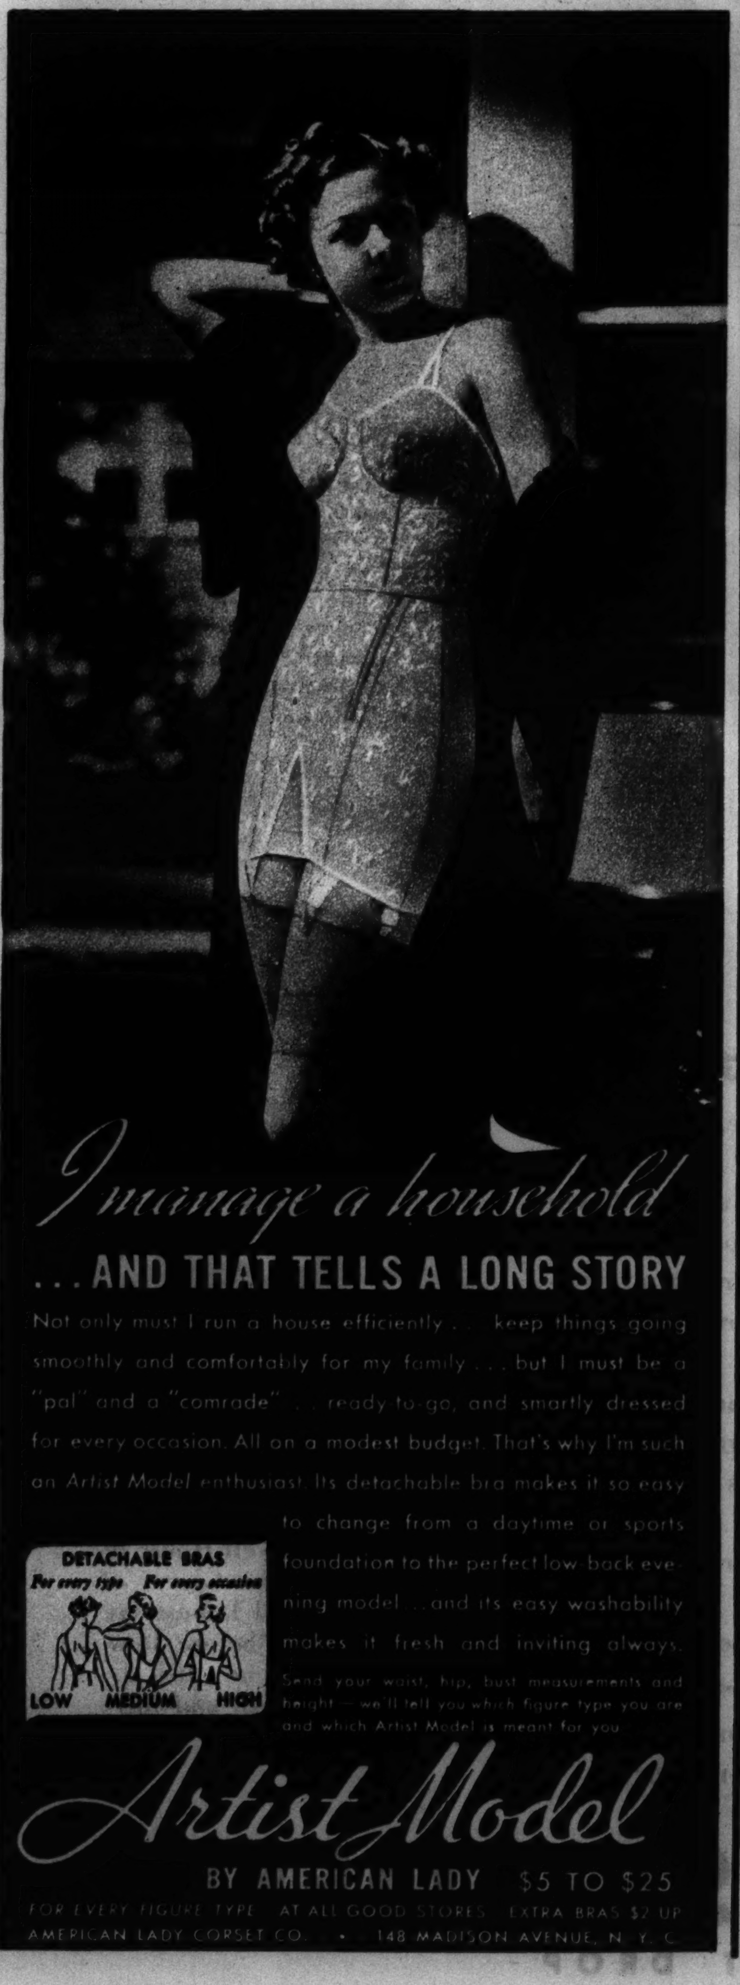
GUESS THAT'S WHY I FEEL SO ROTTEN, CHIEF.
AL, WHENEVER I FEEL CONSTIPATED, I KNOW IT'S TIME TO ENO-IZE. I ALWAYS TAKE ENO WHEN I HAVE THAT "TIRED FEELING", A HEADACHE, OR A COLD DUE TO CONSTIPATION.

HOW ENO HELPS YOU

Eno clears the digestive tract by its gentle flushing action—and Eno helps neutralize the hyper-acid condition that often accompanies constipation. Because of its alkalizing-laxative action, Eno gives quick relief not only from constipation itself, but from that "tired feeling," headaches, colds, and other conditions caused by constipation.

LATER
YOU'VE BEEN DOING A GREAT JOB LATELY, AL!
CHIEF, I'VE FOUND THAT A LITTLE ENO REGULARLY IN THE MORNING HELPS TO KEEP ME FEELING FIT! AND SAY—ENO TASTES GREAT!
ENO

YOU'LL LIKE ENO the pleasant-tasting alkalizing laxative



I manage a household

...AND THAT TELLS A LONG STORY

Not only must I run a house efficiently . . . keep things going smoothly and comfortably for my family . . . but I must be a "pal" and a "comrade" . . . ready-to-go, and smartly dressed for every occasion. All on a modest budget. That's why I'm such an Artist Model enthusiast. Its detachable bra makes it so easy to change from a daytime or sports foundation to the perfect low-back evening model . . . and its easy washability makes it fresh and inviting always.

Send your waist, hip, bust measurements and height — we'll tell you which figure type you are and which Artist Model is meant for you.

ONLY LIBBY'S BABY FOODS ARE DOUBLE SAFE

1 . . . SAFER because they digest far more easily than the finest strained foods—they're prepared by special homogenization.

2 . . . SAFER because they give baby a more varied diet every day—each Libby tin contains three foods instead of one.

Special displays of Libby's Baby Foods at your grocer's—National Baby Week, May 3.

- Chubby little cherub, isn't he! One of the reasons is the doctor's starting him on Libby's Baby Foods when he was only three months old!
- Vegetables, you see, contain precious minerals—especially iron—that wee babies need for growth and development. And Libby's specially homogenized vegetables digest so easily that there's almost no chance of upsets.
- Libby's Baby Foods are easier for baby's delicate digestive system to handle than the finest strained foods. Libby's process of special homogenization breaks up the thousands of tough-walled food cells in vegetables, fruits, cereal and soup—the finest straining or sieving can not do this.

- All nourishment is released for easy digestion. And Libby's Baby Foods digest more completely, too, so baby gets more nourishment from the same amount of food.
- See your doctor regularly about your baby's diet . . . and get Libby's double-safe Baby Foods from your grocer.

Three Nourishing Foods in Every Tin

Each tin of Libby's Baby Foods contains three foods all blended together—instead of one! It's a wonderful improvement! These special combinations of Libby's give baby a better balance of minerals and vitamins than single foods. There are six Libby combinations—all ready to warm and serve. Ask for them by number:

No. 1 Peas, beets, asparagus tips
No. 2 Tomatoes, pumpkin, string beans
No. 3 Carrots, spinach, peas
No. 4 Cereal combination—whole milk, whole wheat, soy bean meal
No. 5 Prunes, pineapple juice, lemon juice
No. 6 Soup—vegetables, chicken livers, barley

Swings you into high...this FRIENDLY STIMULATION

"A REAL 'FRESHENER-UPPER'!" SAYS PAUL HAAKON, famous dancer now starring in the Broadway hit, "The Show Is On" . . . "that's what Maxwell House Coffee is to me! Its friendly stimulation picks you up . . . drives away that tired feeling . . . puts you on 'top' in great shape!"

"GUESS? NOT ME!" SAYS CAROLYN ROBERTS, ranking tennis star. "I know that the coffee I buy just couldn't be anything but really and truly fresh . . . because I buy Maxwell House in a can you open with a key!" Yes—you never guess with Maxwell House. It is one coffee that always comes to you strictly roaster-fresh.

"I'VE BEEN AROUND!" SAYS CHARLES WRIGHT, one of New York's outstanding entertainers. "And I've tasted plenty of coffees in my time . . . but I've got to hand it to the Maxwell House people. They sure make the finest coffee I've ever known!" It takes the world's choicest coffees, blended to perfection, to bring you the incomparable flavor of Maxwell House.

ARE YOU WASTING MONEY?

Next time you buy coffee, ask yourself this: "Am I paying money for something I don't get? Am I getting all the flavor, freshness and full-bodied coffee goodness I'm paying for?" Then remember—Maxwell House is one coffee that always gives you full value for your money!

For Maxwell House is packed in the super-vacuum, Vita-Fresh can—the only way science knows to always bring you coffee without loss of flavor . . . coffee as fresh and delicious as the hour it left the roaster! So, be sure you get what you pay for. Get a can of Maxwell House Coffee—tomorrow! Copyright, General Foods Corp., 1937
